Preface

After I completed my series of London Stage calendars for 1890–1959 (first published between 1976–93) I realized that a continuation of the series was beyond my single-handed capabilities and would require a group effort. To that end I contacted several scholars and managed to find a group of British researchers willing to tackle the 1960s, and a publishing contract was duly issued. However, after a few years, the project languished, and subsequently I endeavoured to find a replacement. There were a few expressions of interest but nothing materialized, and I dropped the idea. After several more years my publisher, Rowman and Littlefield, invited me to prepare a revised and expanded edition of the original series in a new format, and this was completed in 2014. Yet there still remained the significant gap in coverage for 1960–1980 (thereafter, from 1981 onwards, coverage has been provided by the London Theatre Record, renamed Theatre Record in 1990). I realized that, for various and sundry practical and geographical reasons, I would not be able to produce two more calendars on exactly the same lines as the original series. The explosion of fringe theatres and venues during that period increased the enormity of the task. However, what did seem possible was a modified version that, while eliminating some features of the original series, would serve as a useful resource based on online and published sources accessible to both me and potential users.

Thus I decided to focus on dramatic productions, essentially plays, but including musical plays, musicals, and revues. Omitted are operas, ballets, mime, puppet shows, improvisations, variety shows, music-hall productions, rehearsed readings, and outdoor shows (although I have made some exceptions). Wherever possible, details of performers and production personnel are included.

I compiled the initial outline of the calendar by surveying all the issues of the Stage located in that newspaper's archive, supplemented by information derived from Who's Who in the Theatre (previously this initial outline was derived by examining all the daily theatre advertisements in the Times and charting the pattern of performances for each production. That method also yielded a count of the total number of performances for each production; this feature has not been possible for this calendar). Thereafter, I filled out the entries with information derived from reviews of productions in numerous newspapers and weekly and monthly journals. The weakness of this method means that I could record only what those sources covered and reported; inevitably this has led to a degree of incompleteness and inaccuracy; for example, some exact performance dates were not given in my sources, and so some performance dates are prefaced by circa. Some users may find the lack of the total number of performances for a given production somewhat frustrating; however, it is worth noting that achieving long runs was generally, although not exclusively, the policy of the commercial West-End theatres. Many theatres, for example the Mermaid, the Arts, the Court, often staged productions for only a month or so; suburban theatres (such as the Richmond and the Wimbledon) offered weekly or fortnightly productions, many of which preceded or followed West-End production, as well as popular plays such as comedies, farces, and thrillers. Typically Christmas pantomimes were staged for up to two months. Almost necessarily fringe theatre productions were short lived. Many were staged at lunchtime or late night (beginning around 9:00 pm or later). One-act plays were particularly suited to these time slots and they also offered opportunities to fledgling dramatists as well as burgeoning production companies often with avant-garde social, sexual, or political agendas. The plethora of such productions often resulted in poor quality works and/or performances, judging by the criticisms levelled at them by reviewers or by poor audience attendance.

An additional problem I faced during the course of my work was that the Stage archive, to which I had subscribed, was withdrawn from public use shortly after my initial survey. As a substitute I turned to the Stage file in the online British Newspaper Archive (available by subscription). Unfortunately that file is missing at least ninety issues for 1960–1980; thus, users will find some references to cast lists and reviews in the Stage (derived from my initial survey) which cannot be located in the British Newspaper Archive. Lack of access to issues of Time Out which began publication in 1968 is another regrettable deficiency, and similarly Plays and Players.

As indicated above, it should be noted that the fringe theatre presented its own problems in terms of the sheer number of theatres and venues, many of which were ephemeral and which were not covered in the more mainstream press. Similarly, many of the more enduring suburban theatres tended to attract coverage only by local newspapers, some of which, fortunately, can be found in the British Newspaper Archive.

Nevertheless, I trust that the present effort will prove a useful starting point for those interested in this dynamic phase of the London theatre. I welcome additions, revisions, and corrections which can be incorporated in any future version of this calendar.

The above is not a comprehensive list of every venue in the London area but does include all the major central London theatres, a good sampling of suburban London theatres, as well as numerous fringe theatres and venues (the latter including pubs, restaurants, city parks, churches, and the like). Some venues were used transitorily and some proved ephemeral.

As the title of this work indicates, the calendar focuses on dramatic works, essentially plays, but includes musical plays, musicals, revues, and some pieces that generically are indeterminate. Generally I have omitted operas, ballets, mime, puppet shows, improvisations, variety shows, music-hall productions, rehearsed readings, outdoor shows (for example at Covent Garden Market); however, and perhaps capriciously, I have not hesitated to include some such items of particular interest.

For each production at the theatres selected, I have attempted to provide the following information: title of production, genre, number of acts, author, theatre, date of performance, date of first performance if earlier, sources for cast details, performers, production personnel, and references to reviews (generally for the first night, although additional references are occasionally included). I have included only productions of entire works to which the fee-paying public was admitted. Generally, amateur and private performances are omitted, although I have made exceptions for the amateur productions at the Questors and the Tower, Canonbury, because of those theatres' longevity, their high standards, and the significance of many of their productions which rivaled the professional stage. Wherever possible I include references to sources where a description of the plot may be found. The comment section may include the name of the production company, the reactions of theatre critics, interesting information about the production, a plot description (where a published source has not been located), the first-night reception by the audience, noteworthy performances and/or staging, when the work was first produced in New York, and the like.

The following sample production, with a point-by-point explanation, should make clear what readers can expect to find in the calendar:

[a] 69.284 [b] The National Health, or Nurse Norton's Affair [c] (C, 2a) [d] Peter Nichols. [e] OLD VIC [f] 14/10/69.* 126 perf. [j] Comment: MPS 149. National Theatre. Press night was 16/10; apparently there were no previews. Tribune was troubled by the numerous overlapping styles and the attempt to generate comedy out of human pain. "Not a play but an extravaganza: a documentary revue . . . mocking our attitudes to the healing arts by juxtaposing parody with reality” (Observer). Spectator praised the performances of Charles Kay and Bernard Gallagher. Nichols has produced “another offbeat entry of brilliance and importance, superbly produced,” although it is rather long and “certainly not for the squeamish” (Variety). Times (17/10) praised Nichols as the only British dramatist capable of portraying “modern Britain on stage” and then sending “the spectators away feeling more like members of the human race.” Illustrated London News dubbed it the year’s best play and praised the entire cast. In 1971 Times (20/1) complained about the withdrawal of the production from the National’s repertoire while “generally acknowledged duds are being held over well into the next booking period.” The production stayed in repertory until 18/3/72. See also Lloyd Evans, 164–68. The first New York production was at the Circle in the Square Uptown 10/10/74.

- [a]. Productions are arranged chronologically; when more than one play was produced on the same day, productions are arranged alphabetically by title. 69.284 indicates that this was the 284th production in 1969. This entry number is used to index the title, author, theatre, and company. In the indexes the entry numbers have been abbreviated in order to save space. Thus, for example, a work performed four times in 1969 with the entry numbers 69.1, 69.5, 69.108, 69.284 would appear in the indexes as 69–1, 5, 108, 284. Double-bills are grouped together alphabetically under the same production number and differentiated by the addition of an “a” and “b”: see, for example, 72.458a After Magritte and 72.458b The Real Inspector Hound. Similarly, items in triple or more bills receive a terminal a, b, c, d, etc.; see for example the quintuple bill 64.217a–217e, or the eightfold 69.90a–69.90h. A late or corrected entry in the calendar is denoted by the addition of a decimal number: see 67.48.2 and 79.463.2.
- [b]. The title of the work. Occasionally (for example, with foreign language items) alternative titles may also be provided in brackets [. . .].
- [c]. The genre of the work and the number of acts, scenes, or other divisions; here, a comedy in two acts.
- [d]. The author(s). Details of adaptation, translation, indebtedness to another work (where appropriate) are provided immediately after the author.
- [e]. The theatre where the production was performed. When a play transferred to another theatre during the course of the same production, this information is also given. All theatres are in London unless indicated otherwise.
- [f]. The date of the official opening night together with the number of performances (the latter is given only if I have located a reliable source for that number). Note: the date format used throughout the calendar is day/month/year; all dates refer to the twentieth century unless specified otherwise. A first production in 1960–1980 (as here) is denoted by an asterisk *; otherwise I provide the date of the first production when known. Double asterisks  denote the revival of a play for which the first production details have been given earlier in this calendar. I also indicate when a performance might be the first performance in London if I have reason to suspect an earlier performance in, for example, the British provinces or the USA. The date of the production may be modified with the addition of (Ln), (m), or (Lt) which indicate a lunchtime, matinée, or late-night performance respectively. A production which I have been unable to date exactly is placed at the beginning of the month and/or year in which it occurred.
- [g]. These are sources, printed and online, where performers and some production personnel may be found, followed by the performers and personnel when available.
- [h]. These are sources where a description of the plot may be found; the list of references is to be found on pp. xvii–xxii.
- [i]. A bibliography of first-night reviews (occasionally with additional reviews). A representative (though by no means exhaustive) sample of daily, weekly, and monthly reviews is provided. William T. Stanley’s Broadway in the West End: An Index of Reviews of American Theatre in London, 1950–1975 (Westport, Connecticut: Greenwood, 1978) provides a bibliography of reviews of Broadway plays performed in London during that period.
- [j]. Comment: Information relating to some aspect of the production in question. In this instance, the comment section includes: 1) MPS 149: The number of the playscript of this production in the Modern Playscripts Collection: playscripts submitted under Section 11 of the Theatres Act of 1968, which stated that a copy of any new and hitherto unpublished play performed in public in Great Britain should be delivered to the British Library. Use the MPS number to locate a play in the British Library catalogue: <https://tinyurl.com/3azs3e6a>. Apparently compliance with this requirement was low; 2) National Theatre. The producing organization for the piece, here the National which moved later to the South Bank; 3) Press night. During the period under consideration, there was growing usage of previews (paid or unpaid), an official opening night, and a press night which sometimes coincided with the official opening night but could be any later date (presumably to give a production time to “run in”). Occasionally a review might be the result of the critic attending a rehearsal; 4) The reviewers’ comments are typical, representative and generally selected to convey the overall tenor of each review; 5) Detail about the duration of a production performed in repertory; 6) A source/reference for further information about the production; here a collection of excerpts from theatre critics; 7)

Details of the first New York production where applicable. It is worth noting that there was considerable transatlantic traffic of productions in both directions during this period.

In addition to the calendar itself there are three indexes: title, author and company, and theatre. The author index includes dramatists, librettists, lyricists, composers, novelists, writers, translators and the like; also included are numerous producing companies, many of which functioned in a collaborative, authorial fashion particularly at fringe venues.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge the helpful suggestions and information concerning online sources provided by Mr. Zachary Monson in our exchange of emails.

Productions

1960

60.1 Bloomsday (P) Allan McClelland (adpt of James Joyce, Ulysses, 1922). UNITY 1/1/60. 1st perfd Playhouse, Oxford, 24/11/58. Cast: Theatricalia. Leopold Bloom Joe MacColum; Stephen Daedalus Denys Hawthorn; Buck Mulligan Michael Gambon; Molly Bloom Helen Goldapple. Dir Allan McClelland; Sc dgn, Sc Sean Kenny, Trevor Neals. Reviews: New Statesman 9/1/60, 37–38; Observer 10/1/60, 15; Spectator 22/1/60, 110; Stage 7/1/60, 7; Times 2/1/60, 9; Tribune 15/1/60, 11. Comment: The adaptation covered the daytime episodes from the novel. “It would be difficult to imagine a better introduction and appetiser to the book” (Spectator). “There is precious little in the way of dramatic form and there is no sense of climax. There is, however, adequate compensation in the clever way in which Mr. McClelland has adapted the idiom and language of Joyce, and he gives us the impression of life and movement in the back streets of Dublin.” Joe MacColum and Denys Hawthorn gave exceptional performances, with good support from Michael Gambon and Helen Goldapple (Stage). Performed on Friday through Sunday evenings, the run lasted until mid-February 1960. The play, with some Unity members, was broadcast by BBC 3rd Programme 10/5/61.

60.2 The French Mistress (C, 3a) “Robert Monro” [Sonnie Hale]. INTIMATE 4/1/60. 1st perfd Wimbledon 20/6/55. Comment: When a French mistress arrives at a public school romantic chaos ensues.

60.3 Song of Simeon (Nativity cantata) Christopher Hassall (lib) and Malcolm Arnold (mus). DRURY LANE 5/1/60 (m).* 1 perf. Arak Nicolas Chagrin; Susanna Imogen Hassall; Peter Jane. Cond Malcolm Arnold; Pd Colin Graham; Cost Annena Stubbs; Ch John Cranko. Reviews: Birmingham Post 6/1/60, 21; Stage 7/1/60, 8; Times 6/1/60, 13. Comment: The piece was written especially for a charity matinée given in aid of refugee children. Variety items comprised the second half of the programme and included performances by Nadia Nerina, David Blair, Dickie Henderson, Tommy Reilly, and Peter Sellers.

60.4 A Christmas Carol (P) Joan Littlewood (adpt of Charles Dickens’s novel, 1843). TOWER, CANONBURY, 8/1/60. 1st perfd this adpt Theatre Royal, Stratford East, 8/12/53. Cast: TTC.

60.5 Out of Thin Air (C) Derek Benfield. INTIMATE 11/1/60. 1st Playhouse, Salisbury, 9/3/59. Comment: A slight romantic comedy involving an Irish fairy complaining about her nightly visit to the woods being interrupted by a conscientious workman.

60.6 The Heartless Princess (Panto) Franklyn Black. ROLAND HOUSE, STEPNEY, 15/1/60. 1st perfd Opera House, Harrogate, 26/12/53. Leonard Steve Simmons; Nanny Ella Burgess; Princess Allegra Carol Marhoff; Prince Alexis George Abdul; King Codling of Knut Thomas Harms; Duchess of Potassia Lee Devoti; Ken Harris, Anthony Goodman, Isabel Fisher. Dir Hilda Farrars; Mus Brian Newsome; Cost Eunice Colley, Ken Harris. Review: Stage 21/1/60, 18. Comment: A fox helps to recover the heart of a princess that has been stolen by a wicked duchess.

60.7 Villa Sleep Four (C) Hubert Gregg. STRAND 17/1/60.* 1 perf. Cast: Stage 21/1/60, 17; WWT/13. Antonio Terence Bayler; Jennifer Barbara Bolton, Teresa Patricia Cree; Arabia (Elsie) Knight Pauline Stroud; Julian Dallas Frederick Treves; Sir Geoffrey Randall-Hunter Hubert Gregg. Dir Ellen Pollock. Review Stage 21/1/60, 17 Comment: Repertory Players. “An unusual and witty comedy based on a well-worn, but certainly not outworn theme of the need of busy and successful people to get away from it all” (Stage). Hubert Gregg played the role of a politician.

60.8 Come Live with Me (C, 3a) Dorothy Christie and Campbell Christie. INTIMATE 18/1/60. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 23/4/51. Comment: The cast included Sonia Dresdel. The plot involved a retired Polish prima donna, bigamy and blackmail. The piece had a short unsuccessful run at the Vaudeville 21/6/51 (Wearing 51.142).

60.9 Dial "M" for Murder (Thriller, 3a) Frederick Knott. RICHMOND 18/1/60. 1st stage perf Westminster 19/6/52. Frederick Jaeger, David Garth, Hazel Penwarden, Aubrey Woods, Colin Rix. Pres Alan Miles, Frederic Piffard; Dir Derek Benfield; Dgn John Piper. Plot: Best/52, 90, Bordman/4, 309, Fletcher, French, Hirschak, Loney, 277, Salem. Comment: The play was first performed as a ninety-minute drama on BBC TV 23/3/52. The first New York production (Plymouth 29/10/52) ran for 552 performances.

60.10 A Moon for the Misbegotten (CD, 3a) Eugene O'Neill. ARTS 20/1/60. 1st perfd Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, 20/2/47; 1st British perf Royal Artillery, Woolwich, 16/2/54. Josie Hogan Margaret Whiting; Phil Hogan Colin Blakely; Mike Hogan Laidlaw Dalling; James Tyrone Jr. Michael Aldridge; T. Stedman Harder Blake Butler. Mgr dir Campbell Williams, G. E. A. Williams, Toby Rowland; Gen mgr Bernard Gillman; Bom Marion Pullem; Press rep George Fearon; Dir Clifford Williams; Dgn Brian Currah; St dir Richard Mills; Sm Jonathan Webb; Asm Sonia Higgins, Tessa de Wolf; Elect Wilfred Blunden; Carp Edward Gould; Sc bld Sc Stage Decor Ltd; Cost, Pq Nathans. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/4, 345, Bryer, Fletcher, French/2, Hirschak, Hochman, Law, MacNicholas, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Wilmeth. Reviews: Illustrated London News 6/2/60, 31; New Statesman 30/1/60, 149–50; Observer 24/1/60, 21; Spectator 29/1/60, 137–138; Stage 28/1/60, 17; Tatler 3/2/60, 210–11; Times 21/1/60, 3; Tribune 29/1/60, 11; Variety 10/2/60, 73, 79. Comment: Clifford Williams's "too slow and too emphatic production" contained "two startlingly fresh and subtle performances" from Colin Blakely and Margaret Whiting (Spectator). Times praised Michael Aldridge. Tribune declared "It is a strange, lumbering carthorse of a play," while New Statesman thought the first and last acts were "the real thing" but the piece lacked a genuine centre. The first New York production (Bijou 2/5/57) ran for 68 performances.

60.11a The Dumb Waiter (P, 1a) Harold Pinter. HAMPSTEAD 21/1/60; trfd COURT 8/3/60. 1st perfd as Der stumme Diener, Kleines Haus, Frankfurt, Germany, 28/2/59; 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 28/1/60, 17; WWT/13. Ben Nicholas Selby; Gus George Tovey. Dir

James Roose Evans; Dgn Michael Young; Light Donald Hindle. Plot: Demastes/2, Fletcher, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Weintraub. Reviews: Illustrated London News 6/2/60, 31; New Statesman 30/1/60, 150; Observer 24/1/60, 21; Spectator 29/1/60, 138; Stage 28/1/60, 17; Times 22/1/60, 6. Comment: Spectator admired the double-bill but thought that Pinter needed to provide answers to the questions his plays raised. "His ability to reproduce the futilities of conversation between people who cannot express themselves is astonishingly accurate" (Stage). Times compared Pinter's style with that of composer Anton Webern: "[Pinter] inclines to etiolated pointilliste textures, forever trembling on the edge of silence, and to structures elusive yet so precisely organized that they possess an inner tension." The first New York production (Cherry Lane 26/11/62) ran for 578 performances.

60.11b The Room (P, 1a) Harold Pinter. HAMPSTEAD 21/1/60; trfd to COURT 8/3/60. 1st perfd Drama Studio, Bristol University, 15/5/57. Cast: Stage 28/1/60, 17; WWT/13. Bert Hudd Howard Lang; Rose Hudd Vivien Merchant; Mr. Kidd Henry Woolf; Mr. Sands John Rees; Mrs. Sands Auriol Smith; Riley Thomas Baptiste. Dir Harold Pinter; Dgn, Light as for 60.11a. Plot: Demastes/2, Fletcher, Hochman, Law, Walford, Weintraub. Reviews: Illustrated London News 6/2/60, 31; New Statesman 30/1/60, 150; Observer 24/1/60, 21; Spectator 29/1/60, 138; Stage 28/1/60, 17; Times 22/1/60, 6. Comment: The first New York production (Writers Stage 9/12/64) ran for 342 performances.

60.12 Look Who's Here (Revue, 2a) Ted Dicks and Tony Tanner. FORTUNE 21/1/60. 1st perfd Leatherhead 9/11/59; 1st perf thus Palace Court, Bournemouth, 11/1/60. Cast: Stage 28/1/60, 18; Variety 10/2/60, 73; WWT/13. Anna Quayle, Dennis Wood, Sonia Graham, Barbara Young, Donald Hewlett, Nyree Dawn Porter, Tony Tanner. Mgr dir Prince Littler; Lic D. A. Abrahams; Controller Frederick G. Lloyd; Pres Anna Deere Wiman, Charles Ross Productions Ltd.; Dir Charles Ross; Mus arr Neville McGrah, Ted Dicks; Dgn Michael Young; Ch Bob Stevenson. Plot: OTF/2. Reviews: Illustrated London News 6/2/60, 31; New Statesman 30/1/60, 150; Observer 24/1/60, 21; Stage 28/1/60, 18; Times 22/1/60, 6; Variety 10/2/60, 73. Comment: "Although some of the subjects chosen for satire, burlesque or off-beat treatment, are not new to revue—television, tired businessmen at nude shows and horror shows, for example—they are still written in a fresh style and given some twist or atmosphere of their own" (Stage). Observer thought the revue was old-fashioned and lacked any satiric bite, but Illustrated London News enjoyed it completely.

60.13 A Strange Coming (Nativity P) Sylvia Read. ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH HALL 21/1/60. * Cast: Stage 28/1/60, 19. Loy Mostyn, William Fry, Sylvia Read. Dir John Downing. Reviews: Illustrated London News 6/2/60, 31; Stage 28/1/60, 19. Comment: Theatre Group Productions. In aid of the World Refugee Year. Illustrated London News described the piece as a "nativity play in a modern idiom" and praised "its originality, its sympathy, and the exactness of the performances (in many parts) by the dramatist herself and William Fry."

60.14 The French Mistress (C, 3a) "Robert Monro" [Sonnie Hale]. RICHMOND 25/1/60.  The cast included Arthur Hewlett, Pauline Stroud, Sydney King, Cicely Hullett, Michael Bilton, Gary Hope.

60.15 The Shadow Witness. INTIMATE 25/1/60. Comment: This unidentified piece is listed in Bowden, 180. It was possibly the murder mystery by Falkland L. Cary and Philip Weathers, published by French, 1961. The earliest identifiable performance I have located was at the De La Warr Pavilion, Bexhill-on-Sea, 9/5/61 (see Stage 11/5/61, 21).

60.16 The Lily White Boys (P with mus, 2a) Harry Cookson (text) and Christopher Logue (songs) and Tony Kinsey (mus) and Bill Le Sage (mus). COURT 27/1/60. 45 perf. 1st perfd thus Theatre Royal, Brighton, 18/1/60. Cast: Findlater; Stage 4/2/60, 17; Theatricalia; Variety 10/2/60, 73; WWT/13. Ted Albert Finney; Razzo Monty Landis; Musclebound Philip Locke; Jeannie Georgia Brown; Eth Shirley Ann Field; Liz Ann Lynn; The Chairman of the Committee: Managing Director Willoughby Goddard; Businessman, Head Waiter, First Working Man, Policeman James Grout; Solicitor, Factory Manager, Second Working Man, Psychiatrist Geoffrey Hibbert; The Lady Committee Member, Factory Overseer, Waitress, Miss Peaches, Policewoman Clark Barbara Hicks; Youth Leader, Split-it, TV Interviewer, Trades Council Secretary, Daddy's Boy Ronnie Stevens. Pres English Stage Company, Oscar Lewenstein, Wolf Mankowitz; Dir Lindsay Anderson; Dec Sean Kenny; Ch Eleanor Fazan. Plot: OTF. Reviews: New Statesman 6/2/60, 186; Spectator 5/2/60, 177–178; Stage 4/2/60, 17; Times 28/1/60, 3; Variety 10/2/60, 73. Comment: English Stage Company. Spectator was unimpressed by this "primitive Hyde Park spouter's satire about how the horrible rich abuse the horrible poor." An insipid work with imaginative, vital direction and a fine performance by Albert Finney "with a real touch of the Olivier magnetism" (New Statesman). Times was unimpressed by the jokes and songs, but noted Shirley Anne Field "reaches distinction as an ineffably silly girl." Cookson's original play was first performed at the Century, Shrewsbury, 6/7/58.

60.17 The Beggar's Opera (P, 3a) John Gay (adpt Barbara Hutchins and Eric Kirby and Vincent McQueen). QUESTORS 30/1/60. 1st perfd orig version Lincoln's Inn Fields 29/1/1728. Cast: QTA. Plot: Fletcher, Griffiths, Gänzl, Gassner, Hochman, Law, OTF, Patterson, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 6/2/60, 12; Stage 4/2/60, 18. Comment: This updated version was "set in Soho in 1960 and dressed accordingly, it serves, among other things, to show how little the under world has changed in 230 years" (Stage).

60.18 By Candlelight. INTIMATE 1/2/60. Comment: Listed in Bowden, 180, and probably By Candle Light (C, 3a) Harry Graham (adpt of Siegfried Geyer, Bei Kerzenlicht, 1927). 1st perfd King's, Southsea, 10/9/28. Plot: Gänzl, Loney, 159. The piece employed the familiar idea of a valet trading places with his employer, and the confusions that ensue.

60.19 A Taste of Honey (P, 2a) Shelagh Delaney. RICHMOND 1/2/60. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Stratford East, 27/5/58. Joan Pearl, Jemma Hyde, Derek Smee, Paul Williamson, Bari Jonson. Pres Alan Miles, Frederick Piffard; Dir Derek Benfield; Dec John Piper. Plot: Best/60, 70, Demastes/2, Dorney, Fletcher, Griffiths, Gunn, Hirschak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: The first New York production (Lyceum 4/10/60) ran for 376 performances.

60.20 The More the Merrier (C, 3a) Ronald Millar. STRAND 2/2/60. 1st perfd Grand, Leeds, 21/9/59. Cast: Stage 4/2/60, 18; Variety 10/2/60, 73; WWT/13. Anne Allen Jane Meredith; Leonard Lee Neil Hallett; Stella Felby Anna Neagle; Nanny Beatrice Varley; Mr. Gosport Kenneth Edwards; Dinah Felby Tracey Lloyd; Jane Loring Jane Baxter; Henry Brandon Brasher Gordon Tanner; Roger Felby John Robinson. Pp Send Manor Trust Ltd.; President Lionel L. Falck; Lic, Mgr dir R. L. Wells; Pres Henry Sherek, Daniel Mayer Co.; Dir Harold French; Dgn Hutchinson Scott. Reviews: Guardian 3/2/60, 7; New Statesman 13/2/60, 218; Observer 7/2/60, 23; Stage 4/2/60, 18; Times 3/2/60, 13; Variety 10/2/60, 73. Comment: "This fairish comedy is about an actress who, once divorced, finds that she cannot do without her husband and resorts to all kinds of guile and tricks until she wins him back. The wit is intermittent and the shaping of the story inclined to be lumpy" (Stage). "Millar bothers very little about story and still less about form," and the piece was essentially a vehicle for Anna Neagle who gave "a pleasing performance" (Times). "A lightweight, somewhat trivial drawing room comedy" which has already “earned a substantial profit during four months on the road” (Variety). On opening night it was well-received by the stalls but booed by some in the gallery.

60.21 The Wrong Side of the Park (P, 3a) John Mortimer. CAMBRIDGE 3/2/60; trfd to ST. MARTIN’S 16/5/60. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 5/1/60. Cast: Stage 11/2/60, 17; Theatricalia; Variety 17/2/60, 54; WWT/13. Elaine Lee Margaret Leighton; Miller Robert Stephens; Barbara Wendy Craig; Mr. Lee Charles Heslop; Henry Lee Richard Johnson; Mrs. Lee Joyce Carey. Pres Michael Codron, David Hall; Dir Peter Hall; Sc dgn Tanya Moiseiwitsch; Light Richard Pilbrow. Plot: Hochman, Loney, Vinson, Weintraub. Reviews: New Statesman 13/2/60, 217–18; New Statesman 13/2/60, 218; Observer 7/2/60, 23; Spectator 12/2/60, 218; Stage 11/2/60, 17; Times 4/2/60, 3; Variety 17/2/60, 54. Comment: Mortimer’s first full-length play. Spectator thought the play was derivative and lacked authenticity; this forced “false” performances from Margaret Leighton and Richard Johnson. New Statesman acknowledged the plot weakness but found the play possessed some genuine characterizations. “Peter Hall’s production is exactly suited to dialogue which is always dwelling with resilience on the battering that common-place events inflict on the human sensibilities” (Times).

60.22 Home and Away (C, 3a) Heather McIntyre. INTIMATE 8/2/60. 1st perfd Richmond 7/3/55 as Treble Trouble. Comment: Complications ensue when a large amount of money is won in a soccer pool.

60.23 The Night Life of a Virile Potato (FC, 3a) Gloria Russell. LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 8/2/60. 1st perfd Royal County, Bedford, 3/8/59. Cast: Stage 11/2/60, 18; Theatricalia; Variety 17/2/60, 54; WWT/13. Lisa Sarah Churchill; Mrs. Webster Avril Angers; Amanda Mercy Haystead; Mrs. Harper-Jones Marjory Hawtrey; David John Gayford; Jeremy New Geoffrey Wearing; A. Mann Geoffrey Ryan. Pres John Forbes-Sempill (Productions) Ltd., Rietti Productions Ltd.; Dir William Hepper; Dec David Russell; Mus Eric Spear. Reviews: Birmingham Post 10/2/60, 9; Stage 11/2/60, 18; Times 9/2/60, 14; Tribune 19/2/60, 11; Variety 17/2/60, 54. Comment: “No more childish work has appeared in the theatre for months” (Birmingham Post). “Sarah Churchill as the gynaecologist’s wife, Lisa,” in this piece about “matrimonial relations and sex,” did what she could but she needed “an opportunity on a much higher level” (Stage). “A tasteless piece . . . using almost every stock line of comedy dialog” (Variety). “Feebly facetious” (Times).

60.24 The Unexpected Guest (Thriller, 2a) Agatha Christie. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 8/2/60. 1st perfd Hippodrome, Bristol, 4/8/58. Cast: Theatricalia. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Salem, Vinson, Wagoner, Weintraub. Comment: This murder mystery, on a post West-End production tour (Wearing 58.192), was novelized by Charles Osborne in 1999. The piece was also known as The Uninvited Guest.

Plot: Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Patterson, Purdom, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Reviews: Spectator 19/2/60, 252; Stage 11/2/60, 19; Times 10/2/60, 5; Tribune 19/2/60, 11. Comment: Spectator praised the “clean, unfussy, well-spoken, manly production,” and Barbara Jefford’s Joan for adding “an extra dimension beyond Shaw’s conscious intention”: she “was a girl who lived for her country but who died for—nothing.” Times thought the production needed “more bravura than brains” in places. Tribune found both the production and Jefford’s performance “clear, prosaic, and vaguely flat.”

Comment: Played under the title Double Yoke. In the first piece a husband drives his wife to suicide while in the second a drunk husband crashes a car and causes severe injuries to someone else; however, his wife is relieved he hasn't succumbed to a fatal accident she had feared. These "linked plays, A Sparrow Falls and Special Providence, ingeniously based on Hamlet's line and presented under the title of Double Yolk, impressed and touched the St. Martin's audience" (Birmingham Post). Times discussed the difficulties of double bills and thought this one was not successful.

Comment: Joan Miller, the wife of the director, Peter Cotes, played the lead. A "badly written and badly acted" piece about an alleged rape and the ensuing trial (Spectator). A "corney courtroom drama" (Guardian), a sentiment shared by Times and Tribune. "A rather dreary affair" though it might play well with matinée audiences (Variety). On conflicts between Borneman and Cotes, see The Globe and Mail (Toronto) 18/2/60, 29.

60.32 The Unexpected Guest (Thriller, 2a) Agatha Christie. STREATHAM HILL 15/2/60. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Salem, Vinson, Wagoner, Weintraub.

60.33 Stories and Designs (One-man recital). HAMPSTEAD 18/2/60.* Review: Stage 25/2/60, 27. Comment: David March "held the audience spellbound as, with clearly defined yet well restrained changes of face and voice, he delineated the various characters and emotions depicted by [Virginia Woolf] in works published from 1919 up to some posthumous publications of 1942" (Stage).

60.34a The Bacchae (T) Euripides (trans Neil Curry and David Thompson). TOWER, CANONBURY, 19/2/60. 1st perfd 405 B.C. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Hochman, Law, Patterson, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Cast: TTC. Reviews: Observer 6/3/60, 22; Stage 25/2/60, 26; Times 23/2/60, 4. Comment: Observer was “greatly impressed by the skill of a talented company,” and noted that the theatre “was packed, the atmosphere ardent and concentrated.” “A bare platform, frenetic drums, stark lighting, and chorus splendidly grouped all give priority to the words” (Times).

60.34b Something Unspoken (P,1a) Tennessee Williams. TOWER, CANONBURY, 19/2/60. 1st perfd Lakeside Summer Theatre, Lake Hopatcong, New Jersey, 6/55; 1st British perf Arts 16/9/58. Plot; Bordman/4, 349, Heintzelman, Hischak, MacNicholas. Cast: TTC. Review: Observer 6/3/60, 22.

60.35 Skyrocket (P) Charles Fenn. APOLLO 21/2/60.* 1 perf. Cast: Stage 25/2/60, 26; WWT/13. Gunnar Larsen Larry O'Connor; Anna Annabel Maule; Block Philip Newman; Johnny Block Michael Barber; Mrs. Larsen Constance Fecher; Mollie Raynor Ruth Porcher; Kay Pat Pleasance; Trixie Dubbs Liane Aukin. Dir Robert Henderson; Set Victor Friendly. Review: Stage 25/2/60, 26. Comment: Repertory Players. The play concerned an American advertising man working in England who, wrongly, thinks everyone likes him. Stage said the play's construction was weak.

60.36 Break-out (D) Bill Owen. INTIMATE 22/2/60. 1st perfd (in Dutch) State Theatre, Rotterdam, 1957; 1st British perf Belgrade, Coventry, 16/3/59. Comment: The cast included Bill Owen. The play was about “an unmarried woman, lonely and refusing to admit her dissatisfaction, [living] in a country cottage; on New Year's Eve her two friends visit her, all too briefly: after their departure there arrives an unexpected man. The title of the play and the presence of a detective in the cast list leads one to suspect that he is, in fact, an escaped convict: the effect on the lives of the four, and especially two of them, forms Mr. Owen's theme” (Birmingham Post 17/3/59, 20).

60.37a The Browning Version (D, 1a) Terence Rattigan. RICHMOND 22/2/60. 1st perfd Royal Court, Liverpool, 26/7/48. Plot: Bordman/4, 284, Demastes/1, Fletcher, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, 258, Matlaw, Patterson, Rusinko, 62–69, Shank, Vinson, Walford, Weintraub. Comment: The company for this double bill comprised Ronald Magill, Robert Sansom, Mary Yeomans, Gary Hope, Michael Craze, Michael Atkinson; Pres Alan Miles, Frederic Piffard. The first New York production

(Coronet 12/10/49) ran for 69 performances.

Comment: Peter Haddon Company.

60.39 The Dancing Years (MP, 3a) Ivor Novello (bk, mus) and Christopher Hassall (lyr). STREATHAM HILL 22/2/60. Plot: Fletcher, Gänzl, Gänzl/3, 498–500, Kennedy, Green, OFT. Comment: See 60.30 for probable cast.

60.40 The Grass Is Greener (C, 2a) Hugh Williams and Margaret Williams. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 22/2/60. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 27/10/58. Plot: French/2, Loney, 311. Comment: A romantic triangle comedy involving the upper classes and an American millionaire. The production was on a post-West End tour (Wearing 58.305).

Comment: The sequel to Sailor, Beware! Guardian said a sequel was inevitable and retained the same characters and sets (described) as the highly popular original. “The basis of the comedy, the old mother-in-law joke, is stretched and elaborated with considerable skill and dash" (Stage). Esma Cannon again provided a "miniature masterpiece of comic acting" (Times).

60.42 Henry V (Hist P, 2pt) William Shakespeare (adpt Julius Gellner and Bernard Miles). MERMAID 25/2/60. 1st perfd c. 1599. Reviews: Guardian 26/2/60, 9; Spectator 4/3/60, 320; Stage 3/3/60, 17; Times 26/2/60, 15; Tribune 4/3/60, 11; Variety 9/3/60, 78. Comment: Performed in modern battledress. "Another example of the conceit of the modern impresario. The play has been ripped into snippets so that it can be performed twice nightly. It has been vulgarly updated with battledress and mouth-organs and hair-driers and newsreel shots" (Spectator). "One of the worst productions of the play I have seen in the last thirty-five years" (Guardian). "The whole thing is immensely vivid and exciting"; the production "is reinforced by well-chosen film shots" (Tribune). The adaptation amounted to "a stirring series of moods and themes from the original" (Times). "This gimmick production ... in battledress has slipped up badly and is a grave disappointment. Played twice nightly, it is cut down to two hours with much of Shakespeare's verse jettisoned" (Variety).

60.43 Visit to a Small Planet (C, 3a) Gore Vidal. WESTMINSTER 25/2/60. 12 perf. 1st perfd NBC TV (USA) 8/5/55; 1st British perf Theatre Royal, Brighton, 27/4/59. Reviews: Stage 3/3/60, 17; Times 26/2/60, 15; Tribune 4/3/60, 11; Variety 9/3/60, 78. Comment: Alan Badel gave a "delightful" performance as a visiting alien (Tribune). Despite Badel's "mercurial performance" the play fizzled out (Stage). Times thought that the "near-pantomime humour" overwhelmed the play's serious themes. "A good joke stretched thin" but fairly well received on opening night (Variety). The first New York production (Booth 7/2/57) ran for 388 performances.

60.44 Claudia (RC, 3a) Rose Franken (based on Franken's Claudia novels). INTIMATE 29/2/60. 1st perfd Playhouse, Wilmington, Delaware, 25/1/41 (m). Plot: Bordman, Bordman/4, 200, Bronner, Fletcher, Hischak, Loney, 226, Salem, Wheatley. The first New York production (Booth 12/2/41) ran for 722 performances.

60.45 The Grass Is Greener (C, 2a) Hugh and Margaret Williams. STREATHAM HILL 29/2/60. Hugh Williams, Rachel Gurney, Christine Finn, Philip Friend. Pres Anna Deere Wiman, Jack Minster; Dir Jack Minster. Plot: French/2, Loney, 311.

60.46 The Tattooed Lady (Crime D) Edgar K. Bruce. RICHMOND 29/2/60. 1st Plaza, Tynemouth, 9/3/59. April Olrich, Hugh Cross, Ann Way, Gordon Daisley, Terence Stamp, Edward Palmer, Richard Golding, Edgar K. Bruce. Pres Alan Miles, Frederic Piffard; Dir James Belchamber; Dec John Piper. Comment: An aging Austrian antiques dealer (played by Bruce) is in reality involved in the criminal underworld and a crime involving diamonds.

60.47 You, Too, Can Have a Body (C thriller, 2a) Fred A. Robinson. WIMBLEDON 29/2/60. 1st perfd on BBC TV 3/3/57; 1st stage perf Connaught, Worthing, 29/7/57. Chick Wade Bill Maynard; Laura Harvery Veronica Baird [professional debut]; Lucky John Hart Dyke; Lord Leverdale Donald Price; Inspector Bolton John Bryant; Maud Tarrant Margaret St. Barbe West; Mrs. Porchester Grace Newcome; Shirley Drake Rosemary Beattie; Gavin Hamilton, Roger Hume. Comment: The first performance information given in Wearing 58.127 is incorrect. Peter Haddon Company. This farcical piece involved a typewriter dictating the series of deaths that take place during the course of the action.

60.48 Change for the Angel (P, 3a) Bernard Kops. Comment: The play received generally poor reviews. Observer praised the first act for setting up an accurate depiction of a working-class family, but said the remainder of the play disintegrated. Stage noted the play's sincerity but faulted its authenticity, as did Times.

60.49 The Big Win (C) Sholem Aleichem (adpt J. D. Berkowitz; trans Tamara Kabana of Das groyse Gevins, 1922). Reviews: New Statesman 12/3/60, 364; Observer 6/3/60, 22; Stage 10/3/60, 17. Comment: Stage (4/2/60, 8) indicated this was the first production of the play in English. The plot involved a tailor thinking he has a winning lottery ticket but is disabused when the numbers are checked. New Statesman commended the play but condemned the more than amateurish acting. "A handsome production" (Stage).

60.50 The Jew of Malta (T) Christopher Marlowe. TOWER, CANONBURY, 4/3/60. 1st perfd c. 1589. Cast: TTC. Plot: Fletcher, Hochman, Holzknecht, Law, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley.

60.51 And This Was Odd (Light C, 3a) Kenneth Horne. INTIMATE 7/3/60. 1st perfd Intimate 10/6/40 as Wasn't It Odd. Comment: The play was about an old lady discovering her family's secrets while she is supposed to be ill in bed.

Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hochman, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Sobel. Reviews: Birmingham Post 9/3/60, 31; Christian Science Monitor 193/60, 8; Observer 13/3/60, 23; Spectator 18/3/60, 393–394; Stage 10/3/60, 17; Times 8/3/60, 4. Comment: Compagnie Marie Bell. “Marie Bell is what Cocteau has described as one of the last of the ‘sacred monsters,’ the tragedy queen, and she acts in the tradition. Nothing here of your genteel underplaying” (Birmingham Post). Times noted disapprovingly that her style was disconnected from that of the other performers. Stage reported that Marie Bell “received an ovation” on opening night.

60.57 Roar Like a Dove (C, 3a) “Lesley Storm” [Mabel Cowie]. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 7/3/60. 1st perfd Grand, Leeds, 2/9/57. Plot: Bordman/4, 396, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Loney, 305. Comment: “Roar Like a Dove celebrates its 1,000th performance on February 29, giving Lesley Storm the distinction of being the first woman playwright to achieve this figure with a comedy, just as Agatha Christie was first in the thriller field. During its West End run Roar Like a Dove will have taken over £450,000. The film rights were sold for ninety thousand pounds. The play will be seen at Golders Green and Streatham Hill after the Phoenix, and will then go on a tour of the provinces” (Stage 11/2/60, 8). The play logged a total of 1,007 performances once it ended its run at the Phoenix (see Wearing 57.238). The New York production (Booth 21/5/64) ran for 20 performances.

The play was about working people moving from the slums of Coventry into flats in new tower blocks. Observer found it insistently declarative rather than engaging. Stage thought Wiles overdid his criticisms of people in Coventry with their “appalling lack of values of any kind except financial.” Times said the characters were deprived of humanity and were reduced “to puppets mouthing slogans.” The Coventry production provoked numerous local reactions as exemplified by several letters to the Editor in the Coventry Evening Telegraph 5/3/60, 8, 8/3/60, 8 (among others). Director Bryan Bailey was killed in a car crash on 25/3/60, aged 38.

Comment: Stage declared that Molly Picon was a “remarkably accomplished actress [who] gives a brilliant performance as Mrs. Jacoby, a Jewish woman of simple faith, genuine humanity and lively humour.” In addition, Robert Morley gave “his best performance for several seasons.” “A charming autumnal romance” (Sphere). Times found the piece “leisurely and warmly sentimental,” but not well constructed. The first New York production (Shubert 16/2/59) ran for 556 performances.

60.60 Bérénice (T, 5a) Jean Racine. SAVOY 10/3/60. 1st perfd Hôtel de Bourgoyne, Paris, 21/11/1670. Cast: Stage

Comment: Compagnie Marie Bell. Times praised Marie Bell and Jacques Dacqmine for providing the right “aristocratic dimension” to the play.

60.61a Alas, Poor Fred (DC 1a) James Saunders. MAHATMA GANDHI HALL 11/3/60. 1st Library, Scarborough, 25/6/59. Cast: Stage 17/3/60, 17. Mr. Pringle William Elmhirst; Mrs. Pringle Dona Martyn. Dir Rodney Wood. Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 17/3/60, 17. Comment: Performed by Stephen Joseph’s Theatre-in-the-Round Company, Scarborough, under the collective title of Missing Bodies. Stage noted the influence of Pinter in that the silences conveyed as much as the dialogue. However, the play’s ending seemed arbitrary.

60.61b Memento Mori (C of menace, 1a) David Campton. MAHATMA GANDHI HALL 11/3/60. 1st perfd Mahatma Gandhi Hall 5/5/57. Plot: Bull/2, Hochman. Review: Stage 17/3/60, 17. Comment: Performed by Stephen Joseph’s Theatre-in-the-Round Company, Scarborough, under the collective title of Missing Bodies. “A stylishly macabre playlet” performed by David Campton and Barry Boys.

60.62 Farewell, Farewell, Eugene (P, 3a) Rodney Ackland (adpt of John Vari’s play, 1960). WIMBLEDON 14/3/60. 1st perfd Grand, Leeds, 30/3/59. Florence Margaret St. Barbe West; Minerva Joy Andrews; Peony Jeanne Watts; Mick Peter Whitbread; Mr. Bosworth John Bryans; Mrs. Bosworth Grace Newcombe; John Hart Dyke, Rosemary Beattie. Plot: Bordman/4, 370, Hischak, Loney, 315. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The first New York production (Helen Hayes 27/9/60) ran for 7 performances.

60.63 Five Finger Exercise (D, 2a) Peter Shaffer. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 14/3/60. Plot: Best/59, 75, Bordman/4, 365, Demastes/2, Fletcher, French, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, 310–11, Matlaw, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: See 60.53 for probable cast.

Comment: Compagnie Marie Bell. Stage praised the company’s “unstilted” and “unaffected” delivery of the rhyming couplets. Spectator noted the conflicting performance styles of Robert Hirsch and Marie Bell. Times was disappointed by the performances of Hirsch and Hubert Noël.

60.68 The Dancing Heiress (MC) Jack Fletcher (lib) and Murray Grand (lib, lyr, mus). LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 15/3/60. 1st perfd Memorial, Stratford-upon-Avon, 29/2/60. Comment: Spectator noted that this musical comedy thriller suffered “from inability to make up its mind who its ideal audience is.” Similarly, Observer declared the piece failed in its satirical intent. Guardian singled out Millicent Martin as the only one who “knows what she is about. The strength and vitality of her personality, the freshness of her attack, the slightly nasal intonation and the deadpan playing makes marvellous fun of the tough little chorus girl with a tender heart.” The production managed only 15 performances.

Comment: Andrew Cruickshank gave “a titanic performance” (Observer). “The most stimulating theatrical event of the season so far” (Variety); however, the production achieved only 69 performances. Stage thought that the in-the-round production at Croydon was slightly more effective. The first New York production (National 21/4/55) ran for 806 performances.

Comment: The piece was based on Slade and Reynolds' revue, Christmas in King Street. Spectator described the piece as a “reassurance to the middle classes that a cosy heaven once existed.” “The show possesses an immaculately pointed style that breaks down the distinction between satire and whimsicality” (Observer). On opening night there was “polite applause from the stalls and a little booing from the gallery” (Times). Variety disliked the music, the flimsy, poorly constructed plot, and the absent of wit.

60.71 Purple Dust (C, 3a) Sean O'Casey. TOWER, CANONBURY, 18/3/60. 1st perfd People's, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 16/12/43. Cast: TTC. Plot: Fletcher, Hochman, Matlaw, Schrank. Review: Stage 24/3/60, 18. Comment: “As usual, the Tavistock production is highly professional, with first-class direction by Walter Kennedy and a good setting by Richard Hunt. George Spaul gives a magnificently ranting performance as Poges” (Stage).

Produced without decor. The play was about a benevolent dictator and set in Spain in 778; however, it was performed in modern dress. Times thought the play was “like a new version of the debate among Shakespeare’s Greeks in Troilus and Cressida.” “Jocelyn Herbert’s décor was often effective, although the use of lantern slides to show the changes of location were apt to distract the eye from the pattern of the action” (Stage).

Pres Tom Arnold, David Pelham; Dir Jack Williams; Sets Sean Kenny. Comment: “The scene is an apartment in Greenwich Village, occupied by a prim English archaeologist whose character is in strong contrast to his American neighbour, a lively law student mainly occupied with drink and sex. Complications arise when a pert teenage girl appears suddenly, claiming she is on the run from a reformatory” (Stage 25/2/60, 29).

60.74 Rosmersholm (P, 4a) Henrik Ibsen (anon trans of Ibsen’s play, 1887) HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 21/3/60. Plot: Bryan, Fletcher, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson, Shank, Shipley.

Comment: This was the first play about homosexuality to be approved by the Lord Chamberlain. The performances of Vanessa Redgrave, Gladys Cooper, and Ian Hunter “greatly helped” a not particularly good play (Observer). Spectator thought that Joan Henry needed Ibsen’s analytical perspectives to really explore her subject, which Christian Science Monitor thought she side-stepped in an otherwise “efficient” play that was well acted. “The acting well nigh impeccable” (New Statesman).

It seemed that the Chinese characters were being treated almost as if they were freaks” (Christian Science Monitor). A static story, flat characters, beautiful costumes, and lively dances, but no enchantment (Times). Variety noted that the show had advance bookings worth $280,000 but thought “it is doubtful whether any of the cast come up to the acting standards to which a musical of this importance is entitled.” The first New York production (St. James 1/12/58) ran for 600 performances.

60.80 Johnny the Priest (MD) Peter Powell (lyr and lib; adpt of R. C. Sherriff, The Telescope, 1957) and Antony Hopkins (mus). WIMBLEDON 25/3/60.* Plot: OTF. Comment: The pre-West End production prior to opening at the Princes in April (60.115).

60.81a Achilles' Heel (P, 1a) Victor Rietti and Robert Rietty (adpt of Enrico Bassano's play). ICA 27/3/60. Review: Stage 31/3/60, 17. Comment: Performed without decor. This adaptation, “about an elderly man [Victor Rietti] whose off-stage wife is bearing him a son” (Stage), had been performed earlier at Rudolf Steiner 28/1/58.

60.81b The Little Saint (D, 5a) Victor Rietti and Robert Rietty (adpt of Roberto Bracco Il piccolo santo, 1909). ICA 27/3/60. Geraldine Hagan, Glyn Jones, Murray Kash, Michael Crawford, Victor Rietti. Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 31/3/60, 17. Comment: Performed without decor. This adaptation had been performed earlier at Rudolf Steiner 28/1/58.

60.82 Bachelor Flat (C, 3a) Budd Grossman. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 28/3/60. Comment: See 60.73 for the cast.

60.83 Farewell, Farewell, Eugene (P, 3a) Rodney Ackland (adpt of John Vari's play, 1960). RICHMOND 28/3/60. Mrs. Boworth Beryl Andrews; Barbara Ogilvie, Hilda Braid, Trevor Hichins, Ronald Magill, Kenneth Toye. Pres Alan Miles, Frederic Piffard; Dir James Belchamber; Dec John Piper. Plot: Bordman/4, 370, Hischak, Loney, 315.

60.84 Lodging for a Bride (P, 2a) Patrick Kirwan. STREATHAM HILL 28/3/60. 1st perfd Gaiety, Dublin, 16/2/60. Roger Livesey, Robert Shaw, Olga Lindo, Jane Hylton, Helena Hughes, Thomas Heathcote, Jack Lambert, Ronald Adam, Hamlyn Benson, David Battley, Colin Rix; Pres L. O. P. Ltd., Shamus Locke; Dir John Fernald; Sc dgn Roger Furse. Comment: “A drama-thriller about newspapermen and crooks, as bad as each other in their lying trickery, cynicism and self-concern” (Stage 21/4/60, 16).

60.85 Margaret Hamilton. PARK LANE THEATRE 28/3/60. Comment: Programme of sketches by disease, Margaret Hamilton.

60.86 Posterity Be Damned (P) Dominic Behan. METROPOLITAN 28/3/60. 1st perfd Gaiety, Dublin, 28/9/59. Cast: Stage 31/3/60, 18. Ballad Singer Dominic Behan; Accordion Player Honor Levine; George MacKen Derry Power; Tick-Tack Charles Roberts; Half-Inch Morgan Redmond; Neddy Nail Cecil Sheridan; Ninety Higgins Dermot Kelly; Martin Ryan Derek Young; Mary Talbot Laurie Morton; Rosie Burne Annie D'Alton; Man with a Hangover, Sergeant Gerry Jones; John Conroy Brian O'Higgins; May Conroy Joan Phillips; Bearded Lunatic Fergus Cowley; Joseph Bennett Maurice Good; Sean Donnelly John Cowley; Well-dressed Man Norman Wynn; Bus Conductor, Plain-clothes Man Robert Stewart; Plain-clothes Man Michael Broome. Pres John Ryan, Alan Simpson, Carolyn Swift; Dir Allan Simpson; Sc dgn Tony Carruthers. Reviews: New Statesman 2/4/60, 482; Observer 3/4/60, 23; Spectator 1/4/60, 475–476; Stage 31/3/60, 18; Times 29/20/15. Comment: The thin plot was an excuse for Behan “to exercise his considerable gift for satiric songs and funny cracks at the expense of the Irish Republican Army and the Church” (New Statesman). Times found it “a wild, confused, chaotic and intermittently powerful piece of work.”

60.87 The Sound of Murder (Thriller, 3a) William Fairchild. INTIMATE 28/3/60.

60.88 The Gazebo (C thriller, 2a) Alec Coppel (adpt of story by Myra Coppel and Alec Coppel). SAVOY 29/3/60. 479 perf. 1st perfd Wilmington, Delaware, 12/11/58; 1st British perf Hippodrome, Bristol, 29/2/60. Cast: Stage 31/3/60, 18; Theatricalia; Variety 13/4/60, 58; WWT/13. Elliott Nash Ian Carmichael/Alan Melville; Harlow Edison Michael Goodliffe; Matilda Joanna Tomlinson; Nell Nash Moira Lister; Mrs. Chandler Edith Macarthur; Visitor Bill Cartwright; Mr. Thorpe J. Sharp; Sets Reece Pemberton; Light Michael Northen. Plot: Bordman/4, 357, Bronner, Fletcher, Hischak, Loney, Salem. Reviews: Guardian 30/3/60, 7; Observer 3/4/60, 23; Spectator 8/4/60, 506–507; Stage 31/3/60, 18; Tatler 13/4/60, 123–24; Times 30/3/60, 15; Tribune 8/4/60, 11; Variety 13/4/60, 58, 15/2/61, 72. Comment: “A routine thriller full of routine thrills” (Spectator). The piece benefitted considerably from Ian Carmichael’s comedic abilities (Tatler, Times). “Better with its thrills than with its humour, Coppel is ingenious in his steady introduction of unexpected enquiries and unlooked-for events” (Stage). The first New York production (Lyceum, 12/12/58) ran for 218 performances.

60.89 The Admiration of Life (P, 2a, 6sc) Patricia Broderick. ARTS 30/3/60.* Cast: Stage 7/4/60, 17; WWT/13. Tommy Caswell Robert Duvall; Molly Berenger Pauline Taylor; Herbert Berenger Charles Irwin; Cal Ruhl Bruce Boa; Arnold Liefert Alex Gallier; Carter Winter David Waller; Rita Winter Marion Mathie; George Jonathan Webb; Mrs. Geraldine Spanner Tucker McGuire/Fanny Carby; Joseph Spanner Terry Raven; Mr. Spanner Kenneth McClellan. Mgr dir Campbell Williams, G. Comment: “An irritating, truthful, gripping and personal picture of New Yorkers” with Robert Duvall “a virile, voluble young actor whose lines seem to have become as much a part of him as his bloodstream” (Spectator). Tribune admired the play’s ideas and imagination but thought the plot was improbable. Observer agreed that the play had faults but declared Patricia Broderick possessed real talent. However, Times declared the piece demonstrated “almost the whole art of how not to write a play.”

60.90 The Naming of Murderer’s Rock (P, 2a) Frederick A. Bland. COURT 30/3/60. 1st perfd Court 22/11/59. Cast: Findlater; Stage 7/4/60, 17; Variety 13/4/60, 58; WWT/13. Judge of the Supreme Court of New Zealand Nicholas Meredith; Counsel for the Prosecution Raf de la Torre; Junior Counsel for the Prosecution Roy Spencer; Counsel for the Defence Ralph Nossek; Clerk Richard Pescud; Usher Edwin Finn; Judge’s Clerk, Anglican Priest Wilfrid Grantham; Guards Rob Inglis, Michael Huht; Foreman of the Jury, Jewish Rabbi Christopher Banks; Richard Burgess Kenneth Macintosh; Thomas Noon (alias Kelly) Colin Blakely; Philip Levy Arnold Reviews: Observer 3/4/60, 23; Spectator 8/4/60, 506; Stage 7/4/60, 17; Times 31/3/60, 5; Tribune 8/4/60, 11; Variety 13/4/60, 58. Comment: English Stage Company. The play was a dramatization of an 1866 murder trial in New Zealand. “Imitating reality is not art” (Tribune). Variety faulted every aspect of the play and the production. Stage found fault with the piece’s construction but thought it should not be missed.

60.91 Bridge of Sighs (Satirical C, 3a) Thomas Muschamp. TOWER, CANONBURY, 1/4/60. 1st perfd Belgrade, Coventry, 13/4/59. Cast: TTC. Reviews: Observer 3/4/60, 23; Stage 7/4/60, 19; Times 4/4/60, 6. Comment: The original title was Nothing to Declare. The play had won the Foyle Award for New Plays, 1959. “The bridge of the title divides East and West. It is in fact a link in the Iron Curtain and is guarded by two soldiers whose task it is to see that neither refugees nor heresies reach the other side” (Stage). An admirable production (Observer). Times thought the piece struggled between farce and seriousness.

60.92a El Café (C, 2a) Leandro Fernández de Moratín (trans Meadows White of Moratín’s play, 1792). 20th CENTURY 2/4/60. 1st British perf. Antony Estlyn, John Rumney, John Spiers. Dir Margot Lister. Review: Stage 7/4/60, 18. Comment: Council of Five. “The dramatist’s original intention was to lampoon the decadent state of the Spanish theatre in his day” (Stage).

60.92b The Jubilee (P, 1a) Anton Chekhov (trans Elisaveta Fen of Yubiley [written 1891]). 20th CENTURY 2/4/60. Plot: Hochman, Matlaw, Walford. Comment: Council of Five. The play is also known as The Anniversary.

60.92c The Proposal (P, 1a) Anton Chekhov (trans Elisaveta Fen of Predlozheniye, 1890). 20th CENTURY 2/4/60. Natalie Heather Stoney. Plot: Fletcher, French, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Walford. Review: Stage 7/4/60, 18. Comment: Council of Five.

60.93 Needle in the Mind (P, 3a) R. Vernon Beste. LYRIC 3/4/60.* Repertory Players. 1 perf. Cast: Stage 7/4/60, 18; WWT/13. Jim Hailey Neil McCarthy; Mona Hailey Joanna Dunham; Harry Peterson Brian Smith; “Ma” Fogarty Marjorie Rhodes; “Jaunty Dallas” Jeffrey Segal; “Bolshy” Cordwainer Peter Street; Fergus O’Reilly Malcolm Hayes; Rinty Mulligan Simon Oates;

Mrs. Smita Molly Francis; Minnie Smith Carole Mowlam; Nellie Smith Anne Sherwin; Sergeant Holder Terence Bayler; Constable Railton Raymond Adamson. Dir Oscar Quitak; Set Victor Friendly. Review: Stage 7/4/60, 18. Comment: "The central theme of overwhelming and unjustified jealousy" invites inevitable comparisons with Shakespeare's Othello, and "the author has explored the emotions with admirable understanding and sympathy and has drawn the characters remarkably well," but is unable to sustain the play for three acts (Stage).

60.94 Aunt Edwina (C, 2a) William Douglas Home. INTIMATE 4/4/60. Plot: Weintraub.

60.95 The Billy Barnes Revue (Intimate Revue, 2a) Billy Barnes (mus and lyr) and Bob Rodgers (sk). LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 4/4/60. 1st perfd Cabaret Concert Theatre, Los Angeles 1956; 1st British perf Theatre Royal, Brighton, 14/3/60. Cast: Stage 7/4/60, 18; Variety 13/4/60, 58; WWT/13. American Girls Joyce Jameson, Ann Guilbert, Patti Regan, Jackie Joseph; English Boys Ronnie Stevens, Ted Rogers, Terence Cooper, Richard Owens. Pres Harold Fielding, Sam Coslow, Harry Edwards; Pd George Eckstein; Dir Freddie Carpenter; Ch Ross Taylor; Sets Robert Weaver; Light John Wyckham. Plot: Hischak, OTF/2. Reviews: Stage 7/4/60, 18; Times 5/4/60, 7; Variety 13/4/60, 58. Comment: Stage thought that the items in first part of the revue were juvenile but in the second half the material was more pointed. Nevertheless, there was little that was really new but it was presented professionally. Times thought it was "a good, unsophisticated revue with no clever-clever nonsense." Variety reported that Equity had prevented the use of the original American cast but that the English cast performed well. The first New York production (John Golden 4/8/59) ran for 87 performances.

60.96 Lodging for a Bride (P, 2a) Patrick Kirwan. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 4/4/60. Thomas Heathcote, Roger Livesey, Jane Hylton, Olga Lindo, Helena Hughes, Jack Lambert, Robert Shaw, Colin Rix, Griffith James, Jon Laurimore, Hamlyn Benson, Michael Gover, David Battley, Ronald Adam. Dir John Fernald.

60.97 Passage to India (D, 3a) Santha Rama Rau (adpt of E. M. Forster's novel, 1924). STREATHAM HILL 4/4/60. 1st perfd Playhouse, Oxford, 19/1/60. Plot: Bordman/4, 380, Fletcher, French/2; Hischak. Comment: The Oxford Playhouse production prior to opening at the Comedy later in April (60.116). The first New York production (Ambassador 31/1/62) ran for 109 performances.

60.98 Romanoff and Juliet (C, 3a) Peter Ustinov. RICHMOND 4/4/60. 1st perfd Opera House, Manchester,

2/4/56. Michael Atkinson, Kenneth Warren, Ingrid Haffner, Brian Badcoe, Frank Lawless, Beryl Andrews. Pres Alan Miles, Frederic Piffard; Dir James Belchamber; Dec John Piper. Plot: Bordman/4, 346, Fletcher, Hischak, Law, Loney, 299, Matlaw, Salem, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: The first New York production (Plymouth 10/10/57) ran for 389 performances.

60.99 Sam, The Highest Jumper of Them All (P with mus, 2a) William Saroyan. THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 6/4/60.* Cast: Stage 13/4/60, 17; Variety 27/4/60, 72; WWT/13. Sam Hark-Harkalark Murray Melvin; Ted Owlett Griffith Davies; Mr. Horniman Robert Henderson; Poor Man Robin Chapman; Miss Galway, Social Worker Jean Conroy; Ann Moon Claire Isbister; Gypsy Rosemary Johnson; Racing Tipster Anthony Booth; Wally Wailer Frank Coda; Blind Man Michael Forrest; Daisy Dimple Jan Arnold; Father Finnegan William Sherwood; Inspector Overboard John Maitland; Captain Datchikvili Ori Levy; Ambassador Robert Mill; Man with Clock Michael Forrest; Doctor Robin Chapman; Sam's Grandmother Rosemary Johnson; Sam's Grandfather William Sherwood; Newsboy John Keogh; Extras Coral Dent, Patricia Pattrick, Ellis Hill, William Douglas, Victor E. Mane. Dir William Saroyan; Sets John Bury; Cost dgn David Walker; Ch Jean Newlove. Plot: MacNicholas. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 16/4/60, 12; Illustrated London News 23/4/60, 8; Spectator 22/4/60, 574-575; Stage 13/4/60, 17; Tatler 27/4/60, 222; Times 7/4/60, 3; Variety 27/4/60, 72. Comment: The play was written for Theatre Workshop and evolved during rehearsals. Spectator was "disappointed that Joan Littlewood should have bothered to open her theatre to such sticky and undramatic nonsense." Stage said it "is better in its parts and incidental trimmings than in its basic thought and dramatic shape." Tatler declared that the piece's improvised origin was only too palpable and that it was not a play at all. Times said there was no plot, "just talk." On Saroyan sending letters to fifteen critics for their adverse reviews of his play, see Guardian 12/4/60, 8.

60.100 There Was a Lad (P) Joe Corrie. 20th CENTURY 6/4/60. 1st perf? Robert Burns George McDonald; Nance Tinnock Jean Henderson; James Lammie Frank Gorman; Gavin Hamilton William Moore. Dir Harold R. Buttery; Mus arr Ann Donnan. Review: Stage 13/4/60, 19. Comment: The piece was about a period when Robert Burns "was being persecuted and threatened with imprisonment by the Elders of the Kirk, ostensibly for the immorality of his private life, but ... because he had offended them by lampooning them in verse" (Stage).

60.101 Eleven Plus (P, 3a) Kon Fraser. COURT 10/4/60.* 1 perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 13/4/60, 17; WWT/13. Clare

Reviews: Observer 17/4/60, 23; Stage 13/4/60, 17; Times 11/4/60, 14. Comment: English Stage Society. Produced without decor. The play attempted to answer the question "Does modern education, with its emphasis on early specialisation, tend to destroy a child's imaginative faculties?" (Stage) and uses a girl's family experiences as an illustration. Observer thought the play was worth seeing but that "Fraser has crammed too much into three acts."

60.102 The Bad Samaritan (P, 2a) William Douglas Home. RICHMOND 11/4/60. 1st perfd New, Bromley, Kent, 2/9/52. Sally Bazeley, Tristram Jellinek, Ingrid Hafner, David Cole, Nicholas Grimshaw, Beryl Andrews. Pres Frederic Piffard; Dir Derek Benfield; Dec John Piper. Plot: Loney, 282, Vinson. Comment: The piece, set in a Deanery, involved entangled romances embroidered with witticisms.

60.103 The Glass Menagerie (P, 2a) Tennessee Williams. WIMBLEDON 11/4/60. 1st perfd Civic, Chicago, 26/12/44; 1st British perf Theatre Royal, Brighton, 13/7/48. Laura Dorothy Gordon; Amanda Wingfield Viola Keats; Peter Whitbread, Barrie Cookson. Dir Jonathan Alwyn. Comment: This limited run production (25 performances) was staged to celebrate the centenary of Barrie's birth (actually on 9/5/60). The first New York production (Empire 23/12/08) ran for 198 performances.

60.108 The Ages of Man (Recital) George Rylands (anthology drawn from William Shakespeare). HAY-MARKET 13/4/60. 1st perfd Great Drawing Room, Arts Council, London, 1/8/56. Cast: WWT/13. Reviews: Stage 21/4/60, 15; Times 14/4/60, 15. Comment: A one-man show with John Gielgud, who was handicapped by a cold on opening night. The recital lasted two hours.

60.109 Great Expectations (P, 2a) Gerald Frow (adpt of Charles Dickens's novel, 1861). Comment: "Not Dickens at all" (Guardian). Observer found the performance fragmentary, little more than a series of tableaux, and New Statesman was similarly negative. However, Stage said the adaptation "is lively, intelligent and competent," although the novel's "multiplicity of characters, scenes and incidents, cannot really be transferred to the stage without much being lost." Illustrated London News agreed, finding the adaptation and production "extraordinarily well" done. Variety noted "the big cast has a tough job with the twice-nightly presentation as there is a break of only 15 minutes or so between shows. Nevertheless, they showed no signs of strain during the second performance opening night and worked together effectively as a team." On stage adaptations of the novel, see Mary Hammond, Charles Dickens's Great Expectations: A Cultural Life, 1860–2012, London: Routledge, 2016.

Comment: "Kirwan's play, an exposure of the methods of the cheaper Press, was frankly not very satisfying—and its London run was short—but Livesey, at the heart of a thieves' kitchen, was always enjoyable" (Illustrated London News). Stage said that the comedic, dramatic and thriller elements did not blend well together. "A most lively, well-written and well-produced play which is likely to please West-End audiences" (New Statesman).

Comment: "The story is about a clean limbed priest and his cosy, sympathetic wife, who set out to reform the young gangsters who infest the priest's parish in London's dock land. Their weapons appear to be ping-pong, soft-drinks, a friendly smile and a readiness to 'understand.' . . . the story is ridiculously naive and lacking in originality and insight. . . . Jeremy Brett deserves high praise for making the dull priggish priest bearable, even likeable" (Stage). Spectator found the music "pretentious" and the words "stilted and un-singable." Times thought the piece would be more effective as a straight drama.

Then, as quickly as he had come, he walked off again with a last deprecating wave to a cheering house" (Birmingham Post). A "faithful and mechanically efficient" adaptation (Observer); Tribune, however, thought it admirable and "a good play in its own right," a sentiment shared by New Statesman and Variety. Times noted that the production had been revised and improved since its premiere at the Oxford Playhouse. Spectator thought that Zia Mohyeddin was "a brilliant Dr. Aziz."

Comment: The first-night performance ran for over three hours before an enthusiastic audience. Observer said the musical was good, but faulted the sentimentality and syrupiness. The “combination of sob-in-the-throat Italianism and the usual obsessional bonhomme is almost insufferable” (New Statesman). “Even those who find The Most Happy Fella ... too syrupy for their palate or too drawn out for their patience, allow that it is another American musical success and ‘will run for ever’” (Tatler). Times welcomed the piece’s “simple charm.” The first New York production (Imperial 3/5/56) ran for 676 performances

Both plays were on the short side but they were sufficient to give us an exciting taste of the potentialities of the company” (Stage). Comment: This American play was written evidently in 1940, and several American productions were proposed, although I have been unable to locate them. It was given one performance by the Repertory Players in 1957 (see Wearing 57.37) and the Strand performance was also by the Repertory Players. A newly-wed husband discovers he is his wife’s sixth husband and has several of her unruly children to deal with. Guardian thought little of the play which was further hampered by “indifferent” acting and a poor production. However, Times said the play deserved this “second showing,” and it “obviously pleased the audience well” on its transfer to the Westminster. Variety was puzzled that “this inept comedy ... has been translated into eight languages and apparently is doing well in Paris.”

Duggan, Dominic Behan, Brian O’Higgins, Maurice Good, Dermot Kelly. Dir Margaret Hotine. Plot: Schrank, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: A professional play reading by the Catholic Stage Guild. “It concerns a young girl born out of wedlock and the efforts of her aunt and a matchmaker to marry her against her will” (Stage 6/10/60, 8). Stage (28/4) thought Keane ran the risk of “inflating a simple plot almost to bursting point by overwriting." The play was given a New York production at the Irish Repertory Theatre 27/9/2007.

60.122 The Last Word (Thriller, 3a) Jack Popplewell. INTIMATE 25/4/60. 1st perfd Lyceum, Edinburgh, 24/3/58. Comment: "The theme of almost every item is the sex war seen from the point of view of a disabled non-combatant" (Spectator). The revue was hampered by "a persistent flow of substandard lyrics" (Observer). "The cheers from fervent friends were as irritating as the boos, or even more so. At least it was easy to see that much of the show is poor and that several of the players lack the expert professionalism that the material requires" (Stage).

Comment: Pinter took over the role of Mike on 20/2/61. Spectator praised Pleasance, Bates and Woodthorpe for embodying "their roles with really rather uncanny self-absorption." Observer similarly had the highest praise for the acting and production. A "flimsy and ultimately tedious play" (Tribune). Variety praised Pinter's "unique technique of repetitive dialogue, which gives a surprising insight into the characters he is developing." See also Lloyd Evans, 96–99. The first New York production (Lyceum 4/10/61) ran for 165 performances.

Comment: Stage acknowledged that the first act was weak but contended the play had a serious purpose as Sherriff returned to one of his favorite themes—"the ordinary man who suddenly finds himself in alarming circumstances." Observer noted the cardboard characterizations and the initial slow development of the plot. Times said Sherriff was more interested in characters than plot, and Paul Rogers in the lead gave "an admirably relaxed performance."

Comment: English Stage Company. Ionesco attended one of the Strand performances (Stage 23/6/60, 17). Olivier gave a "winning performance" in a production directed with "inventive liveliness" by Welles, but neither could overcome the fatiguing shallowness of the writing (Spectator). Observer wished that the rest of the cast had been as good as Olivier. "No doubt that it is the most significant and powerful play we have seen for years" (Tribune). The first New York production (Longacre 9/1/61) ran for 240 performances.

60.131 Green Room Rag. ADELPHI 1/5/60. Review: Stage 5/5/60, 23. Comment: A notable feature of the "programme was 'The Lord Chamberlain Regrets' a collection of the censored material of Peter Myers, Alec Grahame, Ronald Cass and John Pritchett"—sketches which had been banned by the Lord Chamberlain (Stage); developed later into a revue, see 61.214.

"Of this extremely difficult play an incandescent experience was made" (Observer). While disliking the play itself, Stage called the production "wonderfully professional, not only in the brilliance of the acting, but in such things as the lighting."

60.133 And Suddenly It's Spring (C, 3a) Jack Popplewell. STREATHAM HILL 2/5/60; trfd to HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 9/5/60; trfd to RICHMOND 16/5/60. 1st perfd Royal Court, Liverpool, 14/9/59. Comment: In the play a business woman attempts and fails to reinvent herself as a romantic creature. This was the touring West-End production and cast which closed on 30/4/60 (see Wearing 59.240).

60.134 The Gentle Alliance (C) Frances Rich. WIMBLEDON 2/5/60. 1st perfd, Library, Manchester, 14/7/59. Cast: Stage 5/5/60, 21. Henry Able Peter Whitbread; Judith Standard Diana ten Hove; John Flash Robin Lloyd; Natty Sweeting Jasmine Dee; Richard Flash Peter Haddon. Dir George Rowbottom; Dec Raymond Cusick. Review: Stage 5/5/60, 21. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The play was about "a set of young people who, despite their Bohemian style of life, was fundamentally 'nice'" (Stage).

60.135 Intimate Relations (P, 3a) Jean Cocteau (trans Charles Frank of Les parents terribles, 1938). RICHMOND 2/5/60. Geoffrey Lumsden, Peggy Marshall, Ingrid Haffner, John Dane, Mary Laura Wood. Pres Frederic Piffard; Dir Derek Benfield; Dec John Piper. Plot: Hochman, Matlaw.

60.136 The Pleasure of His Company (C, 2a) Samuel Taylor (with Cornelia Otis Skinner). INTIMATE 2/5/60. Plot: Best/58, 78, Bordman, Bordman/4, 355, Bronner, Hischak, Hochman, Loney, 309, Salem.

60.137 Over the Bridge (P) Sam Thompson. PRINCES 4/5/60. 1st perfd Empire, Belfast, 26/1/60. Cast: Stage 12/5/60, 21; WWT/13. Rabbie White J. G. Devlin; Warren Baxter Colin Blakely; Mr. Fox Patrick McAlinney; George Mitchell Roy Alcorn; Ephraim Smart Michael

O. P. Ltd., Ulster Bridge Productions Ltd.; Dir James Ellis; Dec, Light Henry Lynch-Robinson. Plot: Schrank. Reviews: Guardian 6/5/60, 11; New Statesman 14/5/60, 711; Observer 8/5/60, 21; Spectator 13/5/60, 695; Stage 28/4/60, 1, 12/5/60, 21; Times 5/5/60, 18. Comment: The play (about trade unionism and shipyard workers) had caused considerable controversy in 1959 prior to its eventual production at the Empire, Belfast (see Stage 14/5/59, 1, and numerous reports in Irish Times, 8/5/59, 9, 9/5/59, 1, 11/5/59, 1, 14/5/59, 9, 15/5/59, 7, 18/5/59, 5 and 6/6/59, 1). The controversy arose because of a religious element in the play and a scene in which a man is kicked to death. "An eloquent protest against intolerance" (Observer). "The documentary aspects of the piece compel respect" (Times). New Statesman regretted that, despite its faults, the play enjoyed only a very short run (it was taken off on 7/5/60).

60.138 When I Played Viola (C) Jessica Taylor and Ozah Segal and Stanley Segal. 20th CENTURY 4/5/60.* Prudence Potter, Vivienne Burgess, Monica Merlin, Peggy Butt, Meg Ritchie, Walter Hall, Stanley Segal. Review: Stage 12/5/60, 22. Comment: "The theme deals with the conflict of ideas between a retired actress of the old school and her angry young grandson who is a playwright in the 'kitchen sink' manner" (Stage 28/6/60, 8).

60.139 The Golden Touch (Mus, 2a) James Gilbert (original story, lyr, mus) and Julian More (original story, lib, lyr). PICCADILLY 5/5/60. 12 perf. 1st perfd Lyceum, Edinburgh, 5/4/60. poor reviews of this flop.

60.140 The Enchanted (P) Jean Giraudoux (trans, adpt Maurice Valency of Intermezzo, 1933). TOWER, CANON-BURY, 6/5/60. 1st perfd this adpt Grafton 22/4/34. Cast: TTC. Plot: Best/49, 294, Fletcher, Hochman, Reilly, 81–86, Salem, Shank.

60.144 The Vagabond King (RMP [4pt]) W. H. Post (bk, lyr) and Brian Hooker (bk, lyr; fnd on Justin Huntly McCarthy, If I Were King, 1901) and Rudolf Friml (mus). STREATHAM HILL 9/5/60. 1st perfd Casino, New York, 21/9/25; 1st British perf Opera House, Manchester, 4/4/27. Plot: Best/25, 451–52, Bordman, Bordman/5, 405, French/2, Gänzl, Green, Hischak, Kennedy, Wilmeth. Comment: "John Hanson plays the leading role of François Villon, and is supported by Kenneth Henry as Tabori, and Jane Fyffe as Lady Katherine. Over £10,000 has been spent on new costumes and sets for the show—and there is a new song 'Somewhere In My Heart.' This was written specially for John Hanson by the 79-year-old composer Rudolf Friml only a few weeks ago" (Norwood News 6/5/60, 2). Bryn Barlett was also in the cast. The first New York production ran for 511 performances.

Plot: Bordman/4, 379, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, Matlaw, Vinson, Weintraub. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 28/5/60, 6; Guardian 14/5/60, 5; Illustrated London News 28/5/60, 37; New Statesman 21/5/60, 748, 750; Observer 15/5/60, 21; Spectator 20/5/60, 732; Sphere 28/5/60, 370–71; Stage 19/5/60, 21, 9/2/61, 13; Tatler 25/5/60, 468; Times 13/5/60, 18; Tribune 20/5/60, 11; Variety 25/5/60, 70. Comment: Reviewers noted the almost inevitably episodic nature of the plot which Rattigan managed skillfully, even though an examination of T. E. Lawrence's life did not lend itself to dramatic treatment. Times noted Rattigan had brought "the character of his imagining to an intensely exciting stage life." Alec Guinness as Ross (T. E. Lawrence) received generally good reviews, although the character itself remained rather illusive. Harry Andrews was praised as well. The first New York production, in which John Mills played Ross (Eugene O'Neill 26/12/61), ran for 159 performances.

60.146 Love Everlasting (C, 3a) Winifred Bannister. INTIMATE 16/5/60.* Margaret Gibson, Martin Bradley, Ralph Broome, Betty Cardno, Ethel Edwards, Kenneth Hendel, Adele Strong, Annabel Bishop, Dudley Owen, Valerie Stillwell. Review: Stage 19/5/60, 22. Comment: Stage thought that there was nothing new "in this story of a woman who, goaded by her teenage children's reminder of her imminent middle-age, steps over the traces with an old flame," thereby causing a scandal. The comedy was also too long.

60.147 The Marriage-Go-Round (C) Leslie Stevens. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 16/5/60; trfd to STREATHAM HILL 23/5/60. 1st perfd San Francisco 29/9/58; 1st British perf Lyceum, Edinburgh, 22/9/59.

Plot: Bordman/4, 355, Bronner, French/2, Hischak, 309. Comment: The post West-End production starring John Clements and Kay Hammond (see Wearing 59.236). The first New York production (Plymouth 29/10/58) ran for 431 performances.

60.148 A Taste of Honey (P, 2a) Shelagh Delaney. STREATHAM HILL 16/5/60. Plot: Best/60, 70, Demastes/2, Dorney, Fletcher, Griffiths, Gunn, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub.

Plot: Best/39, 424–25, Bordman/4, 187, Demastes/1, DeVitis, 167–70, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Law, Loney, 213, Salem. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The first New York production (Lyceum 25/12/39) ran for 156 performances.

60.150 Hot Summer Night (P, 3a) Ted Willis. TOWER, CANONBURY, 20/5/60. 1st perfd Pavilion, Bournemouth, 29/9/58. Cast: TTC. Comment: The play involved racial prejudice, marital strife, and the ambitions of a union worker in the East-End of London.

Comment: Joan Littlewood's production overlooked the very basic weaknesses inherent in Clancy's play (Spectator). Times opined that Littlewood was unsure of what to do with the play except to portray Kelly's gang as romantics. Kenneth Tynan (Observer) found similar faults, as did Tribune which also noted that Harry Corbett's Ned Kelly was at odds with the author's conception. Daily Mirror called the production a "comic strip—with songs."

60.154 The Pleasure of His Company (C, 2a) Samuel Taylor (with Cornelia Otis Skinner). Comment: "As a testy tycoon soap manufacturer, Terry-Thomas is plagued by the matrimonial aspirations of his daughter and the crafty machinations of a young employee who wants to marry her" (Stage 7/4/60, 19), a piece that Illustrated London News thought was over-plotted. "For all its briskness, an unfunny and rather tasteless contrivance" (Times). "A mass of irrelevant complications" (Variety). Stage (2/6) praised Richard Briers for his accomplished performance.

Comment: "A piffing little piece of such monumental stupidity that it is incredible this ever reached the West End" (Variety). The piece closed after two days because of similar negative reviews by London critics (see Grossman's letter on the critics and the production history of the play Stage 2/6/60, 19. Several readers agreed with Grossman: Stage 9/6/60, 18, while others did not: Stage 16/9/60, 18). Grossman probably took consolation in the fact that his play was made into a film (1961) which starred Terry-Thomas.

60.159 Goodbye Tomorrow (Mus) David Gowman (bk) and Peter Gladstone (mus) and Barbara Perkins (lyr). PORTCULLIS 28/5/60. * Clive Chester, Gordon Borrie. Dir David Gowman. Review: Stage 2/6/60, 18. Comment: "The story concerns the engagement of a young photographer to a society heiress" (Stage 19/5/60, 12). Stage (2/6) thought that the lyrics were far superior to the derivative music.

60.160 That's for the Birds (C, 3a) "Shirland Quin" [Enid Catesby-Rogers]. APOLLO 29/5/60. * 1 perf. Review: Stage 2/6/60, 18. Comment: Repertory Players. The original title was Bowl of Cherries. The plot involved a literary agent, her frequently absent husband, and an attorney in love with the agent.

60.161 A Clean Kill (Murder Mystery, 3a) Michael Gilbert. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 30/5/60. 1st perfd Pavilion, Bournemouth, 26/10/59. Michael Atkinson, Liane Aukin, Doris Yorke, Helen Christie, Anthony Viccars, Frank Lawless, Garry Marsh. Dir Derek Benfield. Plot: French/2, Loney, 316. Comment: The plot involved the murder of a wife who suspected her husband of infidelity and prevented him from becoming rich. See Wearing 59.273 for details of the successful West-End run.

60.162 The Gardener's Cottage (P, 3a) Helen Hoile and Edward V. Hoile. INTIMATE 30/5/60. 1st perfd Hippodrome, Bolton, 27/7/59. Comment: The play was about the "suspicions of an over-devoted daughter who has taken it upon herself to embrace her father with the love and care which one supposes were formerly the prerogative of her now departed mother. With feminine intuition she suspects the motive of a bright young thing, who enters into their life, and plans to shatter the 'bewitching enchantment.' In reality the 'intruder' has no such designs on the father" (Stage 6/8/59, 10).

Comment: Stage found the entire production very noisy, suffused with shouting; Donald Houston's Henry did not compel "any strong interest or impression of kingliness." Christian Science Monitor faulted the "helter-skelter" speed of the production which left no time for real acting; Times agreed. The brief notice in Sphere includes three illustrations.

Comment: "A tediously over-written drama about an American career woman in London" (Illustrated London News). "An interesting, exasperating, often amusing, but too long, over-wordy mess" (Variety). Spectator provided numerous examples of witty dialogue, praised Irene Dailey in the lead, but likewise faulted the rambling plot. Times noted the production took three hours and failed to establish the lead's character.

Reviews: Stage 9/6/60, 17; Times 2/6/60, 4; Tribune 10/6/60, 9. Comment: The play explored the romance between an aristocratic young woman and a Teddy Boy. Stage deemed it "a play of distinction, with ideas that spring from contemporary social changes and events of great importance and a theme that entirely lifts it into a serious category." On the other hand, Tribune was confused by the piece and did not know what to make of it. Times said the characters lacked verbal variety, but praised Terence Stamp's performance as the Teddy Boy.

Comment: Variety identified the offbeat humour of the revue which depended on individual tastes. "An agreeably gibbering glance at our foibles, is not for those who cry for neatness and order" (Illustrated London News). "Poor material presented with flair ... but somehow it works" (Guardian).

Reviews: Guardian 4/6/60, 6; Stage 9/6/60, 17; Times 3/6/60, 6. Comment: Performed by Robert Atkins' company which did a generally "good job"; Guardian also noted the usual handicaps of outdoor performance. In addition, Stage complained about the faulty amplification system while finding much else to praise. Times praised the "lively clowning," but thought the production was "short on magic."

Comment: "It is vastly professional. Everything is presented with a swoop and a flourish. And when the principals have swooped and flourished on, they talk confidently to the house and turn the whole thing into what is, in effect, a glossy, shiny music-hall programme" (Illustrated London News). Times disagreed, finding "intention and achievement ... get hopelessly confused."

The first play of Wesker's trilogy to be staged at the Court in June and July: "It's a well-deserved tribute to one of Britain's youngest, perceptive playwrights who has already achieved international recognition at the age of 28" (Variety). Cherry Morris, Ruth Meyers, David Saire, and Frank Finlay gave "flawless" performances (Observer), a sentiment shared by Times.

Comment: The original title was Walk Alone Together which took second place in the Stratford-Globe and Mail (Toronto) playwriting competition, 1959. The play was about "the plight of the children in the kind of progressive family where argument is encouraged at every turn and nothing is inhibited" (Illustrated London News). Guardian disliked everything about the play. Variety found the play trite but thought some of the acting was good, as did Times.

Comment: Essentially a "dramatized autobiography" of Millay given a "delightful" two-hour performance (Times). Variety thought that the show was of little interest even to minority audiences. Illustrated London News praised Dorothy Stickney's "poise and feeling." The first New York production (Hudson 8/2/60) ran for 17 performances.

Comment: New Statesman provided a dismissive, condescending review, but predicted a long run. Guardian was "disappointed" particularly by the lyrics and the novel being reduced to "the merest strip cartoon." Observer noted Sean Kenny's restlessly revolving, gargantuan setting" and that Lionel Bart was "our leading exponent of musical comedy." "A hotch-potch, but by no means a disagreeable one" (Times). Variety was full of praise, noted the fourteen curtain calls on opening night, and predicted a successful run on Broadway. Stage echoed that praise and dubbed the piece "the completely successful contemporary British musical." "All said, this is a grand theatrical business, and one that arrives at an hour when the British musical needed something as downright and as likeable" (Illustrated London News). The production ran for 2,618 performances at the New Theatre. The first New York production (Imperial 6/1/63) ran for 774 performances.

Comment: Oxford Playhouse production. Frank Hauser "almost transformed Shaw's pasteboard mouthpieces into breathing human characters" (New Statesman). Guardian dubbed this an agreeable revival. Variety thought the entire production was an "eloquent tribute" to Shaw and particularly praised husband and wife Michael Denison and Dulcie Gray in the leads. Kenneth Tynan (Observer) thought that the play wore badly and was uninteresting; moreover, the play was based on a "flagrant lie," namely that Morell and Marchbanks are two different people when in fact they are two sides of the same character. Times found aspects of the production did not align with Shaw's conception of his work. The first New York production (Princess 9/12/03) ran for 133 performances.

Comment: "It did not draw big houses to Bath's delightful Festival theatre. There were in fact more enthusiastic drama critics than the paying public on the opening night!" (Stage 26/5/60, 18). Variety noted that the performers acted without makeup or any attempt to physically resemble Shaw or Mrs. Campbell. Spectator thought the production would be better as an actual play or as a recital like those given by Emlyn Williams. The New York production (Billy Rose 17/3/60) ran for 52 performances.

The play was set in August 1945 and by the end of the play the characters "all realised that it was wiser to embrace life than to run away from it. And embrace a Cockney, too, if chance offers. Presumably because the Cockney is cheerfully ignorant of the complexities and inhibitions that tend to baffle mankind—knows what he wants and goes for it" (Stage).

60.195 Elsbeth Douglas Reid (One-woman theatre). ARTS 19/6/60. Review: Stage 23/6/60, 17. Comment: Reid, in a one-woman show, performed various sketches and "four tragic cameos."

Plot: Best/60, 51, Dorney, Fletcher, French/2, Hirschak, Hochman, Matlaw, Mplots, Patterson, Salem, Schrank, Shank, Shipley, Weintraub. Comment: The play was originally a one-act Irish language play, An Giall, first performed at Damer Hall, Dublin, 16/6/58. This production was from Wyndham's where it finished its long run on 18/6/60 (Wearing 59.98). The first New York production (Cort 20/9/60) ran for 127 performances.

Comment: Guardian was unimpressed and did not know what the play meant. Variety and Observer praised Warren Mitchell for being the only actor to grasp the author's intentions. Catholic Herald was amazed

"how Anthony Page, the director of this unfunny episode, managed to convince his actors so successfully into believing the 'significance' of this piece so that they managed to give good performances in a lamentable evening of boredom and symbolism."

Comment: The piece consisted of four sketches (located in 1880, 1912, 1927, 1960) on how "love-making" has changed, and Times wondered why it was staged in the West End. Stage admired Tanitch's text but said the production was badly acted: "It calls for expert timing, glittering style and complete assurance. The company for the most part play it like an end-of-term charade." "The material is irremediably thin" (Guardian). "I call it lousy. This feeble little charade was lucky to escape getting the full 'bird' from a tolerant audience" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: The opening of a new theatre (see Stage 23/6/60, 15). The production reminded Guardian just how good Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne were as actors, a sentiment echoed strongly by Stage. Spectator was less impressed. "Without [Peter] Brook's inspiration [the play] would be good, implausible, melodrama, little more. But Alfred Lunt, in agony as the shadows gather round him, and Lynn Fontanne, frigidly revengeful ... seize the imagination powerfully, and ... George Rose, John Wyse, and Brian Wilde keep us in fear" (Illustrated London News). The first New York production (Lunt-Fontanne 5/5/58) ran for 189 performances.

Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The play involved a "woman being the breadwinner and the man keeping house," "an estranged husband planning a reconciliation," along with "a scheming friend," and another lover (Norwood News 24/6/60, 2). Stage enjoyed the play for its "period charm" (the setting was pre-World War II), "and the way in which marital infidelity and divorce are taken as subjects of humour," but noted some anachronisms.

Comment: English Stage

Company, which also presented the first New York production (Mayfair 6/3/61) which ran for 72 performances. Observer found it an “intensely moving play” which had actually grown out of old-fashioned kitchen-sink drama. Times called the play the best in Wesker’s trilogy, with Joan Plowright and Gwen Nelson giving vital performances.

Comment: “It chronicles ... between cheerily irrelevant songs and occasional dances, the complicated romantic manoeuvres of a New York lawyer’s family” (Times). Variety said the cast did as much as it could with poor material. Stage knew the piece was a disaster after the first five minutes.

Plot: Brock, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley. Reviews: Guardian 5/7/60, 7; New Statesman 9/7/60, 46–47; Spectator 15/7/60, 101; Stage 7/7/60, 18; Times 5/7/60, 16; Tribune 8/7/60, 11. Comment: Theatre Workshop. “It is all very jolly, loud, haphazard, and tiresome” (Guardian). Joan Littlewood provided a “good repertory performance” and a considerably adapted script (New Statesman). Times thought that the first half of the adaptation came “close to disaster.” The production revealed “a company where many good actors can be seen struggling through the chrysalis of technique into the colourful individuality of their own peculiar talents” (Spectator). The production was performed on 30/6/60 at the Sarah Bernhardt, Paris (Stage 7/7/60, 17).

60.218 Pygmalion (R, 3a) Bernard Shaw. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 4/7/60. Eliza Doolittle Sarah Churchill; Doolittle Bert Brownbill; Professor Higgins Michael Golden. 60.220 The Sound of Murder (Thriller, 3a) William Fairchild. WIMBLEDON 4/7/60. Peter Marriott Frank Pendlebury; John Bryans, Mary Yeomans, Diana ten Hove, Peter Whitbread. Comment: Peter Haddon Company.

60.221a The Bear (F, 1a) Anton Chekhov (anon trans of Medved, 1888). HOVENDEN 5/7/60. Yalena Gay Cursue; Luka John Hughes; Smirnov Warren Sampson. Plot: French, Hochman, Matlaw, Walford. Reviews: Stage 7/7/60, 18; Times 6/7/60, 4. Comment: Four one-act plays celebrating the births of Barrie and Chekhov, performed under the collective title Two Centenaries.

60.221b Half-an-Hour (P, 3sc) J. M. Barrie. HOVENDEN 5/7/60. 1st perfd Hippodrome 29/9/13. Lady Lilian Alexandra Beauclerc; Carson Kenneth Seeger; Hugh Michael Allaby; Susie Gay Cursue. Plot: Bordman/2, 730, Geduld, 79–81. Reviews: Stage 7/7/60, 18; Times

6/7/60, 4. Comment: Performed under the collective title Two Centenaries. The first New York production (Lyceum 25/9/13) ran for 60 performances.

60.221c The Proposal (P, 1a) Anton Chekhov (anon trans of Predlozheniye, 1890). HOVENDEN 5/7/60. Lomov Michael Allaby; Natalya Lisa Doran. Plot: Fletcher, French, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Walford. Reviews: Stage 7/7/60, 18; Times 6/7/60, 4. Comment: Performed under the collective title Two Centenaries.

60.221d The Twelve-Pound Look (C, 1a) J. M. Barrie. HOVENDEN 5/7/60. 1st perfd Duke of York's 1/3/10. Harry Sims Brian Dent; Mrs. Sims Joan Paton; Marina McConnell. Plot: Bordman/2, 686–87, French/2, Hochman, Geduld, 77–79, Matlaw, Sobel, Walford. Reviews: Stage 7/7/60, 18; Times 6/7/60, 4. Comment: Performed under the collective title Two Centenaries. 60.222a The Sea at Dauphin (P, 1a) Derek Walcott. COURT 10/7/60; trfd to TOWER, CANONBURY, 12/7/60. 1st perfd Mona, Jamaica, 1953; 1st British perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 14/7/60, 15; WWT/13. Afa Leo Càrrèa; Garcia Lionel Ngakane; Augustin Mike Goddard; Hounakin Gordon Woolford; Jules Dudley Hunte; A Priest Mike Gambon; Dauphin Women Olive Douglas, Jean Martin, Jessie Stephens, Clarina Harris, Carla Shackell, Kathleen Roach. Dir Lloyd Reckord; Dec Colin Garland. Reviews: New Statesman 16/7/60, 85; Stage 14/7/60, 15; Times 11/7/60, 3. Comment: New Way Theatre Company. Produced without decor. New Statesman declared the play was both “amateurish” and “talented.” Stage noted that the play suffered because of the difficulty of understanding “what several of the cast were actually saying partly because some of the actors had not notably good diction and vocal projection and partly because our ears were unaccustomed to the dialect.”

60.222b Six in the Rain (P, 1a) Derek Walcott. COURT 10/7/60; trfd to TOWER, CANONBURY, 12/7/60. 1st perfd St. Lucia Arts Guild, Castries, St. Lucia, 1959; 1st British perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 14/7/60, 15; WWT/13. Charlemagne Gordon Woolford; Son-Son Lionel Ngakane; Jo-Jo Leo Càrrèa; Marina Barbara Assoon; Chantal Lloyd Reckord; Moumou Keefe West; Conteur Mike Goddard; Dancer Jeff Henry; Drummer Jeffrey Biddeau; Singer Jean Martin. Dir, Dec as for 60.222a. Plot: Vinson. Reviews: New Statesman 16/7/60, 85; Stage 14/7/60, 15; Times 11/7/60, 3. Comment: New Way Theatre Company. Produced without decor. The full title of the play is Malcauchon; or, Six in the Rain. New Statesman thought the play was “rewarding in spite of the production.” Stage praised the director, Lloyd Reckord, for “a fine performance of blended rich humour and deep pathos as Tiger Chantal.”

60.223 The Aspern Papers (C of Letters, 3a) Michael Redgrave (adpt of Henry James's novel, 1888). HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 11/7/60. Flora Robson, Beatrix Lehmann, Robert Beatty Plot: Bordman/4, 380, Fletcher, French, French/2, Hischak, Loney, 315, Salem. Comment: See also 60.216.

Comment: “What would you do if, having aided a Libyan Sheikh during the war, you found yourself the owner, under his will, of a harem delivered with full honour to your house in Finchley? That is the problem, and the farce goes on from there” (Illustrated London News). “Poor stuff really” (Guardian). “Pace and timing are lacking, the jokes are mostly on a low level of sex innuendo and the complications, essential to farce, are contrived and padded" (Variety).

60.227 Joie de Vivre (C with mus, 2a) Terence Rattigan (adpt of his French without Tears, 1936) and Robert Stolz (mus) and Paul Dehn (lyr). QUEEN'S 14/7/60. 4 perf. 1st perfd New, Oxford, 3/5/60. Comment: "On the first night it was received with boeing and rude comments, and when the curtain came down it stayed down" (Stage). Illustrated London News thought that the play should not have been turned into a musical, especially because the music was not very good. Christian Science Monitor discussed particular aspects of Rattigan's adaptation which were at fault; Times also provided a catalogue of deficiencies.

60.228 All in the Family (C, 2a) Victor Wolfson (adpt of Marc-Gilbert Sauvajan, On a tué grand-père, 1950). WIMBLEDON 18/7/60. 1st perfd this adpt Grand, Leeds, 4/5/59. Frederic Marescaud John Boyd Brent; Armand Gavin Hamilton; Maria Joy Wood; Isabelle Gay Emma; Jasmine Dee, Gillian Cobhold, Peter Whitbread, Constance Fecher, Kenneth Warren, Renny Lister, Aubrey Woods, Roger Hume. Dir Peter Whitbread. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The comedy involved several attempts by a rich family to cover up a murder.

60.229 The Complaisant Lover (C, 2a) Graham Greene. RICHMOND 18/7/60. Ruth Gower, Leslie Wright, Arthur Lawrence, David Conville, Barbara Ogilvie, Leonard Fenton. Dir Stafford Byrne; Dec John Piper. Plot: Best/61, 92, Bordman/4, 378, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Loney, 315, Matlaw, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub.

60.230 Tobias and the Angel (C, 3a) James Bridie. OPEN AIR 19/7/60. 1st perfd Festival, Cambridge, 20/11/30. Plot: Best/36, 493, Bordman/4, 154, Demastes/1, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Salem, Tobin, 94–99. Reviews: Daily Mirror 20/7/60, 5; Guardian 21/7/60, 8, 23/7/60, 12; Illustrated London News 13/8/60, 31; Observer 24/7/60, 24; Stage 21/7/60, 18; Times 20/7/60, 16. Comment: The production was plagued by very wet weather (Guardian). Times praised performances by Alan Judd and Russell Thorndike. Why "risk a subtle play ... The chill of a damp July evening, plus low-flying aeroplanes, conspired against the cast. A bouquet to . . . Russell Thorndike, for a first-rate feat of memory. The rest tried valiantly, but were not quite up to their near impossible task of belting out lines that were written for more quiet delivery" (Daily Mirror). The first New York production (Provincetown 28/4/37) ran for 22 performances.

60.231 A Clean Kill (Murder Mystery, 3a) Michael Gilbert. RICHMOND 25/7/60. Michael Atkinson, David Conville, Diana Cumming, Barbara Leake, Anne Ridler, Rory McDermot. Dir Alexander Doré; Dec John Piper.

Comment: The cast "tried the impossible—to breathe life and tension into a tepid, third-rate melodrama studded with ham dialogue. A young man believed to have died a hero's death in Korea turns up as an escaped murderer from Dartmoor" (Daily Mirror). "The ineptitude [of the play] must be witnessed to be believed" (Stage). "An inept farrago" (Times). "An exercise in puerility" (Variety).

60.234 I'm Talking about Jerusalem (P, 2a) Arnold Wesker. COURT 27/7/60. 29 perf. 1st perfd Belgrade, Coventry, 4/4/60. Comment: English Stage Company. Variety noted that the third part of Wesker's trilogy maintained "the warmth, humanity and perception that characterized the first two plays." Guardian faulted Wesker's "loosely constructed script," but believed he could write better plays "when he knows exactly what it is he is talking about." Tribune complained about the poor casting and acting. However, Daily Mirror disagreed and implored its readers to see the play. See also Lloyd Evans, 94–96.

60.235 The Woman Concerned (Thriller) Leila Forde. HOVENDEN 27/7/60.* Latilla Woodburn, Gay Cursue, Kay Heath, Yvonne Fisher, John Warden, Warren Sampson, Leila Forde; Dir Leila Forde.

60.236a Miss Julie (P, 1a) August Strindberg (trans Elizabeth Sprigge of Fröken Julie, 1889). LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 28/7/60. Cast: Stage 4/8/60, 13; Variety 10/8/60, 54; WWT/13. Kristin Pamela Pitchford; Jean Leon Peers; Miss Julie Diane Cilento; Dir Leila Blake; Dec Disley Jones. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Shank, Shipley, Sobel, Walford. Reviews: Daily Mirror 29/7/60, 15; Illustrated London News 13/8/60, 31; New Statesman 6/8/60, 184–85; Observer 31/7/60, 19; Stage 4/8/60, 13; Tatler 17/8/60, 310–11; Times 29/7/60, 13; Tribune 5/8/60, 7; Variety 10/8/60, 54. Comment: A charity performance in aid of the Save the Children Fund was given 27/7/60. Tribune praised Diane Cilento, as did Illustrated London News: "Miss Cilento, feline-supple and responsive, sustains a part as I have not known her do before. For once I could believe in Julie's past." Times was similarly impressed by this "inspired" casting. However, Daily Mirror was not impressed: she "was more peevish than passionate, and Leon Peers, as the glib seducer, did not help." New Statesman found aspects of the production were too realistic when they should have been suggestive, and Diane Cilento had not "got the stature, the range or quite the voice to bring [the role] off." The production lacked "electricity" (Observer).

60.236b The Proposal (F, 1a) Anton Chekhov (trans Elisaveta Fen of Predlozheniye, 1890). LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 28/7/60. Cast: Stage 4/8/60, 13; Variety 10/8/60, 54; WWT/13. Stepan Stepanovich Choobukov Cameron Hall; Natalya Stepanova Choobukov Hilda Braid; Ivan Vassilievich Lomov Leon Peers. Dir, Dec as for 60.236a. Plot: Fletcher, French, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Walford. Reviews: Daily Mirror 29/7/60, 15; New Statesman 6/8/60, 184–85; Stage 4/8/60, 13; Times 29/7/60, 13; Variety 10/8/60, 54. Comment: See 60.236a. "Ham-handed horseplay" (New Statesman). "An excellent cast coax a surprising amount of amusement from Chekhov's ... tiresome farce." Hilda Braid was "quite brilliant" as the heroine (Times).

60.237 The Art of Living (Revue, 2pt) Art Buchwald and Monty Norman (mus, lyr) and David Heneker (mus, lyr) and Julian More (lyr, sk) and Johnny Speight (add sk). "A full and lavish professional performance" (Stage). "Cleverly adapted to modern taste by Dennis Arundell . . . a handsome production . . . fresh, elegant decors by Peter Rice" (Times).

Comment: National Youth Theatre.

A modern dress production with jazz music and dance. Daily Mirror disliked the modern dress but praised "Neil Stacy, a Brutus with authority, Jane Merrow, who played his wife, and David Weston, a commanding Mark Antony." Stage was untroubled by the modern dress and added praise for performances by Peter March, Peter Lee, Alan Allkins, John Shrapnel, Simon Ward, Derek Clarke, Michael Butcher and Michael Johnson. Stage also noted that this was the first time that girls had been included in a National Youth Theatre production. Spectator found the production had "real impetus and direction."

60.249 You Won't Always Be on Top (C with mus, 3a) Henry Chapman. UNITY 12/8/60. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Stratford East, 9/10/57. Declan Mulholland, Tony Adams, Ron Bevan, Maurice Peckman. Mus Barbara Chapman; Dec Trevor James Neale; Dir Frank Gold. Reviews: New Statesman 20/8/60, 242; Stage 18/8/60, 18; Times 13/8/60, 9. Comment: A satiric comedy about British bricklayers, carpenters and labourers. New Statesman found the production well cast and directed. Stage said the piece was "not really a play at all. It is more akin to what the television people call a 'dramatised documentary,' dealing as it does with what would appear to be quite an ordinary day on a building site."

60.250 The Keep (C, 3a) Gwyn Thomas. COURT 14/8/60.* 1 perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 18/8/60, 18; WWT/13. Ben Morton Dudley Jones; Con Morton Glyn Houston; Miriam Morton Jessie Evans; Russell Morton Lane Meddick; Wallace Morton Emrys Leyshon; Oswald Morton Denys Graham; Mr. Wilmot Ken Wynne; Caradoc Slee Norman Jones. Dir Graham Crowden. Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. The original first night (7/8/60) was cancelled because of a flood at the Court. Stage praised Thomas for presenting "the funny side of Welshness with an incisive but completely unmalicious wit" and the "admirable Welsh cast and the slick and humorous direction of Graham Crowden." New Statesman was equally impressed by the play's enduring humour. However, Spectator thought the broad humour reduced the characters to mere puppets, "pathetically genial caricatures." Times grappled with the play's comedic elements.

Plot: Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Patterson, Purdom, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Review: Stage 18/8/60, 20. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. Stage said it was "a worthwhile, if somewhat inexperienced, production." The first New York performance was given at the Herald Square 17/9/1894.

Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Matlaw, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub. Review: Stage 18/8/60, 17. Comment: For Stage the production lacked polish: the piece needed "all the rehearsal it can get if its lunatic mood is to be truly conveyed to an audience. Mr. Doré seems to linger too long over the calculated offbeat qualities and the production is inclined to be pedestrian.” The first New York production (East 74th Street 18/9/61) ran for 40 performances.

60.257 The Art of Living (Revue, 2pt, 31sc) Art Buchwald and Monty Norman (mus, lyr) and David Heneker (mus, lyr) and Julian More (lyr, sk) and Johnny Speight (add sk). Comment: New Statesman dubbed it “a cheap show, in many senses.” Observer found much more to like but said that some sketches lacked taste. “Intermittently funny and occasionally witty but is generally patchy in content.” “Buchwald is no Thurber, but as the American in Paris he has a gimlet eye for the foibles of his travelling countryman, and he is master of the straight faced joke” (Tatler).

Reviews: Stage 25/8/60, 14; Times 23/8/60, 11. Comment: Published as Mock-Orange. Peter Haddon Company. Blackmore had reduced “stock drawing-room comedy to its basic elements of corny unimportance” in this piece about “the bridal trials of two sisters”; “The regular, two-for-the-price-of-one Monday night audience at this theatre, predominantly late middle-aged, took it bravely and even with some pleasure; but their reactions left little doubt that their enthusiasm was directed towards the cast” (Stage). Times wondered whether Blackmore intended to parody this “cosy type of pre-war play.”

Comment: Stage thought the music was thin and everything was dated; the piece should have been left as a memory of theatrical times past. Variety also questioned the wisdom of the revival even with a slightly updated book. The New Statesman reviewer had never seen the piece before and so was more intrigued by the plot and did not express an opinion on the intrinsic worth of the production. Times pronounced it a success. The first New York production (Imperial 2/9/24) ran for 557 performances.

Because of the bad notices, tickets for the week of 31 August were free (see Daily Mirror 30/8/60, 4, Guardian 26/8/60, 16). Illustrated London News (27/8) carried various illustrations of the production. Comment: Daily Mirror interviewed

Stephen Lewis, a "carpenter and electrician's mate turned actor;" he performed the role of Wilkie under the name of Stephen Cato. "Joan Littlewood has staged with her familiar machine-gun pace, while the simple, realistic setting of John Bury also could scarcely be bettered" (Variety). Stage declared that never before had Littlewood really "brought the heart-beat of life to the stage quite so effectively." Guardian called it a "proletarian kitchen comedy, a nostalgic picture of Stepney as it never was," but still thought it was effective. However, Times thought the piece "corrects our customary sentimentalisation."

retitled production of Murder on Arrival by George Batson and adapted by Peter Hoar and Gawn Grainger, which was first performed at the Summer Theatre, Frinton, 7/8/58. It was later produced at the Westminster on 16/6/59 (Wearing 59.137).

LYRIC, HAMMER-SMITH, 5/9/60. 1st perfd Playhouse, Oxford, 20/6/60. Mike Bawtree, Neil Bratton, Serena Gillilan, Ron Heapy, Roger Mills, Vicky Morris, Kate Mundy, Derek Wood. L Associated Theatre Seasons Ltd.; Lic, Pres J. Baxter Somerville; Dir Ron Heapy, Iain Mackintosh; Ch, Add mus Rex Nettleford; Dgn Iain Mackintosh, Nick Linfield, Alex von Bethmann-Hollweg. Reviews: Guardian 7/9/60, 8; Stage 8/9/60, 18; Times 6/9/60, 13. Comment: Worcester College Buskins. "For the most part the material is poor. No member of the company is outstanding, the girls being particularly weak" (Stage). Times thought that the piece suffered from too many contributors; thus there was little cohesion.

The production had been presented earlier at the 1960 Edinburgh Festival. Guardian thought that a spoof on "high romance seems more amusing in prospect than in the event," and much of the production was merely slapstick. "No more than a theatrical romp that goes on far too long" (Tatler), a sentiment echoed by Spectator and Times.

Comment: "It is set 'in a charity home for retired actresses.' It has an extraordinary and largely veteran cast, and I believe that it should touch sincerely all who care for a theatre that (some hold) is slipping away" (Birmingham Post). Times shared that sentiment. Variety questioned whether "the play will have a wide appeal." The piece had to wait over thirty years for the first New York production (Walter Kerr 16/12/99) when it ran for 186 performances.

Review: Stage 15/9/60, 18. Comment: An earlier version of the play was given a rehearsed reading at the Hovenden on 12/10/57 (Stage 17/10/57, 11). Stage thought that this examination of the historical figure still needed further revision as it was too long in performance. The production was presented at the Playhouse, Oxford, on 26/9/60.

Comment: Observer faulted the adaptation which resulted in "a ramshackle piece of purely whimsical entertainment," and said the first-night audience "understandably found it wanting." Illustrated London News also called it "ramshackle." Tatler was far less critical and declared Albert Finney in the lead "keeps us continuously interested in both the outer and inner workings of the poor feckless lad's mind." Times praised Finney's "compelling performance," Lindsay Anderson's "imaginatively expert" direction, and supporting performances from Mona Washbourne, Ethel Griffies, and Ann Beach. The first New York production (Gate 17/3/65) ran for 30 performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. Variety was bemused regarding the play's message. Guardian found the humour "feebly juvenile," while Observer said it was "elephantine," and the play had "no anchor in reality." Stage found the piece dated and in the style of 1920s expressionistic drama; it also noted the use of masks in the production, "even if they cannot give the play significance."

Comment: Spectator dubbed the piece a "second string American musical" that frequently aimed at provoking "stock responses which just do not exist here." Variety said it was dubious "that Britain, with its pantomime tradition" would accept the piece; it didn't. "The very title is soporific" (Guardian). New Statesman wondered how "entertainment of such mind-dissolving tedium as this is the accepted norm of the West End stage" (and see following item). The first-night audience both cheered and booed the production, the boos being the louder (Stage, Times). The first New York production (Phoenix 11/5/59) ran for 460 performances.

Comment: As it had done for Once Upon a Mattress, New Statesman wondered how "entertainment of such mind-dissolving tedium as this is the accepted norm of the West End stage." Observer said it was "a holiday play, languid and sportive." "An inoffensive and pointless comedy-drama" (Variety), a view shared by Times which said it was a throwback to the 1920s. "The first night of the production was one of the most miserable experiences I have ever known," and Françoise Rosay in the lead could do nothing with this "rubbishy piece" (Stage). The first New York production (Royale 2/4/53) ran for 4 performances.

Review: Stage 29/9/60, 21. Comment: Interval Theatre Group. The play involved a refugee family in England and the difficulties which arise when the father is belatedly reunited with his family. Stage faulted aspects of the play including its prolix dialogue.

60.298 For Seven Good Reasons. SCALA 26/9/60. Reviews: Observer 2/10/60, 24; Times 27/9/60, 13. Comment: A programme of monologues and songs performed by Joyce Grenfell. The "seven good reasons" were the seven charities who received the proceeds from Grenfell's performances. Observer thought that Grenfell's performance was "sprightly" and the programme "gamely ventured far afield in quest of absurdities." Times was similarly fulsome in its praise.

"An extremely elegant piece, and it must be added an extremely thin one. ...This elegant nonsense is elegantly staged and acted with elegance" (Times).

Comment: New Statesman and Observer praised Reece Pemberton's set, and the performances of Johnny Sekka, Philip Bond, and Delena Kidd. Times enjoyed all aspects of the play and production. Variety noted the production received "an enthusiastic opening-night reception," but did not think the adaptation was strong enough to warrant an extended run. The first New York production (Martin Beck 29/3/56) ran for 44 performances.

Comment: Braddon had been a prisoner of war for four years. The play, which New Statesman found "insubstantial," involved prisoners of war in Singapore as World War II came to a close. Variety thought that the piece was more documentary than dramatic, and that war plays "have finally outworn their welcome."

Comment: Franco Zeffirelli's first Shakespearean production. Spectator felt that verse speaking had been half-sacrificed to "incidental theatrical effects." "Speech is often the merest running accompaniment to the acting. It is, in short, a production for the eye, not for the ear. And when I praise the acting of John Stride and Judi Dench, of Peggy Mount and Alec McCowen I must also regret their too frequent vocal inadequacy, as well as Miss Dench's habit—due, I dare say, to nervous strain—of paraphrasing some of her speeches, substituting a word here and a word there" (Illustrated London News). "Provocative not merely on a novelty level, but because of its imaginative power, freshness, and boldness of approach, qualities that bring the play alive in a new way" (Stage). Observer was full of praise for virtually everything in the production apart from some textual cuts. Times praised only the setting and the fighting.

Comment: Bernard Cribbins performed in a wheelchair because of a foot injury. New Statesman dubbed the revue "fast-moving," "good humoured," and "witty without being destructive." Times called it "a traditional British revue." Tribune dismissed the piece as a flat trifle.

Comment: Gerald Frow was the Mermaid's publicist and the piece was commissioned by the Mermaid. The plot explored "what might happen if a well-behaved ape ... fell into the hands of an unscrupulous publicity expert" (Times). Variety thought the work was "heavy-handed and flat-footed, [and] falls between satire and farce." Observer found the piece so "horribly unfunny" that the reviewer (Kenneth Tynan) could bear to see only the first half of the production. Tribune admired the play: "The satire is biting and accurate," only it was "on the ropery side." "Unfortunately, [Frow's] joke is laboured and too often the gags are uneasily near to sneers. His lyrics and music are largely undistinguished" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: The production had been mounted for the Dublin Festival at the Gaiety on 12/9/60. Variety commended Siobhan McKenna's radiant performance. "An evening of pure gold" (New Statesman). Kenneth Tynan (Observer) declared he had lost his taste for Synge's style, while Mervyn Jones (Tribune) believed Playboy should be produced as a dark work, but isn't. Times said the production should not be missed, but noted the difficulty of following the cast's Irish accents. The first New York performance was at Maxine Elliott's in November 1911.

Comment: English Stage Company. The play “had its premiere in English at the Playhouse, Nottingham, on April 5 [1959] ... in a version by Basil Ashmore” (Stage 27/10/60, 16). New Statesman admired the production but thought the comedy element had been stressed too much; Spectator shared that opinion. Rex Harrison garnered considerable praise for his performance.

60.324 Fifty Not Out (Revue) Peter Myers (deviser, bk) and Ronald Cass (deviser, bk, mus) and John Pritchett (mus) and Alec Grahame (add material). Plot: OTF/2. Review: Stage 20/10/60, 15. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The revue was commissioned to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the theatre. It was “not a new revue for the occasion, but a skimming of much of the cream of past revues by Pester Myers and Ronald Cass, with the addition of a certain amount of new material, some of which has a bearing on the present occasion” (Stage). Thus it lacked overall coherence.

Comment: Illustrated London News found the play unmemorable because it was “simply a mechanical exercise.” Similarly, Stage said it was “an odd affair particularly because it is so difficult to trace any authentic touch of either Saroyan or Cecil. One has the impression of a do-it-yourself play, put together from odd bits and pieces bought at several bargain counters.” The piece proved that “in her own field Miss Agatha Christie is hard to beat” (Times).

Comment: “A sound, respectable study of family cohesiveness,” with good performances from Brenda Bruce and Pamela Brown as two unmarried sisters who ultimately cannot bear to be separated (Observer). Terence Stamp did what he could in the role of an "Angry Young Blockhead," while Michael Gough gave an excellent performance as an alcoholic (New Statesman). Times found the play somewhat monotonous but nevertheless worthwhile and with good performances.

Plot: Vinson. Reviews: Spectator 28/10/60, 655; Stage 20/10/60, 16 (Cheltenham perf); Times 24/10/60, 6. Comment: Cheltenham Theatre Company. Produced without decor. Spectator praised both Jeanne Hepple, who "played a Cockney girl from Brixton who falls for, and struggles to keep, a West Indian student," and Reckord's play (although it did need a little revision). Times faulted the play for making a significant character (Terry) inarticulate.

60.334 Abelard and Heloise (A Correspondence for the Stage, 2a) Ronald Duncan. ARTS 24/10/60.* Cast: Stage 27/10/60, 15; Variety 2/11/60, 58. Heloise Virginia Maskell; Abelard Iain Cuthbertson. Pres A. H. Reviews: Guardian 26/10/60, 7; Spectator 4/11/60, 291; Stage 27/10/60, 15; Times 25/10/60, 14; Variety 2/11/60, 58, 61. Comment: "In the ugly mass of histrionics, pompous music, affected lighting and distracting decor, the words are never allowed to speak for themselves" (Stage). "Static drama finally achieves atrophy" (Spectator).

60.335 Go Back for Murder (Thriller, 2a) Agatha Christie (adpt of her Five Little Pigs, 1942). HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 24/10/60. Plot: French/2.

Comment: New Statesman called the piece "a provincial play, a bog opera, without reference or reality outside rural Ireland," and also noted it had received 400 amateur productions in one year. "This unpleasant Irish melodrama is being staged for two weeks. Only the most optimistic and indulgent would welcome a longer run" (Variety). "Almost entirely preposterous" (Guardian).

60.337 The Tender Trap (C, 2a) Max Shulman and Robert Paul Smith. INTIMATE 24/10/60. 1st perfd Wilbur, Boston, 25/9/54; 1st British perf Theatre Royal, Nottingham, 18/4/55. Plot: Best/54, 368, Bordman/4, 324, Bronner, Hischak, Loney, 287. The first New York production (Longacre 13/10/54) ran for 102 performances.

60.338a Androcles and the Lion [Fable P, Prol, 4a] Bernard Shaw. UNITY 28/10/60. 1st perf this version St. James's 1/9/13. Ferrovius Thomas Mercer; Androcles Denis Comey; Lavinia Shirley Newman; Emperor Ray Cross; Lentulus Arthur Bishop; Lion Molly Sole. Dir Thomas Mercer; Dec Nicholas Ferguson. Plot: Bordman/3, 21, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Purdom, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Reviews: Stage 3/11/60, 13; Times 29/10/60, 9; Tribune 4/11/60, 11. Comment: Tribune enjoyed seeing the play but declared "the acting is very bad indeed"; Stage had a more favourable opinion. A German version by Siegfried Trebitsch was performed at the Kleines, Berlin, 25/11/12. The first New York performance was at Wallack's 27/1/15.

60.338b L'après-midi de Mr. Shaw (P) Crome Mathers. UNITY 28/10/60.* Shaw Ian Sparrow; Eliza Aviva Narod. Dir, Dec as for 60.338a. Reviews: Stage 3/11/60, 13; Times 29/10/60, 9. Comment: This piece, written especially for this double bill, was set in "the garden at Shaw's Corner, where two lady guests are awaiting the arrival of the great man" (Stage). After Shaw discusses what his next play will be, the curtain rises on Androcles.

60.339 Border Incident (C, 9sc) Leslie Bush-Fekete and Marie Bush-Fekete (based on play by Mira Avrech). STREATHAM HILL 31/10/60; trfd to HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 7/11/60.* Cast: Stage 3/11/60, 8. Cpt

Comment: Shop Window. Stage faulted the acting abilities of the cast. New Statesman thought little of the play and production; however, the reviewer went to this old Yiddish theatre not to criticize but 'to take part in a communal activity which the radio, television and the cinema have all signally failed to stamp out.' The first New York production (Fulton 26/9/45) ran for 477 performances.

60.341 The Importance of Being Oscar (One-man show, 2a) Micheál MacLiammóir. APOLLO 31/10/60. 1st perfd Gaiety, Dublin, 18/9/60. Cast: Variety 9/11/60, 64; WWT/13. Comment: MacLiammóir told the story of Wilde's life with illustrations from Wilde's work. Tribune praised MacLiammóir's "keen intelligence and deep compassion." New Statesman declared that only Mac-

Liammóir could pull off this "stage biography" which he had created. Variety noted the performance lasted for nearly three hours. Times said the performance ("done almost without a note") was received enthusiastically. MacLiammóir performed in the first New York production (Lyceum 14/3/61) which ran for 31 performances.

60.342 The Pleasure of His Company (C, 2a) Samuel Taylor (with Cornelia Otis Skinner). WIMBLEDON 31/10/60. Plot: Best/58, 78, Bordman, Bordman/4, 355, Bronner, Hischak, Hochman, Loney, 309, Salem. Comment: Peter Haddon Company.

60.343 A Shred of Evidence (P, 3a) R. C. Sherriff. RICHMOND 31/10/60. Michael Beint, Pamela Vezey, William Gaunt, William Redmond, Alan Paton, Margot Field. Dir John Gordon Ash; Dec John Piper. Plot: Bull/1, Demastes/1, French/2, Salem.

60.344 The Ticking Clock [(C thriller) Ivan Butler and Kenneth Watson]. INTIMATE 31/10/60. 1st perfd Empire, Peterborough, 10/3/52. Comment: "Here we have a 'whodunnit' complete with howling dog, pouring rain, isolated inn, murder, sudden darkness, pistol shots, screaming women, disappearances, secret panels, explosions, and, of course, a ticking clock. And yet, despite this blood-and-thunder formula, the result is a thoroughly enjoyable play with a good, keep-you-guessing plot" (Stage 13/3/52, 10).

60.345 The Visit (Parable, 3a) Friedrich Dürrenmatt (adpt Maurice Valency of Der Besuch der alten Dame, 1956) and James Stevens (mus). HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 31/10/60. Plot: Fletcher, French/2 Griffiths, Hochman, Law, Loney, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shipley.

Comment: Stage thought that Zizi Jeanmaire's performance was only moderately successful, a judgment shared by Variety which did concede the latter portion of her programme provided her with better opportunities. Times described the production as "a revue-cum-cabaret," with an emphasis on Jeanmaire's dramatic talents.

60.347 This Way to the Tomb! (D, 2pt) Ronald Duncan and Benjamin Britten (mus). ARTS 2/11/60. 1st perfd Mercury 11/10/45. Cast: Stage 10/11/60, 13; Variety 9/11/60, 64; WWT/13. Comment: Variety opined the play was only of academic interest; Times agreed it was dated and wondered why in 1945 it was "taken for a glorious beginning." Illustrated London News said the play had not worn well and little in the play was memorable, while New Statesman observed that the production was poorly attended by a bored audience.

60.348 Chin-Chin (C, 4a) Willis Hall (adpt of François Billeldoux Tchin-Tchin, 1959). WYNDHAM'S 3/11/60. 164 perf. 1st perfd King's, Edinburgh, 17/10/60. Comment: Anthony Quayle and Celia Johnson rendered the play more charming than chilling (Spectator). Christian Science Monitor and New Statesman, however, disagreed, both calling their acting "superb," while Variety thought that the longevity of the production would depend upon "the marque strength of the two stars." "It is badly produced. The evening only affords a thin, unbelievable little glimpse of flawed lives" (Guardian). Tribune disagreed, finding the play "very funny" and the dialogue reminiscent of Chekhov. A different version of Tchin-Tchin was produced in New York (Plymouth 23/10/62) and ran for 222 performances.

60.349 A View from the Bridge (P, 2a) Arthur Miller. Reviews: Stage 10/11/60, 13; Times 7/11/60, 16. Comment: Repertory Players. The play was originally banned by the Lord Chamberlain in 1954 because "one of the principal characters in the drama, Ethel le Nève, is still alive" (Stage 21/10/54, 1). The play was "a documentary of the last ten months in the life of Dr. Crippen" and much of the material in it was common knowledge. Edward Woodward and John Arnatt gave very good performances (Stage). Times found the characterization was weak.

60.351 The Aspern Papers (C of Letters, 3a) Michael Redgrave (adpt of Henry James's novel, 1888). RICHMOND 7/11/60. Michael Atkinson, Margaret Ward, Hazel Coppen, Anne Ridler, Henry Woolf, Margot Field. Dir John Gordon Ash; Dec John Piper. Plot: Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Patterson, Purdom, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Comment: The Oxford Playhouse production seen previously at Piccadilly and Wyndham's.

60.353 The Complaisant Lover (C, 2a) Graham Greene. WIMBLEDON 7/11/60. Victor Rhodes Douglas Malcolm; Mary Joy Wood; Clive Root Frank Pendlebury; Robin Peter Sanders. Plot: Best/61, 92, Bordman/4, 378, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Loney, 315, Matlaw, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: Peter Haddon Company.

60.354 Monkey Business (FC) Glyn Partos. INTIMATE 7/11/60.* Cast: Stage 10/11/60, 17. Review: Stage 10/11/60, 17. Comment: MPS 543. "It concerns an impecunious zoo keeper and his family, over-pledged to the never never and ever on the brink of financial disaster, who are saved at a moment of financial crisis by the appearance of formidable but lonely mother-in-law" (Stage). Stage praised the farce generally although it was overwritten in places.

Comment: New Statesman praised this charming production. Guardian thought that, while Steele was talented, the role was beyond his abilities. On the other hand, Judi Dench "improves with each new costume she dons" (Observer). Times said the production provided "high-spirited entertainment" in a straightforward manner.

Comment: A charity preview was given prior to opening night. Variety noted the difficulties of producing a specifically American play in London, but praised the strong cast; however, only Wendy Hiller attempted a Southern accent, and that poorly. New Statesman compared Hellman unfavorably with Faulkner and Tennessee Williams: the play was "based on the cliché of Southern heavy drama, concealment." The first New York production (Hudson 25/2/60) ran for 456 performances.

Comment: The play was about "three Scottish sisters, in Paris, ... suitably (or unsuitably) entangled with three suitors, two French and one American" (Birmingham Post). Variety called it "a trite and ineffectual comedy." Designed solely to make the audience titter (Times).

Comment: The play, revised for this production, involved four young men in Liverpool recalling past events. Birmingham Post said the play was shapeless and the dialogue sounded like a tape-recording. New Statesman called it a "sauntering drama: in place of action there is theme, drift, documentary, haphazard encounter, and a passage of people," but praised the performances of Kinnear, Coles, Whitelaw, and Bell. Spectator discussed the play's weaknesses in construction which stemmed from its radio play origins. Times criticized Corbett's direction for importing "a lot of farcical business and Theatre-Workshop rushing around."

60.363 The Good-Natured Man (C) Oliver Goldsmith. TOWER, CANONBURY, 18/11/60. 1st perfd Covent Garden 29/1/1768. Cast: TTC. Plot: Gassner, 365, Hochman. Reviews: New Statesman 26/11/60, 828; Stage 24/11/60, 17; Times 19/11/60, 12. Comment: New Statesman praised the staging by David Thompson. Stage said that the production proved the play was "not worthy of the neglect into which it has fallen." Times noted that Goldsmith had once lived in Canonbury Tower and said "the play emerges in revival as a trivial piece enlivened by a talent well suited to the stage for energy and inventiveness, yet incapable of a full-blooded statement either serious or comic."

Comment: The play centered around a group of bohemians in Sydney, Australia, and a game of musical beds (New Statesman). Guardian declared “the play wants craftsmanship of the most primitive kind.” “There is a thread of a story line, but as the play lacks construction technique, it keeps getting bogged down by the one-track dialog” (Variety). “Frith Banbury’s direction is a little loose, and none of the players—not even Badel—seems ever quite sure precisely what symbolic values are being presented” (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. Performed under the collective title Trials by Logue. The piece was a reworking of Antigone using modern dress and set during the Hungarian uprising. Guardian thought more of this than Cob and Leach which “as parody” was “thin.” Stage did not find either play compellingly significant. Observer identified the linking theme of the two items: “Is the State justified in suppressing individual liberty.” Variety noted that in the productions Lindsay Anderson “forsakes theatrical illusion by having the scenery shifted into position (‘A little more this way, Alfie’) in full view of the audience. It’s a gimmick, admittedly, but one that doesn’t help achieve anything.”

Comment: The plot "involved money-making and spouse-seducing [acted out] in a Peter Pan world of whimsical fantasy" (Spectator). Stage had a generally favorable view of the piece, while Variety predicted accurately that "this frail piece of whimsy will not hold up," as did Illustrated London News. The authors "have no wit to speak of and only sufficient ingenuity to keep the house laughing somewhat half-heartedly at fantastic situations" (Times). Odile Versois' West-End debut.

Comment: Variety noted that the plot was rambling and flimsy and involved "a series of trivial domestic mixups" during Christmas holidays. Observer called it "an excruciating piece of seasonal whimsy." Doubtless the presence of Cicely Courtneidge and Robertson Hare contributed to the play's long run, Times noting that this sequel to Millar's The Bride and the Bachelor had received poor critical notices and yet "ran for 17 buoyant months" (see Wearing 56.280).

The play involved a mixed-race man discovering his father is white. Spectator opined that this anti-apartheid play was produced only because it was written by a white South African. Times found the play effective in places but lacking in character development elsewhere. The play's Afrikaans title was Die Verminktes

Comment: The play had been revised since its earlier performance at the Arts. "So much is written, and often so pompously, about little off-beat plays meaning precisely nothing that it is time somebody said, without reserve, that here is an unpretentious piece of genuine drama worth the entire collection. Its minor flaws are unimportant: the complete experience stays in the grateful memory" (Birmingham Post).

Comment: Bristol Old Vic Company. The play was about a group of students at a provincial university and discussed various relevant topics. Several reviewers thought that the play was spoiled by the gratuitous death of a student. Spectator noted that this production was the fourth version of the text by the authors.

60.388 The Misadventures of Mr. Pickwick (Mus) Arnold Hinchcliffe (mus, lyr, bk; adpt of Charles Dickens, Pickwick Papers, 1837). English Stage Company. Produced without decor. The plot concerned laborers repairing a sea wall after some flooding. Observer noted the excellent creation of characters, while Times thought the play lacked a "sense of place."

60.391a The Postman (P, 1a) Murray Schisgal. BRITISH DRAMA LEAGUE THEATRE 11/12/60.* Cast: Stage 24/11/60, 8. Plot: Bordman/4, 386, Vinson, Walford. Reviews: New Statesman 17/12/60, 969; Observer 18/12/60, 18; Stage 15/12/60, 15; Times 12/12/60, 6. Comment: In-Stage. Performed under the collective title Schrecks. The title was changed later to The Tiger (64.147a). The company for this triple bill comprised Gerard Benson, Marion Diamond, Joe Goodman, Gillian Watt, Elizabeth Smith, Julian Beck, Hugh Lovegrove, Leonard Fenton, Philippa Reid; Dir Charles Marowitz. "Schisgal builds up the pathos of these little machine people who know only too well that they are human" (New Statesman). Observer likewise praised the three plays. Times detected the influences of Beckett and Ionesco in the three plays. The first New York production (Orpheum 31/5/63) ran for 200 performances.

Review: Stage 15/12/60, 14; Times 12/12/60, 6. Comment: Repertory Players. The play "conforms to no convention and unfortunately has very little to say either. Elements of country house comedy, hidden passion and dark mystery all make an entrance, but none is developed and the whole thing finishes on a note of complete inconsequence" (Stage).

Comment: Memorial Theatre Company, Stratford-upon-Avon, its first London production. "A forthright, noisy affair, played all out for melodrama" (Observer). "The production as a whole lacks atmosphere and dramatic pressure. Without the presence of Peggy Ashcroft it would be undistinguished. To my mind, its chief fault is an extraordinary air of gentility" (Stage). Guardian felt that the audience had been somewhat unmoved by the production. Tribune opined that if the play were attributed to Shakespeare it would be performed much more frequently.

Comment: Observer called the production a "gross travesty" of the original, a judgment diametrically opposed by Guardian. Illustrated London News marvelled at the numerous staging devices, particularly a revolving bank and a taxi. Times praised the young cast, the staging, and the absence of "coyness and whimsy."

60.400 A Strange Coming (Nativity P) [Sylvia Read]. MORELAND HALL 15/12/60. Comment: A nativity play with a comedic element.

Comment: Toynbee Players. "The characters are mushrooms, daisies, grasshoppers and similar pleasing characters from the field, and toadstools and other toxic forms of life from the woods. This might well be calculated to amuse and perhaps to instruct small children but unfortunately the story concerns a nightclub singer who is trying to get a film contract" (Stage).

Comment: Donald Sinden drew praise from Birmingham Post while "Peter is again Julia Lockwood, wistful and true; and she has in Juliet Mills a Wendy to do honour to the name. I need add only that Russell Thorndike is once more tearing Smee's calico; you will know that everything is well in the Never-Never Land." Stage complained that some of the dialogue was inaudible. Times discussed the notion that productions of the piece had become too ritualized and that perhaps a fresh approach was needed. The first New York production (Empire 6/11/05) ran for 223 performances.

Comment: "As the title implies, this is another play with four characters and with a plot that depends on their not making two couples. It has no ideas and no contemporary relevance, does not pretend to have either, and succeeds in being very amusing in a style that could date from any year of the past 30" (Stage 15/10/53, 12).

Comment: Memorial Theatre Company, Stratford-upon-Avon. "Superb" (New Statesman). Birmingham Post gave Geraldine McEwan's quirky Olivia particular attention, while Guardian praised Dorothy Tutin, as did Observer. Stage "found very little to admire" in a production which turned the comedy into pantomime. "As remote from what Shakespeare intended as a music hall song is from Mozart" (Christian Science Monitor). "Funny only in patches, and the weakness of the romantic side ... is more noticeable" (Times). "Gay and zestful with the comedy blending excellently with the romantic passages" (Variety).

Comment: "A village-street drawing room comedy made musical made magical (Jack in the Beanstalk)" (New Statesman). "Mere pastoral whimsy and there were not a few in the first-night audience who, while not excusing the man who stormed out before the interval crying 'Rubbish,' secretly sympathised with him" (Stage). The piece followed the formulaic Reynolds and Slade tradition established by Salad Days, but unsuccessfully so (Times). "It's a colossal floperoo, a feeble charade that merely clutters a professional stage" (Variety).

Comment: A charity preview was given 19/12/60 in aid of Denville Hall. New Statesman found the production dull and faulted the humanizing of fairyland. Observer liked the romantics in the play but found the remainder was presented unevenly. Stage was pleased that "the essential values of the play" were not obscured; Tom Courtenay captured the reviewer's imagination. Times noted the first-night performance "received vociferous applause," and thought director Michael Langham strived for "comic inventiveness" perhaps at the expense of the play's poetic side.

Comment: New Statesman thought that this was the best of the children’s plays on offer. “Charming to watch, if slow-moving. The atmosphere-setting is leisurely, the dialogue repetitive” (Stage). Times held a somewhat negative view of the piece.

Comment:

English Stage Company. The play had been partially revised since the Coventry premiere. Tribune said the play was not as good as A Taste of Honey because the characters were drawn sketchily. Variety thought Delaney still needed to learn how to construct a play instead of merely presenting an “untidy slice of life in a dingy Northern town,” a verdict shared by Spectator and Observer.

Comment: Performed under the collective title Three. New Statesman said the piece allowed Richard Briers to show he was “a superb player and timer of nonsense.” Christian Science Monitor enjoyed Simpson’s “sense of topsy-turvy reasoning” which it compared to that of Lewis Carroll.

Comment: A “skilful entertainment with a story about a respectable solicitor who becomes involved with crooks through his passion for acquiring miniatures” (Stage). “Every collector of Alastair Sim will be in bliss” during his performance as a Lincoln’s Inn solicitor (Illustrated London News). There were also polished performances from Peter Copley, Allan Jeayes, Helen Christie and George Selway (Variety). Gilbert’s combination of comedy with thriller proved to be “an unsatisfactory compromise” (Observer).

The plot concerned a heterogeneous group of people living in a West London boarding house (Stage). "It rambles fussily for the best part of two hours" before there is a "tolerably funny scene" (Times). It was generally agreed Roy Kinnear stole the show playing three roles.

Comment: New Statesman found the piece very complex, fantastic, and somewhat chimerical. Spectator thought that it was Donleavy's "kookery" which held together the four dislocated scenes ("this pilgrim's progress through New York City") which made up the play. Times praised the staging and acting, further noting "a friendly first night reception."

Comment: The play was about the Dutch painter Van Meegeren and his forgeries. Observer noted the use of the revolving stage as a means of linking the play's fragmentary episodes. The first-night performance, with Robert Eddison and Peter Sallis "as a pair of waspish critics," was greeted by "rapturous applause" (Birmingham Post). New Statesman disliked this "blundering" play but praised Anton Walbrook's performance. "A singularly dull play ... vamped up" (Guardian). Times said the plot was aimless.

Comment: Toho Company, Tokyo. "It is an evening of fans, lanterns and flower petals, a succession of exotic stage pictures created by eighty dedicated artists" (Stage). While Guardian did not think it was worth the effort of bringing the production all the way from Japan, Tatler entertained a more favorable view. Times dubbed it a "Japanese show in the American style."

61.24 Honey Pot (FC) Helen Hoile and Edward V. Hoile.

INTIMATE 30/1/61. 1st perfd De La Warr Pavilion, Bexhill, 17/1/56. Comment: The farce was about “the endeavours of a practically penniless young married couple to impress rich Aunt Phoebe, and the chaos which results when this fluttering, stupid woman becomes romantically involved with the ‘resident tramp’” (Stage 26/1/56, 10).

61.25 A Visit to a Small Planet (C, 3a) Gore Vidal. RICHMOND 30/1/61.  Joan Peart, Tim Hudson, Tristram Jellinek, Norman Pitt, Bridgit Panet, Stephen Hall. Dir Andrew Broughton; Dec John Piper. Plot: Bordman, Bronner, Fletcher, Hochman, Nelson/2, Salem, Vinson.

61.26 Hot and Cold in All Rooms (C, 3a) Max Reitmann. INTIMATE 6/2/61.  Review: Stage 9/2/61, 16. Comment: Stage reported that the 1960 production at the Intimate (60.326) was so successful that “Fred Marlow, the proprietor, shrewdly decided to repeat the play three weeks later, and his boldness was rewarded with a capacity week’s business, again hundreds being turned away at the doors. So insistent has been the demand by the unlucky ones, and by those anxious to see the play again, that Mr. Marlow has taken the unprecedented step of presenting the play for the third time in four months this week, with Kenneth Hendel, at the head of a strong cast, repeating his brilliant portrayal of Cecil Simpson.”

Comment: A combination of film and live entertainment. New Statesman said the entertainment was witty and original, and “gives joy in the watching.” Spectator was unimpressed and thought the piece naive. “It is as a triumph of mechanical synchronization that the show chiefly impresses” (Times).

61.28 Peter Pan; or, The Boy Who Wouldn't Grow Up (P) J. M. Barrie. STREATHAM HILL 6/2/61; trfd to HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 13/2/61.  Plot: Bordman, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Geduld, 53–70, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: Stage 9/2/61, 16; Times 7/2/61, 14. Comment: Stage thought that this thriller failed to present Sonia Dresdel with much opportunity for her talents.

61.31 The Lower Depths (D, 4a) Maxim Gorky (trans Henry Burke of Na dne, 1902). UNITY 10/2/61. [Luka] Robertson Stewart; Vasska Bill Nutting; Jeremy Ure, Raymond Cross, Declan Mulholland, Ron Bevan, Jenifer Murray, Shirley Newman. Dir Levcho Zdravchev; Sc dgn Trevor J. Neals. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Kabatchnik, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: New Statesman 17/2/61, 275; Spectator 17/2/61, 223; Stage 16/2/61, 13; Times 11/2/61, 9. Comment: Stage thought the play benefitted from the direction of Levcho Zdravchev, a 24-year-old Bulgarian, who brought out some comedic elements in the piece. “A fascinating production” (New Statesman). Spectator was equally laudatory, but Times was not.

61.32 Achilles' Heel (P) Arthur Lincoln Pauls. HOVENDEN 13/2/61. 1st British perf? Cast: Stage 16/2/61, 14. Mack John Slavid; Steve Twilight Francis Napier; Susan Twilight Gwen Thomas; Fred Twilight Victor Chenet; Tom Twilight Lee Swanson; Maggie Malone Patricia Carty; Patricia Meyer Susan Saunders; Linda Torence Jean Gregory; Vi Turner Patricia Moffatt. Dir Valery Hovenden; Set Philip Wichelo. Review: Stage 16/2/61, 14. Comment: Stage said the play, set in Alberta, was a sort of family drama but was “a chaotic mess that carries little conviction.” It seems that Pauls (1929–97) was the notable osteopath who was born in Canada and moved to London in the 1960s where he became an osteopath. Despite the play’s title, its subject matter has no connection with the medical condition.

Plot: Best/60, 51, Dorney, Fletcher, French/2, Hirschak, Hochman, Matlaw, Mplots, Patterson, Salem, Schrank, Shank, Shipley, Weintraub. Reviews: New Statesman 17/2/61, 275; Stage 16/2/61, 13; Times 14/2/61, 6. Comment: Stage noted that the play was revised slightly to include some topical references.

61.35 Lady Barker’s Last Appearance (Thriller, 3a) Hans Keuls. RICHMOND 13/2/61. 1st British perf Pembroke, Croydon, 26/9/60. John Summer Cruys Voorbergh; Ann Summer Peggy Thorpe-Bates; Mr. Bull Basil Lord; Peter Henderson Christopher Guinee; Sally Barker Josephine Stuart. Lic Frederic Piffard; Mgr John Jackson; Pres Richmond Theatre Productions Ltd., Jimmy Wax; Dir Kevin Barry; Dec John Piper; Sm Richard Davies, Jennifer McNaie, Cyril Booth; Press rep Torrington Douglas; Elect H. Jones; St dir Christine Edmonds; Asm Teresa Pudney, John York. Comment: The original title was Voor het laatst Lady Barker and was written specifically for the Dutch actor, Cruys Voorbergh. The thin plot involved a butler and theft. This touring production also visited Streatham Hill (27/3/61) and Hippodrome, Golders Green (3/4/61).

61.36 The Miracle Worker (P, 3a) William Gibson. Comment: Daily Herald praised the production and acting for being “direct, clear and exciting.” However, Stage disagreed forcefully: the director “Dennis Vance has contrived to transform this magnificent, fascinating, wonderfully varied history into one of the dullest documentaries I have ever witnessed,” an opinion shared by Guardian, but not Spectator. Falstaff was beyond the abilities of Douglas Campbell (Tribune). Similarly, Times thought that several of the male leads were not quite up to the demands of their roles (John Stride, Douglas Campbell, Tony Britton).

Comment: “Tawdry, dull and quite unacceptable” (Variety). Spectator declared the play lacked originality and humour. Full of dated clichés (Tribune). “The audience seemed to find Wilfrid Brambell’s lavatory hero highly comical” (Guardian). Times was uncertain whether the play, set in a public lavatory, was a satire on kitchen sink dramas. For a favorable opinion of the play see Observer. Somewhat ironically, in 1962 Brambell was arrested for soliciting in a public lavatory.

61.39 John Gabriel Borkman (D, 3a) Henrik Ibsen (trans Norman Ginsbury of Ibsen's play, 1897). MERMAID 16/2/61. Comment: A "disastrous" production using a "stiffly old-fashioned" translation (Tribune). Bernard Miles "overreaches himself completely by electing to play Borkman. He makes every word he utters sound so significant that they all lose significance" (Daily Herald), a judgment shared by Stage, Times and Guardian. Times also called the production too reverential; however, it adapted well to the Mermaid's open stage.

Comment: "An unfortunate effort—by a dramatist who has usually known his business—to recapture the craziness of See How They Run" (Illustrated London News). Variety doubted the piece's success in the West End but thought it was "a certain box office winner for stock theatres."

61.41 Serjeant Musgrave's Dance (D, 3a) John Arden. TOWER, CANONBURY, 17/2/61. 1st perfd Court 22/10/59. Cast: TTC. Plot: Bordman/4, 409, Demastes/2, Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Mplots, Patterson, Shipley, Vinson. Comment: The first New York production (De Lys 8/3/66) ran for 137 performances.

61.42 Out of Season (P) Thomas Muschamp. LYRIC 19/2/61.* 1 perf. Comment: Memorial Theatre Company, Stratford-upon-Avon. The production ran over three hours on opening night. "One of our best dramatists

... It is by far [the company's] most impressive and important production so far. It had a memorable opening" (Stage). "A theatrical event of rare importance" (Tribune). Guardian said that ultimately the play was unsatisfactory because Whiting had failed to render Father Urbain Grandier enigmatic; Observer concurred. Times said Richard Johnson carried the play on his back. See also Lloyd Evans, 103–05. The first New York production (Broadway 4/3/61) ran for 63 performances.

61.44 Over the Odds (C) R. Howard Arundel. INTIMATE 20/2/61. 1st perfd Empire, Peterborough, 13/4/59. Comment: A mother-in-law comedy.

Comment: English Stage Company. Variety thought that Robert Shaw gave "a remarkable study in powerful, controlled villainy"; Observer shared that opinion and praised Tony Richardson's "first-rate" direction. Guardian "had a feeling no one cared much for the text," but praised Mary Ure's intelligent portrayal of Beatrice-Joanna. Tribune echoed the praise for Shaw's and Ure's performances but still believed The Changeling "is really a bad and silly play."

61.48 The Connection (P with jazz, 3a) Jack Gelber and Freddie Reed (mus). DUKE OF YORK'S 22/2/61. 43 perf. 1st perfd Living Theatre, New York, 15/7/59; 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 2/3/61, 13; Theatricalia; Variety 1/3/61, 86; WWT/14. Jim Dunn Stanley Daniels; Jaybird David Saire; Leach Warren Finnerty; Solly Jerome Raphael; Sam James Anderson; First Musician Freddie Reed; Fourth Musician Malcolm Cecil; First Photographer Stephen Hancock; Second Photographer Mark Heath; Second Musician Jackie McLean; Third Musician Tony Mann; Harry Peter Bridgemont; Sister Salvation Janet Joye; Cowboy Carl Lee. Pres Peter Daubeny, Michael White, Seymour Hacker, Francis Perry; Dir Nick Garland; Dec Michael Young; Mus Freddie Redd. Reviews: Illustrated London News 11/3/61, 408; Observer 26/2/61, 27; Spectator 3/3/61, 296–97; Stage 2/3/61, 13; Tribune 3/3/61, 15; Variety 1/3/61, 86–87, 90. Comment: "The galleryites were first baffled, next nettled, and ultimately driven to riot" by Gelber's "self-absorbed" characters" (Observer). New York Times (23/2/61, 30) and Variety gave fuller accounts of the first-night disturbances. Tribune thought the play was a loyally realistic depiction of the world of the drug addict. The New York production, which ran for 768 performances, won the 1960 Obie Award for best new play.

61.49 Why the Chicken? (P) John McGrath. WIMBLEDON 22/2/61. 1st perfd Cranston Street Hall, Edinburgh, 26/8/59. Jacqueline Ellis, Terence Stamp, David Andrews, David Sutton, Elizabeth MacLennan, Melvyn Hayes, Frank Coda, Peter Gill, William Victor, Annette Robertson, Edward Higgins. Dir Lionel Bart. Plot: Vinson. Comment: "It is set in a New Town and deals with Teddy boys, Teddy girls, a social worker who is trying to get a community centre going, and a bureaucratic local government official" (Stage 3/9/59, 18). The production (which also visited Streatham Hill on 20/3/61 and Hippodrome, Golders Green on 27/3/61) failed to reach the West End as had been planned.

Comment: A charity performance in aid of the South African Music and Drama Trust was given on 22/2/61 and raised £2,500. Observer enjoyed the "boisterous exuberance" of the piece but wished it were "less naive." Daily Mirror shared the same view. "Not so much an African musical as an American musical with an African background" (Spectator). The music and dancing were superior to the plot (Christian Science Monitor). Judging the production on its own terms, Times found much to enjoy.

61.51 The Courtyard of Miracles (P) Jacob Campanellis [Iakovos Kambanellis] (trans George Eugeniou and Henry Livings of μ, 1957). KING GEORGE'S HALL 25/2/61; trfd to THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 5/3/61. 2 perf. 1st British perf. Plot: Hochman. Comment: Greek Arts Theatre of London. Performed in modern Greek. "The location and theme are concerned with the daily life of a number of Greeks living around a courtyard soon due for demolition; their quarrels, reconciliations, loves and jealousies" (Stage 12/10/61, 18).

Comment: "A musical with tuneful ditties and a dash of satirical imitation which turns on the events at Belmont" in The Merchant of Venice (Guardian). "Almost unviewable" (Observer); Stage took a diametrically opposed view. The play could only really succeed in front of a Players' audience (Times).

"Charles Marowitz's direction was ponderous and lacking ... in any sustained, disciplined style and atmosphere. The players worked with obvious sincerity and good intention, but [this episodic play] requires artists of outstanding ability" (Stage). Times said the physical attributes of the venue worked against the production. The New York production ran for 97 performances.

Comment: "The object of this production ... is to provide opportunities in acting to members of the company whose parts do not normally give them individual prominence" (Stage 2/3/61, 1). The performances of Brian Spink, Jennie Goossens, and Barbara Leigh-Hunt stood out in an altogether "credible" production (Birmingham Post).

61.59 Matilda Shouted Fire (Thriller) Janet Green. RICHMOND 6/3/61. 1st perfd New, Oxford, 20/10/58. June Shaw, Richard Aylen, Rissa Cooper, Leslie Handford, Colin Rix, James Belchamber. Dir Robert Peake; Dec John Piper. Comment: This thriller was about a neurotic married woman who receives numerous death threats (although she has difficulty in getting anyone to believe her) and the attempts to solve the problem. The play was made into a film, Midnight Lace (1960), starring Doris Day and Rex Harrison.

Comment: A preview charity performance was given 8/3/61 in aid of the Royal Eye Hospital. New Statesman observed that the piece played on the audience's sentimentality, ignorance, prejudices, “and, finally, on their wish for a snap-happy ending.” Guardian also noted Gibson’s manipulations in the play and of the audience. Observer complimented Anna Massey’s “zealous work” as the teacher but said “the rest of the acting ranges from hesitant to dismal.” However, Tribune responded wholeheartedly to the play: “Heartening ... I came away from it with batteries recharged” and faith in human beings restored. “The best new play and some of the best acting the present season has yielded” (Tatler).

Comment: Variety doubted the London production would match the achievement in New York: “A very American musical, sticky with amiable sentiment, set in a hick town in Iowa in 1912, must present sturdy overseas resistance.” Observer regretted that Robert Preston (in the New York production) had been replaced by Van Johnson (“like serving minced chicken to a man who has ordered steak”). “A thin story—with trombones” (Tatler). Times found the piece “tunefully entertaining,” but observed “Van Johnson sings the hero as becomes a man who hardly knows one note of music from another.” The first New York production (Majestic 19/12/57) ran for 1,375 performances.

61.73 The Buskers (P, 2a) Kenneth Jupp. TOWER, CANONBURY, 17/3/61. 1st perfd Arts 12/3/59. Cast: TTC. Reviews: Stage 23/3/61, 15; Times 22/3/61, 16. Comment: The play dealt with a group of buskers—some old professionals, some newcomers—and their attitudes toward performance. “The probing and scintillating direction by David Jones” resulted in a “triumph” (Stage). Times said the performances needed to project more spontaneity. The New York production (Cricket 30/10/61) ran for six performances.

Review: Stage 23/3/61, 15. Comment: Stage said Grove was a promising playwright and “the play is psychological rather than mystifying, and concerns a crime committed in a moment of aberration by an overwrought young man immersed in private trouble.”

61.76 Charley’s Aunt (FC, 3a) Brandon Thomas. RICHMOND 20/3/61. James Belchamber, Aubrey Woods, Norman Pitt, Edward Rhodes, Hazel Penwarden, Carol Austin. Dir Raphael Jago; Dec John Piper. Comment: "At times the construction wobbles: it is not helped by a composite set that does not work. But the play is finely observed and deeply felt" (Illustrated London News). "Appallingly acted" (Christian Science Monitor). Observer admired much in the play but said it lacked real characters. Daily Mirror liked the play's "punch and sincerity" but thought the themes were "threadbare." Although it found fault with the play, Times appreciated Reckord's nuanced handling of race relations in England: "a wholly salutary play."

Comment: English Stage Company. Christian Science Monitor found the piece "extremely funny from time to time," but agreed with Observer that this was not Ionesco at his best. Times said the production made "what is purely nonsensical funny and what is bizarre disturbing," with good performances from Valerie Hanson and Denys Hawthorne.

Comment: Variety said the production "is worthy, but occasionally over-reverent and even pompous"; Donald Sinden and Constance Cummings were "an excellent team." Observer found it "hard to understand how this poker-faced product of the academic imagination managed to earn such a thunderous chorus of approval in New York." Spectator disliked the play and discussed some differences in how the ending of the London production differed from that in New York. Tribune said the piece failed as poetry, as drama, was "intellectually contemptible," and Donald Sinden was a "lightweight." "A terrible gulf remains fixed between the essential bigness of the story and the coy Our Town manner, with its overtones of modern dress Sunday school theatricals" (Guardian). The first New York production (ANTA Playhouse 11/12/58) ran for 364 performances.

Comment: New Statesman thought the piece was disappointing as much of it was just "senseless singing"; however, it was worth seeing "the brilliant confidence of Milo O'Shea. He does more with his left eyebrow than other actors can do with arms and legs." Stage concurred. Times thought the piece's social protests might be more poignant in Dublin, but in London "all one can see is a mild, slight, Julian Sladey romantic musical."

Comment: Although Kenneth Williams tries very hard he isn't given very good material to work with (Birmingham Post). "Exemplifies the atrophy of latter-day English revue," although Williams made much of the opportunities given him (Observer). However, Spectator thought there were some excellent sketches and sets. Stage thought well of the revue and declared Sheila Hancock was the real star.

19/4/61, 72. Comment: "An inspired vaude show with God in it" (Variety). Observer noted the performance lasted three and a half hours and dubbed it "a medieval comic-strip of mankind's history." Times saw it more as "the crude directness to be expected from popular art." Spectator praised the excellent staging which had "an authentic mediaeval flavour." Queen Elizabeth attended the production informally in May (Guardian 19/5/61, 6).

Comment: Phyllis Calvert, Diana Churchill, Robert Hardy and Alan Badel gave "ravishing performances" (Observer). Anouilh's "theme is the old familiar one of Victorian melodrama, innocence stalked down. It differs from melodrama only in the last act, when innocence is raped, not rescued" (New Statesman). Times lauded the whole production. "With its distinguished cast, there is little doubt that it will be a hot attraction" (Variety). Alan Badel repeated his role in the first New York production (Royale 23/9/63) which ran for 110 performances.

Reviews: Stage 13/4/61, 15; Times 8/4/61, 3. Comment: A satire on tycoons and "the destruction of human relations by materialism" (Stage).

Times said it was a promising play but, since it was a Unity play [i.e. left-wing], the satire failed because “most of the capitalists are painted in colours so garish that we cannot for long believe in them even as human beings.” Times misidentified the author as “David Hall.”

Comment: The first public performance in England; the censor had lifted an earlier ban imposed because of the homosexual theme. Stage noted that the topic of homosexuality was now dated; nevertheless, “Green’s approach is serious and he has a sense of tension, undercurrents, and the drama of gradual unfolding.” Denholm Elliott gave “a remarkably effective, restrained performance, beautifully spoken.” “The piece has an honesty and dark, brooding quality that hold the mind” (Illustrated London News). New Statesman declared it was an “excellent tragedy.” Times held similar views.

Comment: The comedy provided another starring role for Joan Greenwood after her success in the authors' The Grass Is Greener (Guardian). Daily Herald was disappointed and annoyed by the piece: "It contains most of the qualities that make intelligent theatregoer's teeth grind." However, Birmingham Post praised the play's "gaiety and urbane wit." The first New York production (Ethel Barrymore 18/9/63) ran for 115 performances.

Variety thought the revue was lacking in shape, style, wit, and satire; nevertheless, it averred it would probably be moderately successful. Guardian noted the production was energetic, but the material "often shoddy and tasteless." "A successful but not particularly distinguished revue" (Tatler). Times calculated that ten of the fifty items in the revue hit their targets, which was "high enough by present-day standards for us to hail the revue as a success."

Comment: Guardian found this rewriting of The Dybbuk strong theatrically but thought audiences might have some difficulty with the religious and geographical elements. Observer declared "intellectually, the play is a shabby fraud ... Theatrically, however, as an exercise in speakable writing and bodily acting, the piece stands up superbly." "The ritual has its interest, but the anecdote itself is tedious and artificial, with a good deal of extraneous comic crosstalk" (Illustrated London News). Comment: "A drama about the final stages of a broken marriage ... [but with] too many [distracting] ideas" (Stage). Guardian said at times the piece had "a good deal of superficial truth to life," but much "claptrap" as well. Times complained that the play had too many ideas and so the characters were unconvincing; the result was simply "a glib tale."

Comment: Performed in eighteenth-century costume. Guardian thought that the play needed "more mature, considered acting and more inventive and resourceful production [by Colin Graham]." However, the reviewer liked the production and singled out the acting of Barbara Jeffords, Joss Ackland, and Alec McCowen. Stage thought that the melancholic element in the comedy had been overemphasized; Times agreed wholeheartedly.

Peter Whitbread, June Shaw, Cicely Hullett, William Gaunt, Betty Romaine, Pamela Vezey. Dir Raphael Jago; Dec John Piper. Comment: The comedy was based on "the possibilities of a marriage bureau run on highly modern lines with an electronic brain into which the compatibilities of applicants are fed and the answers come out pat in terms of applicants from the opposite sex" (Stage 21/7/60, 19).

Stage 11/5/61, 17; Tatler 17/5/71, 420; Times 4/5/61, 16. Comment: Times commended aspects of the play but felt that the leading character (Teifion) was "a projection of the author commenting all too intelligently on conversation which would run a more amusing course if it were left to speak for itself." "Whatever it may have been as a top TV play, comes over as a pointless picture of life on the Liverpool dockside, but smartly acted by a virile cast" (People). "Owen knows his Liverpool types; but, having introduced them, he finds little fresh for them to discuss, though to the end of the night he is always likely to shoot out an unexpected phrase. On this evidence he is a natural writer of dialogue who cannot find a frame for it" (Illustrated London News). "Owen is satisfied for the greater part of the evening to copy the technique of the documentary film" (Tatler).

Comment: “The drama of the story goes for nothing; the comedy is a muddle of inferior jokes and pantomime skits” (Birmingham Post). New Statesman found it an odd mixture of “sophistication and pastiche.” Times said the music hall concept was interesting, but the subject matter was inappropriate, especially since some people involved in the Crippen affair might be still living.

61.130 The Father (P) August Strindberg (anon trans of Fadren, 1887). TOWER, CANONBURY, 5/5/61. Cast: TTC. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: Stage 11/5/61, 19; Times 8/5/61, 16. Comment: George Coulouris played the lead and directed: he gave “a brilliant study of a man tormented by his spiritual isolation” (Stage). However, Times found that at times “the acting [of Coulouris] seems to get between the words and us.”

Reviews: Observer 14/5/61, 27; Stage 11/5/61, 18; Times 8/5/61, 16. Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. The play was about a dysfunctional family which waits for the arrival of a moving van, but it never arrives. Stage wondered why the company was presenting yet another Ionesco-type play. However, Observer was more approving, but added “this dose of diluted Ionesco owed most of its power to the performance of Derek Godfrey”

Comment: The mystery was about a widow, who has spent her widowhood doing good works, discovering that her dead husband was really murdered and, eighteen years later, she realizes she knows who the murderer is. Times praised Margaretta Scott as the widow, but faulted the play for failing to fulfill the audience's expectations in the final act.

Comment: The musical “lugs in every tired old cliché of the world of Kitsch” (New Statesman). Guardian also noted the emphasis on sentimentality. “The surprising and welcome achievement of Rodgers and Hammerstein has been their ability to find freshness and charm inside the formulae” (Sphere). Its success, Times said, depended on the songs rather than the rather thin romantic story. Variety noted “the show drew a mixed, sometimes patronizing morning press. But it received a tumultuous first night welcome, and the $168,000 in advance bookings points to a click run.” The first New York production (Lunt-Fontanne 16/11/59) ran for 1,443 performances.

61.152 The Rotters (Tale of a Disreputable Family, C 3a). H. F. Maltby. WIMBLEDON 22/5/61. 1st perfd Winter Garden, New Brighton, 10/7/16. Councillor John Clugston Arthur Lane; Mrs. Clugston Constance Keener; Jasmine Dee, Peter Whitbread, Diana Appleby, John Inman, Rosaline Haddon, Daphne Riggs. Dir Arthur Lane. Plot: Best/21, 549–50, Bordman/3, 179–80, Hishchak, Williams, 159–60. Review: Stage 25/5/61, 16. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. The revival “does much to illustrate how greatly public taste can change over less than fifty years” (Stage). The first New York production (39th Street 22/5/22) ran for 16 performances.

61.153 A Penny for a Song (FC, 2a) John Whiting. TOWER, CANONBURY, 26/5/61. 1st perfd Wimbledon 12/2/51. Cast: TTC. Plot: Demastes/2, Hochman, Law, Mplots, Shank, Weintraub. Review: Stage 1/6/61, 7. Comment: An “excellent production” (Stage).

61.154 The Visions of Simone Machard (P) Bertolt Brecht (based on Lion Feuchtwanger’s novel; trans Arnold Hinchcliffe of Die Gesichte der Simone Machard, 1957 [written 1941/43]) and Hanns Eisler (mus). Dir Heinz Bernard; Dec Tony Carruthers; Mus dir Jack Wellgarth; Cond Peter Racine. Plot: French/2, Hochman. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 10/6/61, 10; New Statesman 9/6/61, 932–33; Spectator 23/6/61, 920; Stage 8/6/61, 15; Times 3/6/61, 4; Tribune 9/6/61, 11. Comment: New Statesman noted that the cast’s sincerity and enthusiasm allowed the play to come through clearly. “Well staged, well directed and well worth seeing” (Tribune); however, Spectator thought the production was “confused.” “If not a major work ... [it] is a splendidly effective piece of theatre, and the company seem inspired by it” (Times).

61.155 The Triple Alliance (P) J. A. Cuddon. COURT 28/5/61.* 1 perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 1/6/61, 13; WWT/14. Chopping Derek Newark; Priest Richard Butler; Sythes Grahame McPherson; Quilp Robert Gillespie; Miss Tarpin Caroline Blakiston; Mr. Thomas Derek Smith; Mrs. Thomas Anna Wing; Window Cleaner Edwin

Finn. Dir Keith Johnstone. Reviews: Observer 4/6/61, 26; Stage 1/6/61, 13. Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. The play was about “cruelty in a cripples’ home” (Stage). Observer thought that the piece sank “shapelessly into violence and hysteria.”

61.156 Miss Mabel (Thriller, 3a) R. C. Sherriff. WIMBLEDON 29/5/61. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 27/9/48. Plot: Demastes/1. Comment: Peter Haddon Company. Daphne Riggs played the title role in this murder thriller involving a kindly old lady.

61.157 On the Avenue (Revue) Arthur Macrae (et al). STREATHAM HILL 29/5/61; trfd to HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 5/6/61; trfd to LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 16/6/61. 1st perfd Alexandra, Birmingham, 17/4/61. Plot: OTF/2. Comment: The pre-West End tour of the Globe production (61.190).

61.158 Ten Little Niggers (Thriller [3a]) Agatha Christie (adpt of her novel, 1939). RICHMOND 29/5/61. 1st perfd Wimbledon 20/9/43. Plot: Best/44, 365–66, Bordman/4, 237, Fletcher, Griffiths, Hischak, Kabatchnik/2, Salem, Wagoner, 122, Weintraub. Comment: The title of Christie’s murder mystery has been changed to And Then There Were None, and Ten Little Indians under which latter title it was produced in New York (Broadhurst 27/6/44) and ran for 426 performances.

61.159 Unseen Among Us (Murder mystery) Sutherland Scott. INTIMATE 29/5/61. 1st perfd Intimate 7/5/56. Comment: “An absorbing and well-written play about blackmail in a country town” (Stage 10/5/56, 10).

Comment: English Stage Company. Performed by an all-black cast. Tribune gauged the play by the indifferent reaction of the audience. Guardian noted that the play “at once baffled and fascinated a willing first night audience,” and that half the cast “cannot speak as clearly as the other half.” Spectator discussed how the play was another version of The Maids. Times thought that, even with its flaws, the play was “theatrically arresting,” but even Roger Blin’s skilful direction could not render it to be “anything more than a dramatic curiosity.”

61.161 City Rhythm (Revue with mus) John Gunter (deviser, mus) and Lucille Baker (lyr). HOVENDEN 30/5/61.* Cast: Stage 1/6/61, 14. Regina Nurse, Tony Ben-Arzi, Hugh Ward, Carol Grant, Buddie Davis, Wendy Barker, Doreen Douglas. Dir John Gunter; Ch Tony Ben-Arzi. Review: Stage 1/6/61, 14. Comment: This “shop window” production for John Gunter’s talents suffered from casting problems (Stage).

14/6/61, 56. Comment: Performed in eighteenth-century costume. Stage said Robert Harris dominated the production which it did not much like. Times found parts of the production interesting, but overall it lacked “any consistent view of the play.”

Comment: “A leisurely piece about human conflict in present-day Kashmir [which] fails to generate the theatrical excitement the subject deserves” (Variety); similarly Guardian. Christian Science Monitor said the questions raised in the play needed to be answered seriously; instead, “to put them as a cardboard background to a magazine tale of twopence colored romance is inexcusable.” Similarly, Times said the piece was full of trivialities and lacked any significance.

Comment: “The story, set in Ireland, deals casually with horse doping, mortgages, threatened foreclosure, and ... saving the family homestead” (Variety). A vehicle play for Rutherford which fails to provide her with appropriate opportunities (Tatler). Times was similarly disappointed.

61.165 A Quiet Clap of Thunder (P) Peter Philp. QUESTORS 3/6/61.* Cast: QTA. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 10/6/61, 17; Stage 8/6/61, 14. Comment: The play presented a modern view that there is no difference between good and evil.

Comment: Spectator thought the play was topical because it concerned the “dichotomy between our ideas of patriotic obedience and personal responsibility.” Tribune said the play might be imperfect but it was powerful. Variety commended all aspects of the production but said the Mermaid’s apron stage was unsuited to a courtroom drama. The first New York production (Henry Miller’s 29/12/59) ran for 179 performances.

61.172 The South African (P) T. R. Sharpe. QUESTORS 6/6/61.* Cast: QTA. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 10/6/61, 17; Stage 8/6/61, 14. Comment: “It deals squarely with the concept of apartheid, shakes it by the throat and leaves it standing revealed as the hollow sham it is,” but not a piece of theatre (Stage).

Comment: Nottingham Playhouse Company. Guardian found the depictions of northern family life uninteresting because they were repetitive and too literal. Times echoed that opinion, noting there was no plot and the piece consisted of photographs of the family. While Variety described the characters as “stock types,” it also thought “they are believable figures who talk and behave convincingly, and that’s the key to the success.”

61.174 The Rough and Ready Lot (P, 3a) Alun Owen. TOWER, CANONBURY, 9/6/61. 1st perfd on BBC Radio Third Programme 30/9/58; 1st stage perf Olympia, Dublin, 18/5/59. Cast: TTC. Review: Times 10/6/61, 5. Comment: Set in a Spanish-American Republic after the American Civil War, the play dealt with some mercenary soldiers facing a dilemma over whether to destroy a monastery. Times said the production was better than the original: “Where [the original] was measured, calculated and intellectual in its approach, this is taut, intuitive and impassioned.”

61.175 The Breadwinner (C [3a]) W. Somerset Maugham. RICHMOND 12/6/61. 1st perfd Devonshire Park, Eastbourne, 22/9/30. Charles Battle Michael Atkinson; Joy Andrews, Elizabeth Spriggs, Rory McDermot, Peter Marden, Joanna Morris. Dir Robert Peake; Dec John Piper. Plot: Best/31, 395, Bordman/4, 32, Hischak, Mander/5, Rogal, Salem. Review: Stage 15/6/61, 16. Comment: Stage said that performing the play in modern dress maintained the comedy’s relevancy. The first New York production (Booth 22/9/31) ran for 55 performances.

61.176 Electra (T) Sophocles (trans into modern Greek by [Ioannis] Gryparis). SCALA 12/6/61. 1st perfd 409? B.C. Cast: Stage 15/6/61, 14; WWT/14. The Tutor Ph. Taxiarchis; Orestes D. Comment: "It looks very much as though [Hendel] made it up as he went along, for it possesses little plot and no dramatic shape at all. He shows us the distracted, unhappy household of a recently widowed mother who must cope" with a variety of people and their problems (Stage).

Comment: The play was about a political experiment in an African colony and designed "to release the African genius for uninhibited happiness" (Times). Observer found this piece as ridiculous as Buchanan's A Trip to the Castle (see 60.167). However, New Statesman, presenting a minority opinion, defended it as "the work of a larky and incurably literary schoolboy."

61.180 West Side Story (Mus, 2a) Arthur Laurents (bk; based on conception by Jerome Robbins) and Stephen Sondheim (lyr) and Leonard Bernstein (mus). Comment: Variety pointed out the play was "a dramatization of the events that led to [Home's] conviction. In 1944, in war-torn France, he was cashiered to a year in jail for refusing to obey an order." "Basically a two-hour slice of officers' mess banter" (Spectator), a view shared by New Statesman.

Comment: Oxford Playhouse production. New Statesman saw Jeremy Brett's Hamlet as a "delinquent Dane." "Basically a simple straightforward repertory production" (Guardian). Observer noted the production included much of the text that was often cut; it ran three and a half hours. Spectator said Brett's Hamlet was "intelligent and straightforward ... he plays those qualities which a modern reader finds in Hamlet." "A no-nonsense, no-frills version" (Variety).

Comment: An old-fashioned revue (Observer). Similarly, Guardian observed "people who gloated over Beyond the Fringe may find this new piece genteel and out of date." Birmingham Post said that it received a friendly reception on opening night largely due to Beryl Reid's performance.

Reviews: Observer 25/6/61, 22; Stage 29/6/61, 14; Times 22/6/61, 17. Comment: The revue included N. F. Simpson's sketch One Blast and Have Done (first performance?). Observer thought that, despite the attempt to follow in the footsteps of Beyond the Fringe, this revue demonstrated it was really just old-fashioned. "The material, however, and the attitude of mind inspiring the treatment, was so much of the type customarily offered by the younger set that it was difficult to be as amused as one would have liked to be and as was deserved by the talented cast" (Stage). Everything about this revue was "too old and too tired" (Times).

Reviews: Stage 29/6/61, 13; Times 26/6/61, 7. Comment: The play was "about Henri, a young man who suddenly finds he is two young men two but indivisible"; Stage admired the play's "suppleness and wit." "The situation allowed Mr. Joe Melia, the timid half, a virtuoso scene of mimic comedy" (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. “There are few living writers in English who can excel Arnold Wesker’s talent for peopling his stage with working people and allowing them to speak for themselves” (Tribune). Variety praised John Dexter’s “superb” staging and the acting. Times complained that Wesker’s “slice-of-life pictures” lacked a story which made them significant. The first New York production (81st Street 13/6/66) ran for 137 performances.

Comment: This slight piece was about “a provincial detective who nearly loses his job when he digs too deeply into civic corruption” (Observer). “A tired little piece” (Variety). Guardian said this “wretched and feeble little play” could have been better if Ronald Shiner had been surer of his lines. "An unusually shaky Shiner has to fight doggedly for laughs. Apart from Bartlett Mullins as a henpecked husband and Jack Rodney as a small-time 'villain,' the acting doesn't much help to avoid a disappointing evening" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: "Presumably a satire on such playwrights as Ionesco, but it isn't skilful or clearly enough defined to click" (Variety). The production failed to find its legs until the latter portions of the play (Guardian), but New Statesman called it "superb." Stage found the piece "very funny" but criticized aspects of the production. The first New York production (Phoenix 26/2/62) ran for 454 performances.

61.206 Look! No Eyebrows! (Revue) David Thompson (deviser) and Don Goffin (deviser) and Nick Tyrrell Evans (mus) and Geoff Strachan and Clyde Jones and Michael Smith and Brendon Garry and Peter Myers. TOWER, CANONBURY, 7/7/61.* Cast: TTC. Reviews: Stage 13/7/61, 13; Times 8/7/61, 4. Comment: Stage said much of the subject matter was familiar and individual items tended to be too long. However, Times found the revue beguiling and funny even if it was "an old-style ragbag type of show." Also performed at the Pollock Memorial Hall as part of the Edinburgh Festival Fringe, 1/9/61 (TTC).

Comment: "A curious two-character show, partly acted, partly narrated, boiling down to a lengthy lecture on love and its attendant dangers" (Variety). Neither the narration by Roderick Lovell and Hannah Watt "nor their acting (it is often hard to say where one takes over from the other) is sensitive enough" (Times).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. RSCA also lists numerous cast changes. "[Eric] Porter is the best actor in the Royal Shakespeare Theatre Company; again his dignity, subtlety, repose and intellectual vigour rule the stage" (Illustrated London News). Spectator attempted to answer its self-posed question: "So if the play has neither historical nor modern relevance, what remains?" Tribune, while praising the play as a "richly funny and exciting dramatic comedy," regretted Anouilh had avoided writing a more significant work about the real clash between Henry and Becket. "As a work of dramatic impact, vision, intellect and character worthy of its great protagonists and its great conflicts, Becket is just about right for the instruction and amusement, in theatrical terms, of the more enquiring type of school boy" (Stage). The first New York production (St. James 5/10/60) ran for 193 performances.

It comes true. That is this play. Everything that is wrong with the lowest, most juvenile, most stupid aspect of the English theatre is demonstrated by it" (Daily Herald). New Statesman condemned the play but praised Irene Handl's "huge and irresistible" comic performance as Amelia Puffin. "The majority of the house received with clamorous laughter practically every line that Miss Handl spoke" (Illustrated London News). Variety was wrong in predicting a "mediocre run."

Comment: "Cheap cynicism links with wallowing sentimentality, feebly bouncing tunes, stale satire and a dogged emphasis on the infantile" (New Statesman). "A sad, pretentious evening" (Observer). Despite numerous flaws, Spectator said the piece was never boring, and noted Anthony Newley's indebtedness to Marcel Marceau. "Newley deserves full credit for trying do something new, original and extremely personal. But some of his talents fall far short of the standard set by others" (Daily Herald). Tatler viewed Newley's performance favorably, redeeming other flaws in the musical. The first New York production (Shubert 3/10/61) ran for 555 performances.

Comment: New Statesman said the piece was formulaic and, despite the commotion its production had caused in Dublin, was sad stuff for London. Kenneth Tynan's verdict (Observer) was that "Mr. O'Casey was never a great thinker; he is no longer a great craftsman; but he remains a great singer." Tribune offered a more laudatory appraisal. Times criticized Frank Dunlop for forcing the cast to overplay the farcical elements which needed "deadpan earnestness" instead. The dialogue "only needs to be spoken naturally to be uproariously funny, and it is sad to see the present company treating it as though it were run-of-the-mill farcical nonsense requiring all sorts of futile byplay to get it across" (Tatler).

Comment: English Stage Company. Observer declared that Osborne was a "master of rhetoric ... and Albert Finney's butcher-boy Luther could scarcely be bettered." "Luther, who was a great figure, is minimised here ... [Finney is] one of the potentially major actors of his period" (Illustrated London News). Guardian (and other reviewers) noted the play's affinities with Brecht. Tatler said the play was ambitious, though Osborne could do better work in the future, Finney's performance was masterful, and Tony Richardson was at "his imaginative best." There was general praise for Richardson's direction and Jocelyn Herbert's sets. Albert Finney repeated his performance in the first New York production (St. James 25/9/63) which ran for 211 performances.

Comment: “This is knock-about farce, with banging of doors and multiplication of personality. The plot has something to do with a legacy” (Christian Science Monitor). The final act involved Brian Rix playing three roles, and the piece was replete with corny jokes which drew much laughter: “the playing public will love it all” (Times).

Comment: Spectator thought that commercial success depended on a piece being both unpretentious and well done, and that Wildest Dreams was neither. “The tittering negation of almost every decent human quality: soulless, mindless, heartless, gutless, witless and sexless” (New Statesman). Times observed that “virtually nothing happens at all.” However, Christian Science Monitor found it “very agreeable.”

Comment: “A magnificently successful production” (Illustrated London News). Times agreed with Guardian which described the production as “something like a concert version of the piece.” The 1956 production at the New was staged earlier at Newcastle (8/56) and the Edinburgh Festival (21/8/56). The first New York production (Henry Miller's 15/10/57) ran for 39 performances.

Comment: An unlicensed production as the Lord Chamberlain had banned the piece. “It is not the four letter words which prove the stumbling block, but the two dimensional characters” (Guardian). “Ineptly adapted, hideously set and ludicrously performed” (New Statesman). Times noted that much of the dialogue was taken directly from the novel. Later in the run one scene was played in the nude (Variety 30/8/61, 55; Stage 31/8); Tribune (1/9/61, 11) noted that the actress performed “with her back to the audience.” An unexpurgated edition of the novel had not been published in England until 1960 when it then became the subject of a court case under the Obscene Publications Act. The case was decided in favour of the publisher, Penguin Books.

Comment: A charity performance was given on 22/3/62 at 11:15pm in aid of the Yvonne Arnaud Theatre. “Without quibbling, this is an exceedingly good puzzle-play” (Illustrated London News). “The real culprit ... was the person who decided this was a play for the theatre” (Daily Mirror). Times compared this piece with the authors' earlier Any Other Business (Wearing 57.241) which employed similar techniques.

The inexperience of some members of the youthful cast was evident, but overall Michael Croft's direction brought out the company's strengths, and Richard Hampton's Prince Hal was notable (Times). “For once Michael Croft has failed to get the political scenes out of the rut. However, there is some rich comic playing—notably Paul Hill's Doll, and Colin Farrell's Shallow” (Observer).

Comment: "Even if well done [the play] is not worth much. Badly done, 'twere better not to do it at all: 'tis pity it's a bore" (Guardian). Variety and Spectator praised David Thompson's direction and most of the acting. Times said that the direction allowed the poetry to emerge in some passages, and praised performances by Patience Collier and Zena Walker, but faulted Edward de Souza.

"This dated exercise in the jocular dramatisation of political theory is scarcely worth doing well" (Observer). Guardian thought both the acting and production had little distinction. Times declared that only the performance by Yolande justified the West End production.

Comment: Spectator declared it was "fantastic" that the piece had been put on in London, let alone even written. "The richest comedy of the show is provided by John Wood and John Cater, as two battered barnstormers" (Stage). Times agreed and expressed general approval of the production, dubbing it "a successful mixture of hilarious burlesque and sentimental tunes." "Stephanie Voss, Peter Gilmore and Terence Cooper have charm, talent and good singing voices. And act if they have not the least suspicion that they are up to their handsome necks in a load of twaddle" (Daily Herald). The original New York production ran for 42 years.

Comment: This was the first production of the post-Joan Littlewood era. A strong, unpretentious play with fine performances from Dudley Sutton and Patrick Magee (New Statesman). Guardian presented a diametrically opposing view, as did Observer: "What blights the piece is something endemic in the Irish temperament—a compulsion to turn drama into melodrama, and comedy into farce." However, Times found fault only with the third act and its denouement. There were 71 performances at the Apollo.

Comment: English Stage Company. The play was commissioned by the Edinburgh Festival Society. "We have seen before this throwing open of the mansion to the 'common man' ... and 'taking the mickey' out of him when he turns up in his hundreds. This is a pity, for it makes an often striking and witty play seem old-fashioned. There are more important things to satirise than the ordinary people in our class-ridden society" (Stage). The play's "onslaught on a society deluding itself is deeply disturbing though not wholly satisfying as a work for the theatre" (Guardian). Times agreed, also noting that the first-night performance received a "friendly reception" by a Court Theatre audience disposed towards left-wing works.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Fine performances from Vanessa Redgrave and Derek Godfrey (Observer). New Statesman thought that the production had "far too much old Aldwych knockabout and a plethora of 'business.'" Times agreed whole-heartedly—"too full of comic business."

Comment: Paul Dane-man dominated the production and drew thunderous approval from the audience (Birmingham Post). Stage said this was a straightforward production with Dane-man's "human" Faustus. When this production had been presented earlier at the Edinburgh Festival, an open stage permitted the use of considerably pageantry; the latter was greatly reduced because of the Old Vic's proscenium stage (Times).

Comment: The plot involved a penniless dramatist who has written only flops being commissioned, for nefarious reasons, to write yet another flop. Ironically, Another Man's Playground itself wasn't entirely successful.

Review: Stage 21/9/61, 14. Comment: The play "struck a very unusual note on parent-child relationships by demonstrating with unprejudiced understanding, and detachment that over-severity or enlightened discussion each are liable to bring about very much the same result" (Stage).

"An inconsequential Irish romp in the Behan tradition" (Daily Herald). "An inane presentation" (Variety).

Comment: A “whodunnit stuffed with more ideas, more interest, more insight into human relations, more food for thought, than almost any other play on the London stage at the moment” (Tribune). Guardian pointed out the difficulties of turning a novel into a stage play and Millar’s lapses in doing so. However, Times averred that little of the novel had been lost. “Some of London’s best character actors ... add theatrical force to a distinguished drama” (Variety). The first New York production (Henry Miller’s 20/6/62) ran for 116 performances.

Comment: A charity preview was given on 11/10/61 in aid of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution. Variety thought that the musical’s “greatest selling point ... is the marquee value of Max Bygraves in the role originated on Broadway by Phil Silvers.” New Statesman found the story “stale,” the music “unremarkable.” “What saves it is the genuine talent and high spirits of Max Bygraves as the hero and Maggie Fitzgibbon as the bulldog wife” (Guardian). “Contains everything that has almost ruined several other American musicals, and nothing else” (Spectator). In January the number of performances per week was reduced and times changed because Max Bygraves found the role “long and strenuous” (Times 16/1). The New York production ran for 400 performances.

"Halfway through ... two of the five characters complain to each other that they 'just don't know what it's all about.' Neither, I confess, did I. It was all, I gather, a rather meaningless, hackneyed story of a conflict between working class parents and their university-educated son" (Norwood News 3/11/61, 22).

Cameron Johnson. Reviews: Stage 2/11/61, 18; Times 26/10/61, 18. Comment: Moral Re-Armament. Peter Howard was the leader of MRA 1961–65. Stage said “there is absolutely no doubt about the sincerity of these pieces ... Judged from a theatrical standpoint, however, they are pretty abysmal” (Stage); Times agreed. Comment: Performed in Yiddish by the Polish State Jewish Theatre. Variety called the play a “trivial piece ... an unfortunate selection ... a contrived story about deception.” Stage noted Ida Kaminska’s “masterly acting.” “Kaminska is a Sarah Bernhardt and a Sir Donald Wolfit rolled into one. And she succeeds her mother, whose name has become legend in Yiddish theatre history. She is salvaging from the ravages of war the remains of what was very virile theatre in a language which is common to millions of Jews of different nationality. This play probably was not the best shop window for this new season” (Daily Herald).

Comment: Performed in Yiddish by the Polish State Jewish Theatre. “Though admirably staged, does not wholly satisfy. The story is thin, and the mixture does not have the craftsmanship that Goldfaden himself would have given it” (Stage).

Comment: The production was staged previously at the Playhouse, Oxford, 2/10/61. “A very unglamorous affair,” the sort of production expected at provincial repertory theatres (New Statesman). However, Guardian was more impressed, although it criticized Roger Livesey’s performance which needed to be firmer and more compelling, a performance Christian Science Monitor dubbed “outstanding.” Spectator attempted to give a balanced view of the play itself—its achievements as well as its faults, as did Times. The first New York production ran for 125 performances.

Comment: A charity preview was given on 2/11 in aid of the West Indian Theatre Trust and the Negro Theatre Workshop. “A pan-African political melodrama of staggering crudity” “which also suffered from “bad acting and worse direction” (New Statesman). Tribune gave a lengthy and more considered view of the play and production. Stage and Times (3/11) noted that on opening night, actor Edric Connor collapsed on stage after the beginning of the second act, bringing the performance to a close. The production reopened six days later with Leo Carera replacing Connor.

Comment: “The author has developed his interesting theme in a casual and almost cosy manner” (Variety). Stage felt that the play did not fully capture Roman England in A.D. 410 and at times came “perilously close to the country-house drawing-room.” Times said there was “often [an] absurd disparity of means and ends,” but that it could be enjoyed as “an extreme example of Mr. Sherriff’s compulsive domesticity as a playwright.” Tribune declared “no towering work of the imagination, this is nevertheless the most informative play I’ve seen in years.”

Comment: Meadow Players. The trilogy was staged previously at the Playhouse, Oxford, and was presented to be set against O’Neill’s Mourning Becomes Electra (see 61.344). The trilogy took nearly four hours to perform—“something of an ordeal” but “a curious and unexpected pleasure” (Tatler). Guardian was disappointed with the trilogy but found praise for the staging of the choruses. “An evening of romanticized tragedy, fussily produced with over-elaborate, intrusive settings, and only competent performances by most of the players, is redeemed by the work of Ronald Lewis as Orestes and of Ruth Meyers as Cassandra” (Stage). The production was “never more than competent, and much of the time not even that” (Tribune). Minos Volanakis “lets his main emphasis fall throughout not on the ritual form but on the drama” (Times).

Review: Stage 16/11/61, 13. Comment: Performed in Yiddish by the Polish State Jewish Theatre. Stage said that producing the play was “a mistake. Dull in the writing, it tells with more argument than drama the story of Spinoza and his expulsion from the Community by the Elders, who could not stomach his philosophy.” Moreover, the acting was melodramatic rather than naturalistic.

61.334 It Won't Be a Stylish Marriage (C) A. P. Dearsley. INTIMATE 13/11/61. 1st perfd Leas Pavilion, Folkestone, 27/11/50. Comment: The play was also broadcast BBC Light Programme 9/1/52. “Pamela Weston is the ward of three middle-aged uncles, who have guarded her with more than motherly care from childhood. The uncles, two ex-Army men, the other an ex-Naval Petty Officer, keep something of their Service discipline in the household. They have an inherent suspicion of housekeepers; indeed of women in general, but when Mrs. Mathews, a homely, honest-to-goodness party, arrives on the scene with a Northern accent that can be cut with a knife, the fun really begins” (Stage 30/11/50, 10).

Review: Stage 16/11/61, 14. Comment: Performed in Yiddish by the Polish State Jewish Theatre. The company’s “slightly outmoded form of acting is indeed specifically suited for this late 19th century cartoon of Polish Jewry, with its wittily observed characters, all a little larger than life. It is a highly diverting story about a rich merchant, who takes to his bed after over-indulgence in eating and drinking, but recovers in time to confound his family and the charity officials who are already gloating over his estate” (Stage).

Comment: Cambridge Arts Theatre Trust, English Stage Company. A “play of pure observation... It reports a day the life of a gang of building workers. They meet at the station in the morning, work, shelter from the rain, complain about the tea, and pack the job in when they are asked to clean a ditch without rubber boots” (Daily Herald). New Statesman praised virtually every aspect of the play and the production. “Without any sign of talent. It is tedious, obvious, boring” (Stage). “We get tired of waiting for something to happen” (Times).

Comment: “The story of an ordinary little chap who is thought, wrongly, to have a skeleton in his cupboard” (Spectator). “Almost wholly insufferable” (Guardian). “Needs drastic revision and tightening ... some of the acting is deplorable,” though with good performances from William Hartnell and Joyce Carey (Variety). The plot was too manipulated, but nevertheless “entertaining” (Times).

Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 23/11/61, 13. Comment: Performed in Yiddish by the Polish State Jewish Theatre. "Chewel Buzgan ... brings out the full flavour of the philosophic milkman in the Czarist Russian village" (Stage).

61.339 Penthesilea (T) Neil Curry (adpt of Heinrich von Kleist's play, 1876 [written 1807]; trans Alexandra Trone; new version by Neil Curry). TOWER, CANONBURY, 17/11/61. 1st perf this adpt. Cast: TTC. Plot: Gassner, Hochman. Reviews: New Statesman 24/11/61, 806; Stage 23/11/61, 14; Times 18/11/61, 4. Comment: New Statesman enjoyed the production of "perhaps the most hilarious tragedy ever penned by a man of genius." Stage noted that various aspects of the production succeeded despite the inherent difficulties of Kleist's work.

61.340 Black Limelight (P, 3a) Gordon Sherry. INTIMATE 20/11/61. 1st perfd Mansfield, New York, 9/11/36; 1st British perf "Q" Theatre 12/4/37. Plot: Best/36, 429, Bordman/4, 144, Hirschak. Comment: The first New York production of this murder mystery ran for 64 performances.

61.341 Dear Charles (C, 3a) Alan Melville (fnd on Marc-Gilbert Sauvajan, Les enfants d'Édouard [1948], which was fnd on Frederic Jackson and Roland Bottomley, Love and Learn [1944]). RICHMOND 20/11/61. 1st perfd this version New, Hull, 3/11/52. Joy Andrews, Frederick Farley, Paul Bogdan, John Horsley, Peter Hughes, William Simons, Anna Palk. Dir Rory McDermot; Dec John Piper. Plot: Best/54, 360–61, Bordman/4, 323, Bronner, French/2, Hirschak, Loney, 278. Comment: The first New York production (Morosco 15/9/54) ran for 155 performances.

61.342 Pitchblende (P) Clare Hoskyns-Abrahall and Justine Glover. HOVENDEN 20/11/61. 1st perfd Hovenden 18/11/57. Cast: Stage 16/11/61, 8. Moira Bradley, Marion Desmond, Dione Ewin, Derek Lanyon, Kenneth Seger, Valery Hovenden. Dir Valerie Hovenden, Jean Black. Comment: The play was about Marie Curie.

61.343 Rebecca (P, 3a) Daphne du Maurier (adpt of her novel, 1938). STREATHAM HILL 20/11/61. Mrs. Danvers Frances Lovering; Jack Favell Michael McKeritt; Mrs. De Winter Susan Shaw. Plot: Bordman/4, 244, Fletcher, French, Hirschak, Kabatchnik/2.

Plot: Best/31, 65, Bordman, Bordman/4, 36, Bronner, Bryer, Carpenter, 127–33, Dowling, Fletcher, Gassner, Hirschak, Hochman, Kabatchnik/2, Law, MacNicholas, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel, Wilmeth. Reviews: New Statesman 1/12/61, 865; Observer 26/11/61, 26; Spectator 1/12/61, 820–21; Sphere 25/11/61, 321; Stage 23/11/61, 14; Tatler 6/12/61, 711; Times 22/11/61, 15; Tribune 1/12/61, 11; Variety 6/12/61, 64. Comment: The play was produced to juxtapose with Aeschylus's Oresteia (see 61.330a-c), a juxtaposition Tribune said did not work out. New Statesman thought it was a pity the two sets of productions enjoyed only short runs as they were better than the Old Vic's usual Shakespearean fare; Stephen Moore and Sonia Dresdel gave very good performances. Observer said the "production is an enthusiastically melodramatic affair." Spectator observed that the advantage of seeing the play "in performance is that one is at least spared O'Neill's stage directions, which are even more pretentious than his text." The first New York production ran for 150 performances.

61.345 The Keep (C, 3a) Gwyn Thomas. COURT 22/11/61. Cast: Findlater; Stage 30/11/61, 13; Theatricalia; Times 23/11/61, 15; Variety 6/12/61, 64; WWT/14. Ben Morton Mervyn Johns; Constantine Morton Glyn Owen; Miriam Morton Jessie Evans; Russell Morton Aubrey Richards; Wallace Morton Windsor Davies; Oswald Morton Denys Graham; Alvin Morton Dudley Jones; Mr. Wilmot Graham Suter; Caradoc Slee David Garfield. Lic Alfred Esdaile; Gen mgr Doreen Dixon; Dir John Dexter; Dgn Ken Calder; Mus arr Dudley Moore; Assist dir Derek Goldby. Comment: English Stage Company. Spectator opined that Gwyn Thomas was "at his best when painting word pictures of zany scenes." "Dramatically archaic, creakingly contrived ... Welsh wit at its smug and pontifical worst" (New States- man). "The actors revel in their opportunities" (Times).

61.346 And Him Stretched . . . (D) Patrick Galvin. UNITY 24/11/61.* Alex Farrell, Gerald McAllister, Helen Cosgrave, John Clarke. Dir Godfrey Quigley; Dec David Marshall. Reviews: New Statesman 1/12/61, 865; Stage 30/11/61, 14. Comment: New Statesman regretted the play lurched "into the dreary old routine of whisky, church and Republic, farce and self-pity." Stage also noted the play was very like other Irish plays but that it did suggest that "the Irish neurosis ... is caused by the country's inability to live up to the precepts of the rebellion."

61.347a Fando and Lis (P, 1a) Fernando Arrabal (trans Barbara Wright of Fando et Lis, 1959). COURT 26/11/61. 1 perf. 1st British perf Manchester University 24/11/61. Comment: Livings did not know whether to write "high comedy" or "broad farce" (Tribune). Similarly, Variety said Livings "is an undisciplined but talented writer. If he ever learns to write a plot and believable characters he may come up with a successful play." New Statesman pointed to one scene which could be excised and thereby make the piece "the funniest and most original British play of the year." The humour stemmed from performances by Bryan Pringle, Roy Kinnear, Bob Grant, Griffith Davies and June Barry (Spectator). See also Lloyd Evans, 106–07.

61.353 Dracula (P) Hamilton Deane [and John L. Balderston] (adpt of Bram Stoker's novel, 1897). HOVENDEN 29/11/61. Plot: Best/27, 422–23, Bordman/3, 328, French/2, Hischak, Kabatchnik/2, Shipley. Comment: Paul Stockman again played Dracula (see 61.100).

Comment: "A long string of half-cock explosions and ideas with no pay-off, although Patricia Routledge was good in a couple of items (New Statesman). "Witless, saccharine and calculated to make you wonder how they can bring themselves to get up and do it" (Observer). Only one of the 37 items was noteworthy (Variety). A conventional revue trying to be original (Times).

61.355a Mort and Levy: A Limited Engagement (P, 1a) Charles Marowitz. BRITISH DRAMA LEAGUE THEATRE 30/11/61.* 3 perf. Reviews: New Statesman 6/10/61, 486; Observer 17/12/61, 21; Spectator 15/12/61, 902; Stage 7/12/61, 13 Times 1/12/61, 15. Comment: In-Stage Theatre. "Death is one half of music-hall double act" (Spectator). "A total misfire" (Times). Spectator said that both plays were performed extremely well. During the run, Charles Marowitz's The Burning Issue was added (a satire on lectures).

61.355b The Removal (P, 1a) Charles Marowitz. BRITISH DRAMA LEAGUE THEATRE 30/11/61.* 3 perf. Cast: Stage 7/12/61, 13. 61.357 The Killer (D, 3a) Eugène Ionesco (trans Donald Watson of Tueur sans gages, 1958). TOWER, CANON-BURY, 1/12/61. 1st British perf Theatre Royal, Bristol, 16/5/61. Cast: TTC. Plot: French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem. Review: Times 2/12/61, 4. Comment: Times praised Laurence Barnes's performance as Berenger and Michael Almaz's direction which "cleverly supplies the static with numerous illusions of movement."

61.358 The Rules of the Game (P, 2a) Luigi Pirandello (trans Frederick May of Il giuoco delle parti, 1918). QUESTORS 2/12/61. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw. Review: Middlesex County Times 9/12/61, 14.

61.359 Green Room Rag. ADELPHI 3/12/61. Reviews: Stage 7/12/61, 14; Times 4/12/61, 14. Comment: The Victorian theatre was the theme of the Rag. Stage detailed the numerous items performed. "Mixed burlesque and nostalgia" (Times).

Comment: "Not a strong import," but Ian Carmichael should attract local audiences (Variety). Implausible, but "acceptable second grade comedy" (Guardian), and similarly Tatler. The comedy "crumbles as soon as it begins" (Birmingham Post). The comedy "disarms by its naivety and contrives at the same time to keep us thoroughly puzzled" (Times). The first New York production (Ethel Barrymore 14/12/60) ran for 189 performances.

61.364 Fox Amongst the Grapes (P) Jack Allcock. 20th CENTURY 6/12/61.* Cast: Stage 2/11/61, 17. Shelley Peter Anderson; Harriett Westbrook Ffrangcon Price; Hogg Kenneth Gilbert; Mary June Thody; Barbara Kean, Edward Phillips, Dorothy Trumbar, George Dare, Jack Allcock. Dir Victor Hughes; Dec Jack Redon. Review: Stage 7/12/61, 17. Comment: Shop Window Production. The play concentrated "on the melodramatic side of Shelley's tangled affairs... the acting and Victor Hughes's direction reached a remarkably high standard for a shop-window production" (Stage).

61.365 Nero (Mus orgy) Colin Turner and Geoffrey Pattie and Jonathan Hursey (mus). STANHOPE INSTITUTE 7/12/61. Review: Stage 14/12/61, 13. Comment: Court Drama Group. A retelling, with topical interpolations, of the historical events surrounding Nero.

61.366 The Dragon (Wonder P, 3a) Augusta Gregory. Comment: Birmingham Post praised the staging which was well suited to the Mermaid. Good performances from John Woodvine, Spike Milligan and Sean Scully (Guardian). Illustrated London News thought the production could be more sinister. Times thought that tricks in staging obscured the narrative and the actors.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer be-moaned the performances of George Murcell and Peggy Ashcroft, but praised John Gielgud, Judi Dench and Dorothy Tutin. Spectator was largely bored by the play despite some good acting. Variety noted that the production, wrongly, “emphasizes the comedy at the expense of the pathos,” and that the first and last acts were the most effective. Tatler said that the production failed to evoke “compassionate laughter.” Times detected an uneasy combination of styles in Michel Saint-Denis' direction.

Comment: New Statesman looked forward to the play being out of copyright when it could be “radically adapted to the needs of modern youth and common decency.” Anne Heywood was a “likeably human” Peter, but the production did not need some of the “comic elaborations which go against [the play’s] grain” (Times).

Comment: The cast numbered over 100. A formulaic production (Spectator). There was “more mush than merriment” in this production which ran over three hours on opening night (Daily Herald). The story was very much of Robert Nesbitt’s devising but managed to include all the elements of a traditional fairy story. Charlie Drake, “an anti-romantic grotesque,” navigated his role “with perfect aplomb” (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. The play is known as The Firebugs and Biedermann and the Firebugs in USA. Observer found the final third of the production to be “nothing short of terrifying.” Spectator said the play was better on the page than on the stage, but generally admired the crisp production, apart from the introduction of a projection of a nuclear explosion prior to the epilogue. This led Tribune to declare this was an anti-bomb play. Christian Science Monitor praised Alfred Marks’s performance and Lindsay Anderson’s magnificent direction.

The piece featured the adventures of a talking cat. “The children’s response ... was rapt and joyful. It had plenty of slapstick, issues they cared about and people they could identify with” (New Statesman). “The younger members of the audience are apt to become so involved with the story as to offer apt, if unsolicited, advice to the heroes in their moments of danger” (Stage).

Comment: The piece (which involved Bunter on a desert island) was bound to please to please aficionados; Peter Bridgmont, new to the Bunter role, performed well (Stage). Times thought that "Bunter is becoming very evidently a period piece."

Cast: WWT/14. Demon King John Bryans; Fairy Queen Sylvia Cardew; Bailiff John Hart Dyke; Margery Daw Joanne Michelle; Pinchem Charles Stewart; Grabem Bobby Dennis; Squire of Merrydell Peter Haddon; Colin Peter Gilmore; Jack Smart Jack Hulbert; Dustman Richard Dobson; Mother Goose Cicely Courtneidge; Priscilla the Goose Harry Cranley; King Dancers; Barbara Lynn Juveniles. Dir William Robertson; Dec Anthony Purvis. Reviews: Stage 4/1/62, 13; Times 27/12/61, 12. Comment: "A pantomime presented in the very best of tradition, and with plenty of zip, sparkle, comedy and topical references. It is a production which gives parents the chance to show their kiddies the true magic and spirit of pantomime" (Stage).

61.390 Cinderella (Panto) Emile Littler (bk) and Hastings Mann (lyr, mus). HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 26/12/61. Cast: WWT/14. Father Time Terry Wall; Fairy Godmother Jean Ramsay; Dandini Christine Taylor; Dizzie and Lizzie Dawkes and Webb; Baron Hardup Bert Platt; Prince Charming Elizabeth Lerner; Buttons Arthur Askey; Cinderella Erica Yorke; Flip Billy Nelson; Flap Billy Morris; Flop Chuck O'Neil. Pres Jack Hylton, Emile Littler; Dir Marjorie Ristori; Dec Doris Zinkeisen. Reviews: Stage 4/1/62, 13; Times 27/12/61, 12. Comment: Notable for Arthur Askey as Buttons, who was supported by other good performances. However, the pantomime was "a down-to-earth affair which fails from, more than anything else, a quite literal absence of magic" (Stage). Times noted that the book was essentially the same as used at Streatham Hill (60.422) with topical modifications.

61.391 Jack and Jill (Panto) Emile Littler (bk) and Hastings Mann (lyr, mus). STREATHAM HILL 26/12/61. Review: Stage 4/1/62, 14. Comment: "An unusual degree of outstanding musical ability is the most noteworthy and enjoyable aspect of Jack and Jill ... with Allan Bruce and Jane Fyffe in the name parts displaying outstandingly fine singing voices and musicianship, pleasing personalities" (Stage).

61.392 The Marvellous Story of Puss in Boots (P, 2a) Nicholas Stuart Gray (adpt of Charles Perrault's story, "Le maistre chat, ou le chat botté," 1697) [and Ronnie Hill (mus)]. Comment: Stage opined that Hackett's play was a remarkably good choice to turn into a musical, and the production demonstrated the company's "strength and versatility." The original version was first performed in New York (Cort 30/12/21) as Captain Applejack and ran for 195 performances.

Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. The first out-of-copyright performance in London, although this performance showed no sign "of changing the policy of tradition" (Times). The performance did not warm up until Act 2 (Guardian). The production "made its impact of melodious charm and still not altogether worn-out humour" (Stage).

Times 9/1/62, 5. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. Guardian noted that the theatre was packed and the performance was "a good one at least on the choral, orchestral and male side." The performance went with "customary smoothness under Isidore Godfrey's vigilant conducting," although some vocal performances could have been better (Stage). The performance "lacked verve and radiance" (Times).

62.4 Watch It, Sailor! (C, 3a) Philip King and Falkland L. Cary. INTIMATE 8/1/62. Plot: Loney. Comment: The cast included Edward Petherbridge (Bowden, 137).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. A handsome production with a very good Rosalind and Jaques; and yet New Statesman was bored. Guardian also found the acting uneven but praised Patrick Wymark and Max Adrian. Observer said the the director had made “a brave but inconclusive attempt to give the play a formal cohesion which it does not possess,” making it seem like a “late Shakespeare play.” “The best balanced, the most properly ironical and not the least As You Like It we have had for many years” (Tatler). Times was generally laudatory.

Comment: D’Oyly Carte Opera Company. “The company sings richly under Isidore Godfrey’s direction; and, in fact, the only thing that disturbed my Yeomen night was an occasional lack of edge in the spoken word; enunciation could be fuzzy, the rarest D’Oyly Carte fault (Illustrated London News). Guardian admired Godfrey’s “stylish conducting,” but unlike audience members was not persuaded by John Reed’s performance of Jack Point.

62.8a The Dumb Waiter (P, 1a) Harold Pinter. THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 15/1/62. Terence Brady, Bruce Myers. Plot: Demastes/2, Fletcher, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Weintraub. Reviews: Daily Herald 16/1/62, 7; Guardian 16/1/62, 7; Stage 18/1/62, 13. Comment: A superficial and poorly performed revival (Stage). “Although they retained some of its atmosphere, despite Terence Brady and Bruce Myers playing it in crosstalk comedian style, they did not succeed in demonstrating precisely what it meant” (Daily Herald). “An excellent performance” (Guardian).

62.8b Would Anyone Who Saw the Accident . . . ? (Revue) Terence Brady and Michael Bogdanov and Carl Bontoft (mus). THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 15/1/62. 1st perfd Dublin; 1st London perf. Comment: Trinity College, Dublin, Theatre. The Dumb Waiter served as an excellent preface to this “zany, egg-headed” show (Guardian). The cast “only succeeded spasmodically in shedding any light on their self-proclaimed target of ‘human relationships.’ Too much of it was familiar revue ground. Too much was made up of awful puns and the dubious humour of mispronouncing words” (Daily Herald). Spectator remembered the revue mainly for its “outrageous puns.”

62.9 The Gondoliers; or, The King of Barataria (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). Comment: D’Oyly Carte Opera Company. “Undistinguished singing” (Stage). “Too often, crucial lines were spoken or sung with apparent unawareness of their proper emphasis, and gestures that once had point have become meaningless and affected” (Times).

Review: Stage 18/1/62, 16. Comment: “Plot and treatment reveal a consciously intellectual approach to the business of mystery playwriting, which achieves an artificiality that might be acceptable in novel form but just will not live on the stage" (Stage).

Comment: The plot involved an erratic, frightening young man who might be a sex murderer (but isn't) who commits suicide. Reviewers noted Speight's indebtedness to Pinter. "Not a sound play, but it is never boring, often tense and funny" (New Statesman). Guardian thought the audience's laughter was out of place. "A study of murderous sadism played for laughs and getting them" (Times).

62.13 Twelfth Night; or, What You Will (C, 2a) William Shakespeare. Comment: The Old Vic debut of Eileen Atkins: "She has an agreeable, intelligent eagerness as well as what many Violas lack, a ready sense of humour, and she speaks with a fervour and fluency that keep us listening intently to the major passages" (Birmingham Post). The cast generally failed to implement Colin Graham's concept of "May-time madness" in the play (Times).

Review: Stage 8/2/62, 14. Comment: Described as a political pantomime, "the effort to succeed on two fronts, first to amuse and secondly to sting, demands a good deal more talent than the Unity company can deploy" (Stage).

62.15 An Echo of Thunder (P) Kenneth Ware. UNITY 21/1/62. 1st perf? Review: Stage 25/1/62, 13. Comment: The play, about Teddy Boys and their boredom, was dubbed a very poor imitation of Brendan Behan's work (Stage).

Comment: The production originated in Stratford-upon-Avon (1/1/62) and was the first non-D’Oyly Carte production in London of the work since the copyright had expired. Stage said that the operatic approach to the music was the freshest aspect of the production; it also noted that the D’Oyly Carte practice of encores was largely abolished. Times said the production “restores vividness and humour as well as genuine charm to Iolanthe.”

Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 3/2/62, 6; Stage 1/2/62, 14; Times 29/1/62, 5. Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. Stage complained the actors’ inaudibility obscured the plot which was concerned with the intrusion of an orphaned niece into the lives of her aunt and uncle. Christian Science Monitor said it was “a bitter and disillusioned attack upon marriage.”

62.23 The Ghost Train (P, 3a) Arnold Ridley. RICHMOND 29/1/62. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 22/6/25. Cast: Theatricalia. Arnold Ridley, Frederick Farley, Julie Paul, John Bromley, Adele Strong, Christine Edmonds, Nigel Samuel, Vanessa Thornton, Rory McDermot, Edwin Apps; Dir Robert Peake; Dec John Piper. Plot: Best/26, 369, Bordman/3, 292, Fletcher, French, French/2, Hischak, Kabatchnik, Law, Loney, 135. Comment: The first New York production (Eltinge 42nd Street 25/8/26) ran for 61 performances; the location was Americanized.

62.24 The Marriage-Go-Round (C) Leslie Stevens. INTIMATE 29/1/62.  Plot: Bordman/4, 355, Bronner, French/2, Hischak, 309. Comment: The cast included Derek Bond (Bowden, 115).

Comment: New Statesman called it an “absurd 14th-century situation comedy,” although it did possess “a certain wit and charm.” “A labored piece, witless and generally inept” (Variety). An “extraordinarily inept piece” (Times).

62.26 The Big Killing (Thriller, 3a) Philip Mackie. Comment: A formulaic murder mystery with flat characters.

62.27 A Site to Behold. KING GEORGE'S HALL 3/2/62.* Review: Stage 8/2/62, 15. Comment: Experimental Theatre Group. The final version of a group improvisation that involved a young man buying and selling a piece of property, largely for prestige, only to discover later it was sitting on a rich coalfield.

62.28 East of the Pump (C) Alf Fogel (bk, mus, lyr). SAVILLE 4/2/62.* Morry Teitelbaum Alf Fogel; Yolanda Shirley Frome; Abie Allan Cinnamon. Dgn Neville Wortman; Dir by Leonard Pascoe. Review: Stage 8/2/62, 14. Comment: Charities Theatre Group. Performed on Sunday evenings for eight weeks. "It is set in London's East End and the lighthearted plot revolves around a Jewish barber, Morry Teitelbaum, and the comical romantic exploits of his somewhat voluptuous daughter Yolanda." Stage also enjoyed the comedy and music.

62.29 The Shoemaker's Holiday (Pleasant C of the Gentle Craft) Thomas Dekker. OLD VIC 4/2/62. 1 perf. Comment: A non-D'Oyly Carte production by Tyrone Guthrie that originated in Stratford, Ontario. "It was like seeing Pinafore for the first time" (Stage). Guardian did not go as far as Stage, noting that "fewer radical departures from the cast-iron tradition of the former monopolists are practicable;" Observer entertained a similar view. Times said that the stage business was "a mixture of old-fashioned parody and dainty mockery."

62.35 Signpost to Murder (Thriller, 3a) Monte Doyle. CAMBRIDGE 9/2/62. 420 perf. Comment: "The most accomplished thriller for several seasons" (Observer). Stage complained the piece contained too much: "A thriller and a half. More than that even; it is about three thrillers bundled into one. Complexity of character, situation, motive and emotion abounds. There is a maze of misleading suspense moments." Times called the piece "old fashioned melodrama."

62.36 Strife (P, 3a) John Galsworthy. TOWER, CANONBURY, 9/2/62. 1st perfd Duke of York's 9/3/09 (m). Cast: TTC. Plot: Demastes/1, Fletcher, Griffiths, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Sobel, Sternlicht, 103-4. Review: Stage 15/2/62, 15. Comment: A good performance which proves to be "surprisingly and interestingly up-to-date in relation to present industrial disputes" (Stage). The first New York performance was at the New 17/11/09.

62.37 Someone to Kill (Thriller) Jack Popplewell. Review: Stage 15/2/62, 14. Comment: The title was changed later to Policy for Murder (62.357). "Not so much a who-done-it as a who-was-it-done-to" (Stage).

62.38 The TV Murders (Thriller) Frank Williams. INTIMATE 12/2/62. 1st perfd Palace, Watford, 2/5/60. Comment: Frank Williams appeared in his own thriller (Bowden, 115). Two murders occur in a boarding house where a television set has just been installed.

Comment: "A comedy about the new wave of English actors and the sound they make" (Stage 18/1/62, 8). "A spry, sharp piece" (New Statesman). "Pretty terrible," although humorous in spots (Guardian). Spectator said the piece would have been better without the introduction of minor characters. Tribune advised Dundy to read her husband's book, Curtains, which would explain why her play was unsatisfactory.

Comment: Joss Ackland gave a splendid performance (Spectator, Variety). New Statesman criticized many aspects of the production, in particular the inept direction and Miles' performance as Accordionoff. "One of the most remarkable theatrical experiences I have ever had" (Christian Science Monitor). "The best thing staged at the Mermaid since it opened. In style and content, the play, with its varied scenes and large number of characters, fits the long open Mermaid stage particularly well, and the element of audience participation, although carried out only to a very limited extent, seems natural and persuasive because of the unity of auditorium and stage" (Stage). Tribune found this difficult play uneven in production but hoped it would be successful at the box office.

Comment: A non-D'Oyly Carte production by Tyrone Guthrie that originated in Stratford, Ontario. Guardian observed that Pirates "being more a parody of light opera than bouffes in its own right is much less amenable to the Guthrie touch than the nautical burlesque." "Guthrie's resourceful fantasy enjoys itself in realizing the picaresque farrago of kind-hearted pirates," although not all the audience was amused (Times).

Comment: Compagnie Marie Bell. Observer dismissed the play after noting indebtedness to Anouilh and Colette. "Mme Bell sweeps the stage like a queen" (Christian Science Monitor). Spectator left the theatre halfway through the performance. Times said the play suffered from structural weaknesses and the subject matter was banal.

Comment: "Initially amusing, punctuated by incessant opening and shutting of doors in bachelor flats, and finally spoilt by an excess of frenzied mugging" (New Statesman). Tatler took a more genial view of the piece. Variety opined the piece “may have to struggle to survive at the beginning but, if it does so, it could settle down to a reasonable run.” This sort of caper is always successful when the cast knows its business (Times).

Comment: Kenneth Tynan (Observer) left before the production ended "wondering how long it had been since this second-rate company had spawned a first-rate actor." A "torpid production" (Variety). Christian Science Monitor was able to commend the verse speaking of the company. After noting with incredulity that the production began with King Edward's final speech from Henry VI Part III, Stage further complained "Bad speaking by most of the company and a lot of weak performances add to a sorry evening."

Comment: "It has no charm and little wit, melody or acting. In fact, its main interest appears to be that it is probably the first musical without femme performers" (Variety). Tatler noted the piece was "given a very friendly reception" on opening night. The original play "has lost its dramatic force and a great deal of its original humour without gaining anything" (Birmingham Post); Stage concurred. The original play was "a vastly better entertainment than this musical version" (Times).

62.77a George Dandin (C) Molière (trans David Thompson of Georges Dandin ou le mari confondu, 1668). TOWER, CANONBURY, 9/3/62. 1st London perf this trans. Cast: TTC. Plot: French/2, Hochman. Reviews: Stage 15/3/62, 17; Times 10/3/62, 4; Tribune 16/3/62, 11. Comment: Performed in modern dress, with "charm and vigour" (Tribune). "David Thompson's rumbustious production and translation is full of felicities" (Stage). Times was fulsome in its praise of the entire production.

62.77b The Searching Satyrs (C) Roger Lancelyn Green (trans of Sophocles, Ichneutae, c. 460 B.C.). TOWER, CANONBURY, 9/3/62. 1st London perf this trans. Cast: TTC. Plot: Hochman. Reviews: Stage 15/3/62, 15; Times 10/3/62, 4; Tribune 16/3/62, 11. Comment: "This is more of a curiosity than a piece of entertainment, although Mr. Green has achieved some amusing rhymes" (Stage). "The archaic idiom of the humour does undoubtedly tend to get in the way" (Times). Tribune said this fragment was "a venerable bore."

62.78 Don't Tell Father (C) Kay Bannerman and Harold

Plot: Best/50, 329, Bordman/4, 294, Fazia, 78–79, Fletcher, Hischak, Hochman, Loney, 267, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Reviews: Birmingham Post 13/3/62, 9; Christian Science Monitor 4/4/62, 13; Guardian 13/3/62, 7; Illustrated London News 24/3/62, 474; New Statesman 23/3/62, 429; Observer 18/3/62, 26; Stage 15/3/62, 15; Times 13/3/62, 15. Comment: Birmingham Post said this production was not as impressive as the 1950 performance of the play in Christopher Fry's translation, Ring Round the Moon (Wearing 50.14); Guardian and New Statesman echoed this view. Times said this original French version was tougher than the translated version.

62.81 Ross (P, 2a) Terence Rattigan. STREATHAM HILL 12/3/62; trfd to HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 19/3/62. Plot: Bordman/4, 379, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, Matlaw, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: The post-West End touring production which ended its run at the Haymarket on 10/3/62 (see 60.145).

62.82 Salad Days (MP, 2pt) Dorothy Reynolds (bk, lyr) and Julian Slade (bk, lyr, mus). WIMBLEDON 12/3/62. Jasmine Dee, Mary Miller Plot: Fletcher, Gänzl, Gänzl/3, 658–61, Green, Kennedy, Loney, 289, OTF. Comment: Peter Haddon Company.

Comment: The Royal Shakespeare Company took over the theatre on an interim basis with the objective of producing experimental plays. Christian Science Monitor said that producing the play was a grievous mistake. New Statesman thought that Cooper's "themes are sometimes more inspired than his handling of them." Observer found much to praise including the acting of Geraldine McEwan and Derek Godfrey. Spectator faulted the ending of the play (when Bernard breaks the theatrical frame and condemns the play). The first New York production of Edward Albee's adaptation of Cooper's play (Plymouth 29/11/67) ran for 84 performances.

62.84 Joyce Grenfell (One-woman show) Richard Addinsell (mus). HAYMARKET 14/3/62. Cast: WWT/14. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 17/3/62, 10; New Statesman 23/3/62, 429; Observer 18/3/62, 26; Stage 22/3/62, 13; Times 15/3/62, 8. Comment: A programme of monologues and songs by Joyce Grenfell. Grenfell is always worth seeing because of her "unbeatable timing and her real affection for her subjects" (New Statesman). "There is a little new material, none of it good" (Observer). However, Times asserted that, except for three numbers, the programme was "new to London."

62.85 L'annonce faite à Marie (Mystical D, 4a) Paul Claudel and Maria Scibor (mus). PICCADILLY 19/3/62. 1st perfd L'Oeuvre, Paris, 22/12/12. Plot: Best/22, 510–11, Bordman/3, 198, Gassner, Hischak, Hochman, Matlaw, Mplots, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Reviews: Guardian 20/3/62, 7; New Statesman 30/3/62, 462; Stage 22/3/62, 13; Times 20/3/62, 15. Comment: New Statesman found the play "wildly uncongenial." Guardian averred that the play was "hard to swallow" for an English audience, and the inaudibility of Danièle Delorme did not help matters. Similarly, Stage said the play was "in danger of seeming remote, long-drawn-out, even absurd," but acknowledged "the passionate faith and sincerity of the author." Times viewed the play on its own terms and called the production “eloquent.”

62.86 The Art of Seduction (Ent) John Barton (adpt of Choderlos de Laclos’ novel, Les liaisons dangereuses, 1782). Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. New Statesman could not understand why this “concert version” of the novel had been staged. Christian Science Monitor praised the performances of Irene Worth and Keith Michell while expressing some doubts about the enterprise; similarly Times. Tribune singled out Diana Rigg as the only cast member with “any animation.”

62.87 Doctor in the House (C, 2a) Ted Willis (from Richard Gordon’s novel, 1952). RICHMOND 19/3/62. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Loney, 299. Comment: Performed by “The EMERGENCY WARD 10 Television Team” (Harrow Observer 15/3/62, 2).

62.88 Irma La Douce (MC, 2a) Julian More (bk, lyr) and David Heneker (bk, lyr) and Monty Norman (bk, lyr; adpt of Alexandre Breffort’s musical, 1956) and Marguerite Monnot (mus). Plot: Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Patterson, Purdom, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 24/3/62, 10; Guardian 21/3/7; New Statesman 30/3/62, 462; Stage 22/3/62, 13; Times 21/3/62, 8. Comment: “Played with depressing lack of conviction by several normally talented actors” (New Statesman). A very poor revival, staged with a revolve (Guardian). The performance was rushed, and the physical properties of the Mermaid militate against “comedy set in a domestic interior” (Times). “Here we have, if there is any dominating feature, a burlesque not far from the sort of thing applied nowadays to Lady Audley’s Secret in order to put some life into it” (Stage).

62.91 Anne Boleyn (Chronicle P) Peter Albery. ST. PANCRAS TOWN HALL 22/3/62. 1st perfd Repertory, Birmingham, 15/5/56. Cast: Stage 29/3/62, 14. George Boleyn Michael Wisher; Anne Boleyn Sylvia Read; Lady Maud Boleyn Betty Cardno; Mark Smeaton Mark Brackenbury; Henry the Eighth John Downing; Cardinal Wolsey Raymond Farrell; Queen Katherine Janet Henfrey; Sir Thomas More Norman Tyrrell; Thomas Cromwell William Fry; Dr. Strabolgius Lauriston Shaw; Margaret Sheldon Pamela Buchner; Sir Francis Weston Anthony Poole. Pres Theatre Group Productions; Dir Mark Brackenbury; Set Joan Jefferson Farjeon. Reviews: Stage 29/3/62, 14; Times 23/3/62, 17. Comment: Anne Boleyn emerged as a scheming woman rather than a tragic figure (Stage). However, Times said the characters failed to come across as human beings.

62.92 Play with a Tiger (P, 3a) Doris Lessing. COMEDY 22/3/62. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 19/2/62. Variety 4/4/62, 88. Comment: In the final analysis, New Statesman found the characters in this play, about “the doomed love of a serious, mature woman for a callow, bumptious youth,” to be insufferable. Christian Science Monitor noted that the gallery grew restless during the opening-night performance, but ultimately did not boo the play. Tribune faulted the construction, the dialogue, and the acting of Siobhan McKenna and Alex Viespi, both of whom Tatler praised. The play “provides Miss McKenna with an actress’s dream part that keeps her on stage all evening” (Stage).

62.93 Pantagleize (F, 3a) Michel de Ghelderode (trans George Hauger of Pantagleize, un coeur innocent dans le monde, 1930). TOWER, CANONBURY, 23/3/62. 1st British perf Civic, Leeds, 21/10/57. Cast: TTC. Plot: Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson, Shipley. Reviews: New Statesman 30/3/62, 462; Stage 29/3/62, 13; Times 24/3/62, 4. Comment: New Statesman urged readers to see “a wonderfully touching performance as the fool-hero by the diminutive Henry Woolf.” “The acting is exceptionally good” (Stage). Times liked the production generally and singled out Woolf’s impeccable Pantagleize, but faulted the play for “rambling in structure” and “rapid changes of tone and mood.”

62.94 Billy Liar (C, 3a) Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall (adpt of Waterhouse’s novel, 1959). WIMBLEDON 26/3/62. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Law, Loney, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: The Cambridge production (which concluded 8/2/62; see 60.286) now on its post-West End tour.

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian noted that there was a mixed reception on opening night. Spectator compared the play with Lessing’s Play with a Tiger (62.92), and concluded The Knack “proves itself more true, more angry and more moving than all Miss Lessing’s weightiness.” “A true work of the imagination” (Tribune). Times described the play as having a “naive plot with elusive undercurrents,” and opined some people might be impatient with that approach and so miss Jellicoe’s intentions. The first New York production (New 27/5/64) ran for 685 performances.

Comment: “It has a complicated and ingenious plot in which nothing goes quite as expected and which provides for the audience a succession of surprises” (Sphere). Observer and Times admired Knott’s craftsmanship as a thriller writer, while Birmingham Post said the developments in the plot were obvious and somewhat unconvincing. The first New York production (Belasco 26/10/61) ran for 196 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. “Under-rehearsed though it is by continental standards, it towers over everything else in London” (Observer). Spectator found fault with some of the direction but concluded it was still successful and not “too academic.” Tribune praised all aspects of the production. Illustrated London News confessed to being antipathetical to Brecht but still concluded that the piece “is directed astutely and vigorously performed: an overlong folktale for the theatre, with certain redeeming qualities.” “The best-produced, best-translated, best-acted bad play London has seen for some time” (New Statesman). “The best English speaking performance of Brecht yet given in this country” (Times). Michael Flanders (Narrator) performed from his wheelchair; however, he was “strangely restrained” (Variety).

62.101 The Life of Kaggs (P) Arnold Hinchcliffe. UNITY 30/3/62. 1st perfd Coliseum, Oldham, 9/1/61. Kaggs Roger Swaine. Dir Derek Goldby; Dgn John Andrews; Mus Frank Wagland. Reviews: New Statesman 20/4/62, 573; Stage 5/4/62, 13. Comment: Based on a true story in Henry Mayhew’s book on the London underworld, the piece was written originally as a play for television but was in fact performed first on the stage. Stage said “Roger Swaine reveals himself as an actor of considerable ability, hitting off very well the jaunty air of a man to whom life is a battle to be enjoyed.” New Statesman declared the play was “irresistible.”

62.102 Death of a Salesman (P, 2a) Arthur Miller. QUESTORS 31/3/62. 1st perfd Locust Street, Philadelphia, 22/1/49. Cast: QTA. Plot: Best/48, 53, Bordman, Bordman/4, 281, Bronner, Bryer, Fletcher, Gassner, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, 262, MacNicholas, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Wilmeth. Comment: The first New York production of this Pulitzer Prize-winning play (Morosco 10/2/49) ran for 742 performances.

62.103 Billy Liar (C, 3a) Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall (adpt of Waterhouse’s novel, 1959). RICHMOND 2/4/62. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Law, Loney, Vinson, Weintraub.

STREATHAM HILL 2/4/62; trfd to HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 9/4/62. 1st perfd Arts, Cambridge, 5/3/62. Plot: Weintraub. Comment: The revue was on a pre-West End tour, prior to opening at the Princes in May (62.149).

62.105 The Green Solitaire (Murder mystery) Falkland L. Cary. INTIMATE 2/4/62.* Cast: Stage 5/4/62, 14. Netta Harford Janet Butlin; Dorothy Beatrice Carter; Arthur

Jamieson Anthony Dutton; Sydney Grant Philip Carr; Margot Grant Grania Hayes; Esmee Bennison Miki Iveria; Lance Roberts Clive Russell; Madame Marietti Margaret Gibson; Inspector Harris Anthony Shirvell. Pres Frederick Marlow, G. M. Productions Ltd.; Dir Douglas Emery; Set Shelley Masters. Review: Stage 5/4/62, 14. Comment: The theft of the formula for a new perfume leads to a suicide that turns out to be a murder. Stage said the piece emphasized background over plot and was somewhat thin.

62.106 Magnificent Gourmet (C, 3a) Joseph Schrank. Comment: The play dealt with the "conflict between the two basic necessities of life—food and sex" (New York Times 7/2/62, 32). Apparently a West End production was envisioned (to open on 26/4/62) but it did not take place.

62.107 The Miracle Worker (P, 3a) William Gibson. WIMBLEDON 2/4/62. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/4,364, Bronner, Bryer, Fletcher, French/2, Loney, MacNicholas, Wilmeth. Comment: Peter Haddon Company.

Comment: Tribune criticized the play's loose construction. Observer said McKenna, like other Irish authors, "has still found nothing better to do than sit around making jokes about bishops, Jesuits, nuns and Englishmen." Ironically, the opening song of the piece began "This is the story about nothing at all," with which Variety agreed. The play had been a success in Dublin.

Comment: Ikon Company. The play was about "the strange behaviour of a psychiatrist's wife ... who falls obsessively in love with a young psychopath who half murders her after her husband has declined to treat him;" despite its improbabilities New Statesman said it should not be missed. "A gripping and often moving play ... carried forward with pace and sincerity by Tony Tanner and Sheila Allen" (Guardian). Observer opined that one day Sheila Allen would be a great actress. Christian Science Monitor said that some scenes were too melodramatic, an aspect Stage also noted. Times thought the play lacked credibility.

62.110 Look Homeward, Angel (D, 3a) Ketti Frings (based on Thomas Wolfe's novel, 1929). Comment: Illus- trated London News reported the production was cheered by the opening night audience; Christian Science Monitor said it was "an ovation the like of which is rarely heard in a London theater." Tatler said that the adaptation was not entirely successful. "A ripe old emotional fruitcake" (New Statesman). Guardian acknowledged the play's faults but declared "it moves and holds me," and praised Peter McEnery's "exceptionally good performance." Times struck a negative note because of the play's dripping "domestic emotionalism." The first New York production (Ethel Barrymore 28/11/57) ran for 564 performances.

Comment: "I can't bring myself to award it even one" star (New Statesman). Guardian said the play was "highly enjoyable," but the second act was weak. Spectator commended Mortimer for injecting seriousness into his work. Variety thought the main attraction of the production was Trevor Howard playing Sam Turner, "a brilliantly drawn characterization." Christian Science Monitor praised Mortimer's dialogue "which springs the imagination, and without floridity startles the sense of beauty." Observer almost forgave Howard for playing the role.

Comment: "A magnificent Sir Peter Teazle" from Ralph Richardson in a "rigidly stylish" production (New Statesman). A "memorably dressy" and generally well acted revival (Observer). "It is a quarter of a century since a cast of comparable strength was assembled for The School for Scandal" (Birmingham Post). "For all the glitter of names [the revival makes] only a middling impression" (Times).

Comment: New Statesman said the revue was disappointing because we cannot "believe in Thurber's people as anything but Thurber drawings." While individual items were interesting in themselves, the totality proved boring (Stage). Times reported the opening-night performance was "greeted with rapture." The New York production ran for 223 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. "A play to be seen for the parts rather than the whole; and the lines rather than the parts" (Observer). Tribune thought that this was Livings's best play to date but remarked that "his view of life seems to be not only pessimistic and disillusioned ... but disheartened.” However, Guardian thought that the play was little more than disjointed scenes about life in the Air Force. Stage found the play disappointing and like a comic strip. Times praised Anthony Page for maintaining a lively pace which made “the play’s changes in tone and mood” acceptable.

Comment: New Statesman detected elements of autobiography in the style of the dialogue. "A triumphantly complete cast" (Guardian). Tatler found the production "magically entertaining." Spectator compared the play's technique unfavorably with Armand Salacrou's L'inconnue d'Arras (1935). Times said the play was too anecdotal and trite. Peter Ustinov repeated his performance in the first New York production (Brooks Atkinson 12/2/63) ran for 159 performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. New Statesman praised John Dexter's "wonderful production" and the acting. Guardian, Stage and Tribune thought this was Wesker's best play to date, despite some weaknesses. Birmingham Post pointed out both the strengths and weaknesses of the play, and thought its success really depended on Dexter's production. Christian Science Monitor noted the piece was playing to full houses. Spectator thought it a bad play because Wesker began "with a wide-ranging dossier of conclusions about our class-ridden society and has then laboriously built them into a familiar setting"; moreover, his "over-simplified sociology appear[s] quite grotesque." See also Lloyd Evans, 109–11. The first New York production (Plymouth 1/10/63) ran for 149 performances.

Comment: Ikon Theatre Company. Christian Science Monitor said the production "had better be quickly forgotten." New Statesman complained about every aspect of the production and the translation. Times also complained about the translation "which abounds in luds, avers, and forsoothes, all in rhymed couplets ... difficult to speak." "Zena Walker's Célimène does something to illuminate an evening of benighted frippery" (Observer). The production closed on 12/5/62, a week earlier than planned.

Comment: The play suggested that the world's problems would be solved if people had faith in God (Variety). Guardian said the propaganda in the play was too blatant and oversimplified, a sentiment repeated by Stage. "Not so much a play as a sermon in theatrical form" (Birmingham Post).

62.144 The Boors (C [3a]) Carlo Goldoni (adpt Adrian Rendle of I rusteghi, 1760). TOWER, CANONBURY, 4/5/62. Cast: TTC. Plot: Hochman. Reviews: Stage 10/5/62, 17; Times 5/5/62, 4. Comment: The cast included Michael Gambon as Riccardo. Stage was puzzled why this talented company would produce such a play; nevertheless, the production was good. On the other hand, Times did not question the choice of play which possessed intrinsic value; the production was good, considering the limited resources of the company.

62.145 Pygmalion (R, 5sc) Bernard Shaw. QUESTORS 5/5/62. Cast: QTA. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/3, 12, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Patterson, Purdom, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Review: Middlesex County Times 12/5/62, 12. Comment: Middlesex County Times noted the play was given a happy ending.

62.146 The Dance of Death (P [3a]) August Strindberg (trans Elizabeth Sprigge of Dödsdansen, 1905). ALDWYCH 6/5/62. 1 perf. Cast: WWT/14. Comment: The material was not particularly good, although Billie Whitelaw, Roy Kinnear and Barrie Ingham were (New Statesman). Guardian pointed out this was really a Yorkshire revue and perhaps not suited to the West End, while Observer said it lacked satirical bite. Tatler (23/5) thought that the authors were "wonderfully acute observers of the contemporary scene." "An ordinary man's revue obviously designed to have no truck with such standard satirical stage targets as snob-bishness, parochial references and backstage chitchat" (Variety).

62.150 Everything in the Garden (C, 2a) Giles Cooper. STREATHAM HILL 7/5/62. Plot: Bronner, Salem, Weintraub. Comment: The comedy was on a pre-West End tour, prior to opening at the Duke of York's later in May (62.162).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer said the production was lightweight and the acting muted. However, New Statesman complimented Toby Robertson’s “highly sensitive” direction and the performances of Wilfrid Lawson and Nicoll Williamson. Lawson’s excellent performance was the focus of the Birmingham Post review; furthermore, this was the sort of play the Royal Shakespeare Company should be rediscovering. Times said the production got close to the heart of the play.

62.155 My Name Is Tuesday (Mus) Charles Hamilton (bk, lyr) and John Pinches (comp). SCALA 9/5/62.* Margot Edwards, Robert Woolley, David Press, John Reid, Peter Edwards. Ch Joyce Bradfield. Reviews: Stage 17/5/62, 14; Times 10/5/62, 5. Comment: Group One (1960). The unsuccessful plot involved teen-age gangsters and a brutal murder, but the music was much better (Stage). Times thought this somewhat implausible piece aimed “at being no less than an East End West Side Story.”

Comment: "Terry Scully and Maggie Smith make a sweet, hopeless pair" (New Statesman); Christian Science Monitor also praised their performances. Spectator called the piece "very slight, but successful within its own limits." "A small masterpiece" (Birmingham Post). Stage said the double bill comprised "plays in the tradition of Pinero, Maugham and Rattigan." In each play of the double bill "there is a serious and tragic play struggling to be born" (Tribune). The first New York production (Morosco 9/10/63) ran for 163 performances.

Comment: New Statesman singled out Richard Pearson and Kenneth Williams for their performances. Christian Science Monitor said this piece was "the sure-fire hit of the two." Spectator thought that the play began weakly, but by the end it challenged "the master of serious fantasy ... Jean Giraudoux." The play is "still a bit too long: its fantasy can loiter in the shallows" (Birmingham Post). The first New York production (Morosco 9/10/63) ran for 163 performances.

Comment: Variety thought, correctly, this "parody of a parody" was unlikely to be a West-End success. "A pastiche of the Rose Marie school of musical play" (Illustrated London News, Times). New Statesman singled out Patricia Routledge as "a riotously pure and gracious heroine." Christian Science Monitor said that on opening night the gallery cheered "for minutes on end." Guardian thought the parody was too genteel, while Observer called the piece "an ill-constructed and witless show."

Reviews: New Statesman 1/6/62, 808; Stage 24/5/62, 17; Times 19/5/62, 4. Comment: A contemporary political satire about "the Church tying itself in sheepshanks to justify nuclear slaughter" (New Statesman). Stage said the play "grows increasingly tedious as the evening wears on. Grinding home its points with the relentlessness of a steamroller." Times enjoyed the topical satire until the "disastrous last act."

Comment: Ikon Theatre Company. The plot involved a Russian political prisoner returning home only to find his family has been corrupted. Variety said the play got "lost in a welter of inept writing, indifferent acting and clumsy staging." Elizabeth Spriggs and Nora Nicholson did what they could in leading roles (Birmingham Post). Stage ultimately thought it was a "worthwhile play" which had been given a very poor production. "Incredible but never dull" (Times).

Comment: "A quick, inventive affair" (Illustrated London News). Times (26/5/62) called the piece "a revue, preserving, even when the mounting is elaborate, the spirit of a concert party." "When the music stops—which is not often—George Chisholm, Leslie Crowther and Margo Henderson step in with comedy routines which even those former tenants of the Palace, the Crazy Gang, would have applauded" (Daily Mirror). Guardian wondered "what a solemn sociologist would say of this whole phenomenon in the newly colour-conscious Britain of today." Times (26/5/69) reported that the final night was a mixture of "skittishness and sentiment."

Comment: Alastair Sim's Prospero was "a monstrous anthology of tics," but George Selway's Caliban was "unusually good" (New Statesman). Stage said the production was close to pantomime and worked quite well; "but there is little of Shakespeare's real magic, in imagination, words or philosophical drama." Alastair Sim failed to reveal Prospero's motives (Times).

62.184 The Mikado; or, The Town of Titipu (CO, 2a) W.S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 30/5/62. Cast: Stage 7/6/62, 13; WWT/14. The

Not as good as a standard D'Oyly Carte production (Stage). This production would not displease traditionalists (Illustrated London News). Clive Revill's performance brought the house down (Observer). The production differed from the D'Oyly Carte tradition "in the use of gesture and movement as pointful production features rather than as part of an empty routine" (Times).

62.185 The Lobby (P) Gillian Hume and Frans Boerlage. CHANTICLEER 3/6/62.* Cast: Stage 7/6/62, 15. Official Edwin Broom; Attendant Marjory Pegram; Emmie Baroque Brenda Duncan; Tonio Nicholas Amer; Michael Strachey Royston Herrick; Fred Bumstead Francis Ward; Bella Jessie Barclay; Evie Penelope Folb; Professor Lang Peter Noel-Cook; Sailor Leonard Fenton; Minnie Fingleton Marjorie Laine; Dir Frans Boerlage; Dec Disley Jones. Review: Stage 7/6/62, 15. Comment: The play consisted of a collection of stock characters and their "emotional baggage," the latter represented by their actual luggage which they have to choose to leave behind them (or not) (Stage).

62.186 The Boss Woman (P) Synder Ferlingetti. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 4/6/62. 1st perfd King's, Southsea, 2/4/62. Comment: Stage (5/4/62, 16) noted some similarities to Leon Gordon's White Cargo (Wearing 24.167) in this piece about romantic intrigues on a plantation set in Sarawak, Malaysia.

62.187 The Caretaker (D, 3a) Harold Pinter. INTIMATE 4/6/62. Plot: Best/61, 49, Demastes/2, Fletcher, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub.

Reviews: Stage 7/6/62, 17; Times 5/6/62, 5. Comment: This comedy-thriller introduced, convincingly, propaganda against capital punishment, but it needed better direction (Stage). The author weakened his argument against capital punishment by introducing stupid "grotesques" which verge on the sub-human (Times).

62.189 A Midsummer Night's Dream (C) William Shakespeare. OPEN AIR 4/6/62. Cast: Stage 7/6/62, 14; WWT/14. Theseus Peter Whitbread; Hippolyta Toni Kanal; Philostrate Murray Gilmore; Egeus Alfred Hoffman; Hermia June Bailey; Demetrius Edward Petherbridge; Lysander Bernard Lloyd; Helena Heather Chasen; Quince James Ottaway; Bottom Patrick Wymark; Flute John Sterland; Starveling Simon Carter; Snout Bill Corlett; Snug Timothy Harley/Ronald Cunliffe; 1st Fairy Barbara Latham; Puck Terry Wale/Timothy Harley; Titania Barbara Clegg; Oberon David William; Peaseblossom Patricia Martine; Cobweb Roy Heymann; Moth Nicholette Hicks; Mustardseed Yvonne Swift; Fairies, Attendants Stephanie Beaumont, Ruth Burns, Isabel Brown, Sandra McCormick, Kenneth Barr, Ronald Cunliffe, Nigel Edmonds, Roy Jones, Derek Needs, Marcus Hammond. Pres David Conville; Dir David William; Set dgn Henry Bardon; Cost dgn Dawn Pavitt; Ch Geraldine Stephenson; Light Richard Pilbrow. Comment: The production was hampered by numerous background noises and faulty loudspeakers (Guardian). Observer thought that overall this was a good production; only the fairy scenes were "less satisfactory." Spectator praised every aspect of the production. "Patrick Wymark ... is the very best of Bottoms" (New Statesman).

62.190 The Rehearsal (C, 5a) Jean Anouilh (trans Pamela Hansford-Johnson and Kitty Black of La répétition, ou l'amour puni, 1950). Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Spectator found the play “meaningless” as a piece of theatre. Observer said that, despite some weaknesses in the play, Rudkin had made a striking debut. “Smothered with symbolism that obscures the meaning,” nevertheless, Rudkin possesses “a fine sense of atmosphere and a sharp, incisive style of writing” (Variety). “As a piece of theatre craft it is remarkably accomplished,” and it was well acted (Stage). Times was also unclear on what the play meant but recognized its “rare theatrical power.” See also Lloyd Evans, 112–13.

62.193 By Candlelight (C, 3a) Harry Graham (adpt of Siegfried Geyer, Bei Kerzenlicht, 1927). RICHMOND 11/6/62.  1st perfd King’s, Southsea, 10/9/28. Plot: Gänzl, Loney, 159. Comment: The piece employed the familiar idea of a valet trading places with his employer, and the confusions that ensue.

62.194 Critic’s Choice (C, 3a) Ira Levin. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 11/6/62.  Hannah Watt, Roderick Lovell. Plot: Bordman/4, 373, Bronner, Hischak, Loney.

Comment: English Stage Company. Tribune “enjoyed “this no-holds-barred assault on American marriage,” but found the third act too drawn out. New Statesman said this was “minor Williams,” and the cast had poor American accents. Guardian remarked that the second act was much less certain than the first, a view shared by Observer but which said “the writing in general is diamond-sharp.” Birmingham Post (11/7) reported that, on opening night at Wyndham’s, latecomers (including Jane Fonda) were obliged to watch the performance on closed-circuit television until a suitable break in the performance; this was the first time this had been done in London. The first New York production (Helen Hayes 10/11/60) ran for 132 performances.

Comment: New Statesman noted that on opening night the stalls “were all but empty,” and at the final curtain the cast realized it was in a flop. Guardian praised Ronald Hayman’s “intelligent and well-mounted production,” but felt the audience was struggling with the play. Times found Hayman’s translation “pedestrian and unidiomatic.”

Comment: Bristol Old Vic Company. Observer praised both the adaptation and this production. "Too many of the personal scenes ... are shapeless meetings or departures" (Spectator). The production/adaptation did not allow the actors to develop characters (Guardian). Times praised Val May's direction which used a range of techniques and no gimmicks. Variety recognized the adaptation was a remarkable achievement; nevertheless, it had serious limitations—no depth to characters, passages of the original omitted. There were 60 performances at the Phoenix. The first New York production (Lyceum 21/3/67) ran for 56 performances.

This “brittle essay on the sex war” was given “a well spoken and often passionate production,” with good performances from Ruth Meyers, Barry Foster, and Michael Gough (Times).

Comment: “The evening belongs to Elaine Stritch as a frenetic but disenchanting cruise hostess” (New Statesman). Variety noted that the piece had been revised somewhat since the New York production. “A lightweight affair” (Observer). Despite familiar “musical comedy gimmicks ... sheer professionalism carries the evening through” (Spectator). Received on opening night “with deafening enthusiasm” (Times). Elaine Stritch, for whom Coward wrote the piece, starred in the New York production (Broadhurst 3/10/61) which ran for 167 performances.

62.212 Suggestions (Playlets) N. J. Faydon. KING GEORGE’S HALL 22/6/62.* Review: Stage 28/6/62, 16.

Comment: A charity performance for Oxfam; it raised £902 11s. The playlets were “set in the East, South and West quarters of London, and each concerned the complications of a young woman, her husband and her boy friend, with interpolations of varying relevancy from an elderly woman” (Stage).

Comment: In the play, set in the American deep South, “there is death and damnation, a hint of Lesbianism, more than a hint of incest, a drunken schoolgirl, the powerful influence of a dead suicide” (Stage 3/5/62, 17). “Glad when it was over: sorry I’d been there" (Guardian). Observer thought the first act was promising and detected the influence of J. D. Salinger (other reviewers added Tennessee Williams and Jerome K. Jerome). "A fairly favourable example of the most depressing type of American play" (Times).

Comment: Meadow Players. Despite revisions the play was a dated "melodramatic version of the eternal triangle" (Variety). "A mild, domestic comedy ending abruptly and uneasily in tragedy, just as the plot begins to warm up" (New Statesman). "A sort of very poor man's Candida" (Guardian). Stage viewed the piece more favorably while conceding that it was not an outstanding play; however, the contemporary economic conditions in the theatre dictated that productions had to be instant successes; otherwise, they closed quickly.

Reviews: Stage 5/7/62, 13; Times 2/7/62, 6. Comment: English Stage Society. Produced without decor. The play, which had won the Gerhart Hauptmann prize and the German Critics' award, mocked the military and reminded Stage of several other plays with a similar theme. Times indicated the translation and the lack of decor weakened the play.

62.222 Ladies in Retirement (P, 3a) "Edward Percy" [Edward Percy Smith] and Reginald Denham. INTIMATE 2/7/62. 1st perfd Richmond 27/11/39. Plot: Best/39, 449, Bordman/4, 190, Hischak, Kabatchnik/2. Comment: Dir Michael Almaz; Dgn Ian Mooney; Cost dgn Bess Brady; Sm Elaine Pransky. “As epic theatre, this long, limp account of the Paris Commune is simply a non-starter” (New Statesman). Stage said the production did “all that could be done” for this faulty work. Times found the production “muffled and tentative” which made it difficult to appraise the play itself. “A lifeless, wearying historical reconstruction, done in a style that younger minds in Moscow would by now consider dated ... the acting is noticeably above average Unity standards” (Tribune). Adamov attended rehearsals (Stage 21/6/72, 15) and “spoke from the stage on the first night to denounce the France of de Gaulle” (Colin Chambers, The Story of Unity Theatre [New York, 1989] 356).

62.228 Feminine Façades (One-woman show). INTERVAL 8/7/62. Review: Stage 12/7/62, 13. Comment: Performed by Joan Quinlan. Stage said there were “too few items in the programme.”

Comment: The play was "about the contortions of a New Yorker, a dramatist in need of funds. He inserts a newspaper advertisement that asks everyone to send him a dollar. Twenty-seven thousand people do so, with consequences of which the dramatist has made tepid farce" (Illustrated London News). "A sad, contrived and witless piece" (Variety). Times faulted the play but noted the audience was amused and applauded the piece. In addition there was good acting from Dave King, Tsai Chin, Ursula Howells, and Donald Sutherland.

Comment: Produced previously at the Ludlow Festival 26/6/62. Observer thought the play had been crudely transformed into a comedy of humours, although Barry Warren's Feste was very good. Stage found the production uneven and lacking coherence. Times determined it was an average sort of production with an emphasis "on the light comedy."

62.235 Caligula (T, 4a) Albert Camus (trans Justin O'Brien of Camus' play, 1945). TOWER, CANONBURY, 13/7/62. 1st British perf this trans. Cast: TTC. Comment: Performed under the collective title Plays for England. English Stage Company. "Each play is devoted to an attack on one of the playwright's public bugbears: the fact of royalty and the theory of Press corruption" (Tatler). Guardian said the play "hangs together, hits its targets square, though not always fair, and provides a succession of laughs." "The farce is so broad that what could have been daring and rather saucy turns out to be drab" (Daily Mirror). "A most diverting little piece" (Christian Science Monitor). "A rehash of old material" (Times).

Comment: Performed under the collective title Plays for England. English Stage Company. The piece provided good opportunities for Anton Rodgers and Ann Beach, but otherwise it was not successful (Guardian). "A tasteless and tedious piece of writing" (Daily Mirror); a view shared by Christian Science Monitor. "A brilliant new departure in Osborne's writing" (Times).

Comment: "An artless comedy thriller" about "the efforts of a family to dispose of a corpse discovered up their chimney by a cheerful, tipping, blackmailing Irish sweep" (Variety). The presence of "such experienced players as Mary Merrell, Gladys Henson, and Jack Watling" helped the production; but the piece was not really up to West End standards (Birmingham Post).

62.243 The Raising of Lazarus (Medieval D in mus) Brian Trowell (deviser). ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL 19/7/62. Review: Stage 26/7/62, 14. Comment: Part of the Festival of the City of London. Stage found the production impressive although "long processional sections" could have been cut.

62.244 Don Juan (P) Antony Borrow. HOVENDEN 22/7/62.* Cast: Stage 2/8/62, 8. Don Juan Tenorio Hugh Ward; Dona Ana de Ulloa, A Young Girl Janine Hill; Don Gonzalo de Ulloa George Dare; Don Octavio Ray Bowen; Tisbea Adrienne Mace; Catalinon Charles Reynolds; Don Luis Mejia Eric Gould; Dona Ines de Ulloa Susan Wheatcroft. Dir Charles Reynolds; Dec Phillip Whichelo. Review: Stage 2/8/62, 8. Comment: The third part of Borrow's trilogy The Art and Craft of Dying. Stage noted Borrow's dramaturgical skills had improved markedly. Hugh Ward successfully took over the lengthy title role at very short notice.

Comment: Dunnett was editor of The Scotsman (Edinburgh) newspaper. The play was about a respectable newspaper "being taken over by a firm of tripe-hounds, here represented by Sir Donald Wolfit (at his most splendidly bumptious)" (New Statesman). The play was received warmly by Christian Science Monitor. Guardian found the play "pretty convincing" and ventured that it was better than many current plays in the West End. Times faulted the play's stagecraft and thought the characters were merely types, "elderly and dim or young and misguided, seen from outside."

Comment: The Lord Chamberlain banned five of the sketches (about President Kennedy and his family). The revue consisted of improvised sketches based on suggestions from the audience. Stage (19/7/62, 1) said this type of entertainment began in a bar near the University of Chicago in 1955. New Statesman discussed how the cast of four actually "improvised" the suggestions by using a collection of stock sketches and adding suitable twists. Times noted the "quartet of strongly divergent personalities who work together with a marvellously developed sense of ensemble."

62.251 The Dance Dress (Crime D) Michael Voysey. RICHMOND 30/7/62. 1st perfd Embassy 17/11/53. Comment: The play was about a factory girl who fantasizes about a £5 dress which her lover obtains for her by killing someone.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer faulted the play for its flat development and the lack of a sense of terror, while Spectator said "the play holds [and] there are electrifying moments." "Vian's self-indulgent symbolism is annoyingly vague at times" (Times). Tribune offered a lengthy defense of the drama of the absurd. "The most interesting and important of all the plays presented by the Royal Shakespeare Company during their memorable season at the Arts" (Stage). The play was produced at the Astor Place, New York, 1/10/68, and ran for 6 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer and Spectator noted and discussed some scenes which Whiting had rewritten, but not for the better. New Statesman felt the play had been left behind by developments in the theatre; in addition, it "disastrously lacks drive."

62.256 The Amorous Prawn (FC, 3a) Anthony Kimmins. INTIMATE 6/8/62. Plot: Fletcher, French, Loney, 316. Comment: The cast included Anthony Hopkins (Bowden, 137).

Comment: The play dealt with three people trapped permanently within a house and the unsuccessful efforts of a new lodger to reveal the outside world to them. All the cast gave excellent performances (Guardian, Variety). Observer commended the "tortured virility" of the writing. A "most exciting and satisfying first play ... it is like a situation from Racine transplanted to a small, dingy terrace house somewhere in the industrial north" (Times).

Comment: The first of a festival of three O'Casey works. Variety said this lesser work by O'Casey needed an Irish cast, and faulted the cast's diction and attempts at Irish brogue. "A painful performance of a painfully bad play" (Irish Times). Spectator noted the production emphasized the play's farcical element but it was a mistake to stage the play at all. "As a night out for a giggle it is not all that bad" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Daily Mirror was unimpressed by this "boring" nostalgic work, but thought the presence of Dora Bryan "may be enough to make it a hit with the over-forties." "Whatever Miss Bryan happens to be playing, audiences have a habit of cheering Miss Bryan" (Tatler). However, Variety said Dora Bryan failed to capture the essence of Lorelei Lee, and that, anyway, American musicals needed American performers. Two performers were injured by falling scenery before the evening performance on 1/9/62 (People 2/9/62, 7). The first New York production (Ziegfeld 8/12/49) ran for 740 performances.

Comment: Fresh, intelligent acting from Bernard Lloyd, Michael Blakemore, Peter Whitbread, Mary Steele, and Jean Dixon (Illustrated London News). Spectator praised David William's direction which, in particular, rendered the "punning verbiage" lively and comprehensible; other aspects of the production were done equally well. Times questioned the value of the play which requires "a lot of work squandered on very little."

Comment: National Youth Theatre. Tribune said the production wisely emphasized the pageantry, but thought the youthful cast was not entirely capable of performing the play adequately, but did speak the verse very clearly, a judgment seconded by Times. The 14 performances of Henry V and Julius Caesar (62.279) were seen by 8,500 people and box-office receipts totaled £3,500 (Stage 4/10/62, 13).

Royal Shakespeare Company. A fragmentary play, with no clear theme, and ending in the murder of a baby by three drunken Teddy boys. "Beautifully performed and directed." (Spectator). Tribune praised "this stark and brutal piece of lower depths realism." Guardian noted the play was too long and "ends lamely," but commended the characterizations. Kenneth Tynan (Observer) enumerated the play's numerous faults and weaknesses.

Reviews: Stage 6/9/62, 13; Times 31/8/62, 11. Comment: National Youth Theatre. "The modern dress setting ... appears to release the cast from the aura of respect that inhibited their performances in the conventionally costumed Henry V. As a result, Michael Croft's production has a unity and thrust that keep the plot in clear focus throughout." Good performances from Neil Stacy, Alan Allkins, Michael Cadman, and Simon Ward (Stage). Times opined the modern dress was "a decorative gimmick rather than a true illumination of the text."

Comment: Guardian failed to be moved by either the play or the production. "The text is too picturesque to be taken seriously" (Observer), while Spectator pointed out there was good and bad O'Casey blarney, and his "eccentric Dublin characters" were well drawn. "This production is no more than adequate" (Times). Reviewers generally thought this production was better than the earlier Purple Dust (62.267). The first New York production (Booth 28/12/55) ran for 29 performances.

Comment: The play "is virtually Agatha Christie on ice, a whodunit in the Arctic Circle. But, cunningly, Mr. Fairchild conceals this fact during the whole of the first act and gives us an engaging variation on the old six-men-in-a-boat theme. This time the six are two Canadians, two Englishmen, a "displaced cook" and a millionaire's son, and their 'boat' is a wooden hut 20 feet beneath the surface of the snow" (Tatler). "Takes an unconscionable time to say what it has to say, and follows too many trends for it to make a concentrated impact" (Stage). Illustrated London News entertained a more favorable view of the play, as did Times which acknowledged Fairchild's "telling stagecraft."

Comment: Observer commended this play on 1939–1945 and the creation of the atomic bomb. Spectator described it as a "well-made problem play ... [about] a physicist's problem of conscience in the nuclear age ... [and] the harm done to his marriage by his work." Similarly, Times praised the play's "strength of the narrative line ... It has all the qualities (save unity) of the well-made play with a strong plot.” Christian Science Monitor declared that the piece was “fine and impressive ... exciting, farseeing, and splendidly acted.” Variety thought the production was “worthwhile fare,” but “somewhat old hat” because the nuclear threat had been the theme of “numerous previous dramas.”

Comment: Tatler disliked the revival completely. However, Guardian described the play as “a very competent piece of work,” but the production needed modernizing. “It’s all suspenseful Agatha Christie. Suspenseful that is for those who have never before seen it on stage, TV, or at the cinema” (Daily Mirror). Times indicated the performance lacked suspense.

Comment: Ira Aldridge Players. Variety said the plot was taken from Euripides' Alcestis and attempted to turn it into a calypso piece set in Camden Town, London. However, the cast was too inexperienced to be successful. Times described Jack Russell's adaptation as too uncertain which inhibited the production as a whole. “Nobody, including Addy, did anything much except shake a lot of loose limbs to the same old tunes. And this gets boring” (Daily Mirror).

Comment: The play had been revised since the Broadway production. Guardian thought the play suffered because the central character was ill-defined. Observer agreed that the audience does not believe in the protagonist. “A patchy play and takes too long to get to the point” (Variety). While acknowledging its clumsiness, Illustrated London News thought the play possessed “quality.” The cast performed unfulfilling roles (Times). The first New York production ran for 100 performances.

Comment: Although Observer acknowledged the boisterous approval of the first-night audience, "I ran from the theatre, glad to be released from an experience so tedious in its pretensions and so insulting in its attitude towards human relationships." Tribune shared that reaction. Variety noted how Dyer's skillful writing had turned a ten-minute sketch into a full three-act play. "Explosively funny performances by Sheila Hancock and Edward Woodward ... one long laugh" (Daily Mirror).

62.303 Day of the Prince (C, 3a) Frank Hilton. COURT 23/9/62.* 1 perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 27/9/62, 13; WWT/14. Comment: Tribune called this a "flaccid production" and said the play deserved much better treatment. Guardian disagreed but pointed to examples of miscasting. Irish Times was generally disappointed but singled out Irish cast members (Donal Donnelly, Marie Kean, and Arthur O'Sullivan) for their "vivid" performances which made the reviewer long for an Irish company to present the work in London. Illustrated London News welcomed the production for blending O'Casey's farce and tragedy, but felt it was ill-suited to the Mermaid's vast stage. Observer provided a synthesis of the major critical viewpoints. The first New York production (Hudson 28/11/27) ran for 32 performances.

Comment: The production lasted four hours. “The most exciting evening at this particular theatre for many moons” (Irish Times). Spectator praised Michael Elliott’s direction, particularly in the “more fantastic scenes,” but was disappointed by the use of iambic pentameters in parts of act five. Variety singled out Leo McKern for his portrayal of Peer Gynt. McKern “sustains [Gynt] with unsubdued authority and stamina” (Birmingham Post). Stage praised the production but found some scenes were “gimmick-laden,” admired Michael Meyer’s racy new translation [that] sweeps away many of the cob webs,” and noted “Leo McKern has done nothing finer.”

Comment: Observer found the play “baffling,” and lacking shape or purpose, a view shared by Variety, and Stage. The latter added the play “could easily have been written in the twenties or thirties, as an intellectual drawing-room comedy. Which is what it is, but without the shape and drive of a Maugham or a St. John Ervine.” Times faulted Spark for attempting to write “an intellectual farce [since] straight-forward farce is one of the most difficult of all forms.”

Comment: “Seems rather hollow and wanting in ‘story’ and ‘atmosphere’” (Guardian); Christian Science Monitor was equally unable to find something to praise. Tatler ascribed the production’s major weakness to the all-British cast. Since the piece was panned generally, Variety saw little chance of the work repeating its Broadway success. However, Times declared, unsarcastically, the piece was “in the best American tradition.” The first New York production (Broadhurst 23/11/59) ran for 795 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. “A confused work” (Times). Irish Times praised the acting and sets, but missed “the grandeur of argument between Becket and Henry.” Tribune compared Fry’s play with Anouilh’s Becket, with the former being “superior in conception.” Spectator noted the good performances from Derek Godfrey, Maxine Audley, and Alan Dobie, and lauded Stuart Burge’s direction. Stage thought the play lacked “imagination, enlightenment, depth of characterisation, or any fine quality of real importance.” Fry discusses some of his textual alterations in his Plays (London: Oxford University Press, 1971), 176.

Comment: Anna Russell was a diseuse and musical parodist. Variety dubbed Russell a skillful, “cultured comedienne.” Guardian thought Russell’s jokes were lost on “a theatre audience of Harold Hobson and Co.” “She takes the mickey out of music and musicians by singing off-key opera ... Like many of the operas she guys, Miss Russell goes on just a little bit too long” (Daily Mirror). Times praised the production fulsomely.

A murder mystery involving a television script writer. Birmingham Post admired Vernon Harris' technique but indicated the plot was somewhat thin. Times added the dialogue was flat and the characterization was flimsy. "An intriguing theme which was very well handled and exploited, not only by the author, but by Anthony Woodruff, who directed, and by the cast" (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company The sole criticism Variety could level against the "superb" production was "the use of [an] octagonal sand pit as [Peter Hall's] primary setting." Christian Science Monitor called the production "a masterpiece ... Pictorially it is immensely impressive." Tribune found praise for Dorothy Tutin's Cressida and "the fantastic hamming of Max Adrian as Pandarus ... overacting raised to the level of artistry." Spectator pointed out one weakness in Hall's direction: "He tends to touch a serious scene with a wand of facetiousness." Illustrated London News had general praise for the production and cast. However, Stage criticized the performances of Tutin and Ian Holm: "quite inadequate, let alone equal to the imagination and power of the production as a whole."

Comment: The sequel to Sailor, Beware! and Watch It, Sailor. Variety doubted whether this sequel would be as successful as the earlier comedies because it lacked novelty and the formula was "wearisome." "The farce barely exists beside its celebrated companions. A series can be dangerous in the theatre, and the Hornet household ... has become tiresome" (Birmingham Post). Times said it was "reasonably inventive" and liked how it "explodes the horrors [of hideous domestic situations] into laughter."

Comment: "A good wholesome comic romp" (Spectator), a view shared by Variety. Observer praised the production as "a model of organised exuberance." Illustrated London News observed that the audience did not appear to respond well to this "fantastic romp." For Times the production was amateurish: "Energy, as usual is out of all proportion to finesse ... not one performance really worth recording."

Comment: Variety said the production was straightforward and entertaining, “uncluttered by mannerism and fussiness.” Spectator said the staging was uneven as was the casting—fine performances from Sheila Allen and Lee Montague, but miscasting of Rosalind Knight. “A flat affair” (Observer). Christian Science Monitor faulted the acting which was “undistinguished ... there is a notable lack of style.” For Tatler the most memorable aspect of the production was Lee Montague’s Shylock, played with “dignity and fire, this is by no means the grovelling whining, back-street usurer one has seen before, but a man of passions, however ignoble, raging rather than snivelling.”

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. In addition to the play itself, Irish Times admired Richard Johnson, Dorothy Tutin, and Sean Kenny’s sets. Times was disappointed by the cast not weighing their words carefully, a deliberate requirement of Whiting’s text.

Comment: Written to commemorate the building of Westminster Abbey. “In a selective study of some of the closing years of the complex reign of Henry III, [Holmes] is in effect celebrating the great Abbey Church of Westminster, which was Henry’s pride” (Birmingham Post). The play “is also a study of domestic politics presented with a historian’s scholarship and a dramatist’s zest, and given some understanding performances” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Guardian called the piece, about "murder among the ornithologists," "uninventive and obvious." Observer noted that this "clumsily constructed" thriller presented the murderer in a "sympathetic light," a proposition Christian Science Monitor discussed at length. Variety conjectured that the cast had sufficient "name pull" to assure a good run.

62.347 The Amorous Goldfish (Thriller) Michael Voysey. WIMBLEDON TOWN HALL 29/10/62. 1st perfd BBC TV 30/5/57; 1st perf stage version Leas Pavilion, Folkestone, 21/9/59. Comment: Torch Players. The plot involved a serial philanderer and his victims.

Alan Klein was 22 years old and this was his first work. Variety thought that background accounted for the amateurish nature of the work in which the music was "unmemorable ... [the] lyrics indifferent." Observer advised Klein "don't put your juvenilia on the stage." "The central plot might be elongated to a revue sketch: a boy takes a job in a solicitor's office imagining it to be a place in which soliciting goes on. That is all. Really, this belongs to the world of music-hall" (Illustrated London News). Excellent direction might have made this amateurish piece somewhat better (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian felt "hooked" but unsurprised by the play which, coming ten years after Waiting for Godot, "seems remarkably matter of fact." However, Irish Times reported that most critics seemed puzzled by the play, Variety was one such. "In terms of meaning I find Happy Days impressive; theatrically, I don't" (Spectator). "After an hour of dull prattle, one begins to care little whether the play is about life, death, or merely about a stupid woman stuck in the ground. The symbolism is mostly puerile and the entire play is the most flagrantly static piece of anti-theatre that has yet come our way" (Stage). Brenda Bruce was defeated by Beckett's language, and, incomprehensibly, employed a Scottish accent (Times).

62.352 Look Back in Anger (D, 3a) John Osborne. TOWER, CANONBURY, 2/11/62. 1st perfd Court 8/5/56. Cast: TTC. Comment: An impecunious writer takes out an insurance policy and fakes his own death in order to collect £50,000. Variety noted the numerous red herrings used in the plot and the lack of a suitable climax. "A moderately gripping bad play" (Observer); Stage was equally unimpressed, but not gripped. Illustrated London News found the piece mechanical and flat. However, Tatler declared the production was "fresh and original ... one of the best whodunits of the season." "Technically this is an extremely accomplished piece" (Times).

Comment: The plot involved an absent-minded schoolmaster (played by Michael Redgrave) who is recruited as a spy catcher. Tribune was surprised that Redgrave agreed to perform in "this sorry, shoddy work." Not surprisingly, Variety declared the show's success depended upon Redgrave's "marquee appeal." Stage pointed out Redgrave might have taken the role because he was once a schoolmaster at Cranleigh School; however, the "result is disappointing." Illustrated London News thought Redgrave's motives should not be questioned, and dubbed the comedy a "cheerful anecdote." Tatler opined Redgrave wanted to take on something different and generally approved of this "fairly hilarious romp." "A lamentably infantile entertainment" (Times).

Comment: The transfer to the Prince Charles marked the opening of a new theatre (on which, see Stage 20/12/62, 14–15). “Most of its comedy consist[s] of bland political and social criticism, and fantasy” (Observer). Spectator said the revue contained a few “brilliant numbers,” but “a great deal of dross”; however, the small Canadian company performed “winningly.” Variety suggested that with some revision the revue “could prove a West End sleeper.” The “hits and misses were approximately equal, but ... [the audience] was warmly in favour most of the time” (Birmingham Post). Times was fulsome in its praise.

Comment: Set in Dublin, the comedy was about small family life, which Guardian dubbed an “honourable, if unimpressive” attempt. “The flavour of blarney” helped to disguise the play’s weaknesses (Spectator). Irish Times summarized many of the daily newspaper critics’ responses. Susannah York’s West End debut showed promise (Stage).

Comment: The production was “thrown out of balance by maintaining the conception of Ko-Ko as an awkward and ungainly little Cockney. Bill Owen had some quite amusing moments and was generally at home with the glum and dead pan humour, he also sang reasonably well” (Stage). More judgmental was Tatler which declared Bill Owen’s “coarse, broad comedy lacked all style.” The revival “makes more of the broad comedy than of the enchantment” (Times).

Comment: Times declared the production, despite its “wooden moments,” an unqualified success. In contrast to Guardian’s tempered judgement, Tribune stated the “Mermaid acting would disgrace a girl’s hockey team forced into playing charades by bad weather.” Variety called the piece a bad choice, even for the Mermaid: “it is merely a fusty combo of dramatic, humorous and tragic incidents that don’t jell.” Illustrated London News echoed the latter two views.

1/12/62, 10; Daily Mirror 28/11/62, 18; Guardian 28/11/62, 7; Illustrated London News 8/12/62, 948; New Statesman 7/12/62, 846; Observer 2/12/62, 24; Stage 29/11/62, 17; Tatler 19/12/62, 803; Times 28/11/62, 13; Tribune 7/12/62, 11; Variety 19/12/62, 70. Comment: Guardian declared the novel had been reduced to nothing apart from "moments of bathos." However, Christian Science Monitor concluded the piece was "an agreeable entertainment," and added that Sybil Thorndike came "closest to the temper of the book." Observer was critical of most aspects of the musical, the music, decor, and the performances. Birmingham Post said a theatregoer who expected "only a more than usually ample, pictorial and civilised musical play will be both right and contented." Tatler concluded the production was the equivalent of seeing Hamlet without the prince: Vanity Fair without Becky Sharp. "An appalling waste of time, money, and energy" (Tribune). Times was shocked that the piece "manages to ignore social criticism altogether." This lavish production, which lasted three hours, was a major financial failure.

12/12/62, 62. Comment: Performed in modern dress which didn't trouble Guardian where aspects of the costuming are enumerated, and also in Observer. However, Spectator thought that Tyrone Guthrie's decision to modernize the piece was an "almost idiotic idea." Times disagreed because the production released the "energy of this marvelously constructed work into the modern world." "There was a rare occurrence when The Alchemist ended at the Old Vic tonight. The director, Sir Tyrone Guthrie, cheered by his company, took a thunderous call from a house that recognised him as the architect of the occasion" (Birmingham Post).

Comment: "A sombre little outdoor play about the necessity of getting acclimatised to death" (Observer). Tribune thought the play was conventional, mundane, and inhabited by stock characters. However, Variety said the production would probably have "a profitable engagement" because of the first-rate cast and the beautiful garden set by Motley.

Comment: Christian Science Monitor noted that, even though the play opened on a night of extremely thick fog, the theatre was full, probably because of the presence of Laurence Olivier. Guardian complained that London already had plenty of “coarse, not very well observed and patronising comedies of family life: the scream and caution school,” a view attacked by Observer and Spectator (the latter seeing the play as a satire or parody). Tribune said the play was not a satire but “a slight comedy around a satirical idea.” “Instead of a subtle piece of comedy satire, [Turner] has turned out a lower-case farce, strikingly reminiscent of the situation comedies so regularly featured on television” (Variety). See also Lloyd Evans, 113–15. The first New York production (Music Box 7/10/63) ran for 16 performances.

Produced without decor. Observer noted Bond's ability to evoke a mood, but thought the play was “too long, too portentous, too elliptical.” “In subject matter, it is kindred in style to Afore Night Come, with a reliance on exterior scenes, rustic speech, and overtones of menace and violence that lead ultimately to murder. Its plot, I suppose, is meant to show how an adolescent couple stand up to the pressures of marriage” (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Spectator praised “Peter Brook's superb production” and Paul Scofield's Lear. Variety thought it would be a box-office hit during its limited run engagement, and was impressed by Scofield's performance and the “stark decor.” “Scofield's Lear is the finest acting performance to have been seen on the London stage for a very long time” (Tribune). Times noted the production had affinities with Oriental theatre and Samuel Beckett, and praised the ensemble performance of the company.

Comment: Observer bewailed the lack of a genuine plot, although the dialogue and behavior of the characters rang true, attributes Variety also detected. "Basically another corny old family farce" which is "quite extraordinarily unamusing" (Spectator). Times dubbed it a formulaic Waterhouse-Hall piece which "does not ring as true" as did, for example, Billy Liar.

Comment: This version of Cinderella was set in a tenement in New Orleans and the cast of four performed numerous roles "without the slightest effect of confusion ... at a splendid pace" (Guardian). "A lovable occasion ... It is all inventive, swift, and well sung (no microphones)" (Birmingham Post). Spectator praised Cleo Laine and her voice.

Comment: "The company [played] as a unity, not (as we have found before now in Chekhov) as an assemblage of actors with no desire to meet each other. Everyone here by the side of Chekhov's lake knows what he or she is about: there is nothing uneasy or ventriloquial" (Birmingham Post). Stage said "the young actors were able to create an electric tension at the quieter climaxes," but there were instances of overplaying elsewhere in the production. However, Observer declared "few members of the present ensemble qualify for permanence."

Comment: Peter Woodthorpe’s Toad was “a fine, well integrated performance, bringing out a thoroughly integrated character and making magnificent use of mobile features and feet. But this is an elegant Toad, rather than the gross buffoon of Grahame’s story, so we cannot help missing the fat old fellow of our youth” (Stage).

The plot, involving a doll’s house floating down the Limpopo river, did not appear to engage the young audience (Guardian). Spectator entertained an entirely opposite view and praised some “marvellous stage effects.” Stage agreed, saying the plot was “highly ingenious” and that the piece “will doubtless move into the regular repertoire of the English Theatre for Children.”

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety noted this limited engagement had sold out before it opened, and was “an object lesson in giving grace and vigor and plenty of hilarity” to a minor comedy. The production struck the right note with its “disciplined, unselfish teamwork,” the essential requirement of farce (Times).

Comment: For Stage the main feature of the piece was “22 songs from the pen of James Stevens, all of which strike a uniform note of musical competence,” rather than any plot development. “An unpretentious, charming little production” (Variety). Times generally concurred.

Comment: Stage found this a well-rounded pantomime that "really does give the customers more than their money's worth." However, Guardian observed "there is little attempt to tell the original story ... It is entirely a musical and visual presentation." "Transforms the harmless old tale into a Hammer-film plot about a mad scientist" (Observer). "A cod melodrama" (Times).

Comment: The television series began on BBC TV on 6/10/61. Variety said any success would depend on "enough tv addicts who are prepared to leave their sets to visit a stage version" as corny as the original. "It is dangerous to translate a successful television series to another medium. In short takes, the amiable serial about a small garment factory ... can be very funny. But it needs the intimacy of the television screen" (Birmingham Post); Times agreed.

Comment: Performed under the collective title Rule of Three. The plot involved a stolen necklace. Of all three pieces Observer said "the writing is banal, the titillation unthrilling," and Variety added they were considerably below Christie's standard. For Times the pieces revealed Christie's weakness in the one-act form; they were really naive.

Comment: The title was also Three at Nine. "Interesting for two particular reasons: the freshness of approach in the presentation and the performance by Annie Ross" (Stage). Spectator said the comedian, Roger Price, was "quite extraordinarily unfunny." "A deliberately short, light, insubstantial show" (Times).

Review: Stage 10/1/63, 14. Comment: The piece was little more than a tear jerker, with inferior music and a thin plot (Stage).

63.3 Joy of Living (C, 3a) W. P. Lipscomb. INTIMATE 7/1/63. 1st perfd His Majesty's, Aberdeen, 14/3/55. Comment: The plot involved a husband outwitting some crooks who had taken the money he had saved for a retirement world tour.

Comment: English Stage Company, Oxford Playhouse Company. Variety said Frank Hauser's direction was sluggish at first but more lively in the second act. "A first-rate cast plunge into the action with verve, attack and that sorely-needed quality, enthusiasm" (Stage). "Shaw never could write a love scene [and] he always seems to be, himself, the dominating character in any of his plays. What is as stimulating as ever is the constant flow of ideas, the wit" (Tatler). Times commended the performances of Campbell Singer and Barbara Jefford. The first New York production (Broadhurst 27/9/17) ran for 52 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. New Statesman found the play bloodless, though good theatre, and disliked the “hollow journalistic rhetoric.” “In comparison with other modern black comedies [it] is unwieldy and disjointed” (Times). Observer described the play as “conceived and worked out like a chess problem,” and Peter Brook’s direction was “icily flawless.” Variety proclaimed the play an “outstanding, exciting addition” to the RSC’s repertoire, and noted it was scheduled to alternate with King Lear. Guardian praised the direction, John Bury’s “marvellous bleak setting,” and the magnificent acting of Irene Worth, Michael Horden, Alan Webb and Cyril Cusack. The production was restaged on 21/6/63 for an additional 8 performances with some cast changes as noted above. The first New York production (Martin Beck 13/10/64) ran for 55 performances.

63.7 Refresco (Revue) Roger Booth. CHANTICLEER 9/1/63.* Anne Liddell, Iain Wilson, Pamela Seldon, Rhys McConnochie, Roger Booth. Pres Causeway Productions; Dir Roger Booth; Dec Ronald Sandford; Light Mervyn Lunt. Reviews: Stage 17/1/63, 14; Times 11/1/63, 4. Comment: “A limp look at conventional targets, and tried to coax laughter from caricature and mannerism. Its wit depended limitingly on accents and types superficially observed” (Stage).

63.8 Odetta (Revue). PRINCE CHARLES 10/1/63 (Lt). Cast: Variety 30/1/63, 64. Odetta, William Lee, The Kenny Baker Four, Countrymen. Pres Harold Fielding. Reviews: New Statesman 18/1/63, 88; Stage 17/1/63, 5; Variety 30/1/63, 64. Comment: The show began at 11:15pm (after Clap Hands 62.362) and ran for ninety minutes; there were additional Sunday performances at 3 and 8 pm. Variety noted it was Harold Fielding’s intention that the Prince Charles would work “around the clock”; however, it thought that “once the novelty has worn off, the paying public may prove more demanding and seek something of a more exceptional nature to justify a late night out at the theatre.” New Statesman enjoyed Odetta’s “highly individual voice.”

63.8.2 Circus (Revue) Eric Paice (deviser). UNITY

11/1/63.* Tony Orman, Isobel Shelley, Jack Grossman, Douglas van der Sluys, Patricia Gulliver, Elspeth Ross, Sam Cole, Vic Pompini, Marika Rivera. Dir Eric Paice; Ch Patricia Arnold; Set dgn Frank Phelan; Cost dgn Rosemary Whitman; Light Denis Jones; Mus Raymond Cross, Gerald Davis, Phillip Charles. Reviews: Stage 17/1/63, 13; Times 12/1/63, 4. Comment: Stage observed that the progressive social criticism for which the Unity was known had now become mainstream, and thus this revue seemed quite tame. Times noted that many of the sketches were “inspired by some aspect of television.”

63.9 Murder by All Means (Thriller) Elleston Trevor. INTIMATE 14/1/63. 1st perfd Castle, Farnham, 7/8/61. Comment: An uninteresting murder mystery with plenty of red herrings.

Comment: Observer thought the production was generally first-rate and singled out Colin Davis’s conducting. “An immensely stimulating event” (Spectator). Tribune said the production needed a little more of Brecht’s acidic satire. “The most impressive achievement of the Sadler’s Wells Company for years” (Stage). Times commended the “firmness of the production,” and “the vitality” of Colin Davis’s conducting.

63.11 High Street, China (CD, 2a) Robin Chapman and Richard Kane. THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 17/1/63.* 46 perf. Comment: Theatre Workshop. Set in Northampton, the plot involved teenagers rebelling against the older generation but facing a deadening future. New Statesman found the production was endearing but disliked the blatant attempts at a relevant theme. "Pseudo new-wave realism" with nothing new to say (Tribune). "There is atmosphere and color in the play of restless and aimless youth" but the theme is exhausted during the first act (Variety). "The dialogue is hip and often funny, the acting enthusiastic rather than polished" (Daily Mirror). Times found the duologues heavy-handed and "the moral really does not need to be planted so firmly."

Review: Stage 31/1/63, 20. Comment: Toynbee Players. A delightful children's play that included a "kindly, henpecked King, his dominant Queen, their rebellious daughters, the accounts-minded Chancellor, the far from valiant General and the pageboy Trouble" (Stage).

Comment: Margate Stage Company which performed a repertory of several plays for a limited five week season. "Laughing at the bourgeois conventions of the Kaiser's Berlin before the first world war, [the play] is both extremely amusing and acted with fine pace and gaiety by all concerned" (Illustrated London News). Variety failed to be impressed, as was Spectator which said the play was overwritten.

Comment: Variety described the play as garrulous and the dialogue as frequently irrelevant. Spectator defended the play's fragmentary, Pirandellian style as appropriate to the play's theme. "Saunders deals in pyrotechnic alienation, achieved with a nervous and sophisticated brilliance" (New Statesman). "An obscure, funny, logical, illogical, often baffling, but quite brilliant play. It breaks all the rules" (Daily Mirror). Tatler said the play was much clearer in performance than in writing about it. The "text has great elegance and, what is even rarer, an unflinching sense of the theatre" (Times). See also Lloyd Evans, 116–19.

Comment: Guardian enjoyed two thirds of the skits even though many were familiar in content. Christian Science Monitor "sat through it without a single smile," and was amazed by the enthusiastic response of his colleagues. Times said the piece was not nearly as good as Hellapoppin, "that immortal evening of American rubbish." "Make of it what you please. Everything and anything is there, in the songs, sketches, musical instruments, penny-farthings, hollow camels, heaps of bric-a-brac scattered all over the stage ... directed with prodigious invention" (Stage).

Comment: The plot involved a poet, intent on suicide, who invites to people to witness his will; however, he is appalled by their materialism and leaves them to play Russian roulette.

Comment: Errol John played Othello with sincerity near the end but the production overall was “hardly adequate” (Guardian). Christian Science Monitor said Errol’s Othello was “merely peevish,” but Leo McKern’s Iago was admirable. Tribune provided a catalog of misjudged details. Similarly, Variety found little that was commendable apart from Richard Negri’s “striking decor.” “A production disfigured equally by maladroit verse-speaking and flabby direction” (Times).

Comment: Some sources and programmes give the title as The Bed-sitting Room or The Bed Sitting Room. The production was revised when it transferred to the Duke of York’s where it was performed in two acts and additional characters were introduced. “Recommended to cowards, hedonists, disarmers and other lovers of life” (Observer). Spectator commended Antrobus and Milligan as “theatrical wizards” and the production’s professionalism. This “wild, goon-style farrago” tried too hard to elicit laughs and Illustrated London News “grew steadily more glum as the play multiplied its absurdities and its properties.” “Taken as a whole it is shapeless, and lacks the courage of its pretensions” (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. Tribune noted that Thomas's exuberant, eloquent language served to expose the awkward plot and thin characterizations. Observer expressed a similar reaction but in the context of Thomas's "loathing of capitalism." "The dialogue is a delight ... Humour and wit here, but, oh, for some fervour from the cast" (Daily Mirror). Times faulted John Dexter's handling of the crowd scenes.

Comment: Margate Stage Company. A production of mixed styles by an unaccomplished cast (Guardian). Observer thought the play resembled a documentary and needed performing as such. Variety dubbed it a melodrama and an ill-advised production. "The play is not by any standards a good one" (Times). Illustrated London News averred that the play "has still a curiously compelling authority."

Comment: “Personally, I think Baal is deplorable. If Brecht’s name were not attached to it, I doubt whether any management would have looked again at the rancid stuff about a drunken, seducing lout” (Illustrated London News). Christian Science Monitor said Peter O’Toole played “Baal with a fine romantic air, but ... also restrained and cool. The piece was enthusiastically received.” Spectator concurred and added William’s Gaskill’s direction was “flawless.” Tribune thought the numerous scenes called for the use of a revolving stage, but otherwise the production was faultless. “O’Toole stamps [Baal] with heroic authority” (Times).

Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Shipley, Sobel. Review: Stage 14/2/63, 13; Times 8/2/63, 14. Comment: Frank Hauser’s production “preserves the spirit of the work, with its underlying satire, without departing too violently from tradition. At the same time, it has its bold new touches, some of them admittedly fussy and obtrusive” (Stage). While generally approving the production Times noted “there was a slight want of spontaneity about the performance.”

Comment: Guardian thought it was an efficient American musical marred by feeble music and lyrics. “Delightful to look at but slushy” (Stage). “The sweet and almost gooey nature of the book got a derisory reaction” from most of the critics (Variety). Times declared the piece was so sweet it would rot teeth. The first New York production (Imperial 13/4/61) ran for 719 performances.

Comment: Irish Times reported that the Lord Chamberlain had questioned but ultimately approved the use of religious language in the play. Tribune praised the adaptation, Jim Fitzgerald's direction, and Norman Rodway's performance; the only irritating aspect was the brief use of an amplified off-stage voice. Guardian compared the method of adaptation to Our Town and Under Milk Wood: the hero stands on one side of the stage and narrates his memories as they are then acted out. "Norman Rodway, whether detached at the side of the stage or involved in the action, is precisely right; the spirit of the young Joyce" (Illustrated London News). "Norman Rodway makes a stunning West End debut, combining force with sensitivity, decision with doubt, matter with mind" (Observer). The American premiere was at the Olney Theatre, Maryland, 3/8/66.

Comment: The play involved a young homosexual blackmailing his lorry-driving friend about a murder in order to be close to him. "The play would work just the same without the homosexuality, which isn't made particularly interesting in itself, except for a single scene in which the young man in question has an outburst of self-revelation" (Stage). "Second-hand and leaden-footed" (Observer). Variety predicted a short West End run but a viable future with stock companies. Times noted the piece belonged to the new brand of thrillers "masquerading as psychological drama and tricked out with eccentric settings." "It is a murder play that has worked itself into a tough psychological knot" (Illustrated London News).

6/3/63, 493; Variety 20/3/63, 78. Comment: "The play even in John Berry's expert production seems long, sometimes sentimental, sometimes hysterically violent" (Guardian). Observer fell asleep intermittently during the play and found it did not "challenge convention." However, Variety said it was "a thoughtful, compassionate, often funny and moving play." "I am glad to have met a play, acted intensely by Ian Bannen and Zaikes Mokae and directed by John Berry, that is slow in declaring itself" (Illustrated London News). Comment: The first New York production (Cricket 1/3/64) ran for 239 performances.

a large deal of audience-participation." "The story is unfolded boldly, the singing is rich and heartfelt, and the wit, even though it is so simple, has sparkle and an air of surprise" (Stage). "The production remains splendidly intact" in this revival (Times).

Comment: Christian Science Monitor was fulsome in its praise of Maggie Smith's performance and described her comic technique in detail, as did Spectator after declaring "it is purely Maggie's show." Illustrated London News remembered little of the show apart from "Maggie Smith's contrary Mary, like an enchantingly combative lynx." "The night belongs to the Titian-haired Miss Smith, laconic and nervous, superb in comedy, touching in pathos. She is a gem of an actress. An undeniable dish" (Daily Herald). "A fluffy comedy" composed of "three untidily constructed acts" proclaiming "that clever girls had better keep their mouths shut if they want to succeed in marriage" (Times). Carole Shelley replaced Maggie Smith in late 1963, and, although influenced by the latter's portrayal, lacked some of its subtleties (Variety 18/12/63). The first New York production (Helen Hayes 8/3/61) ran for 1,572 performances.

Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hochman, Law, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Review: Stage 7/3/63, 16. Comment: "James Belchamber's production ... is something of a disappointment. The inevitable deficiencies which cannot be avoided in a repertory presentation of such a play as this seem the more obvious by inevitable comparison with the recent West End production" (Stage).

63.56 The Ballad of Peckham Rye (P) Christopher Holme and Muriel Spark (adpt of Spark's novel, 1960) and Tristram Cary (mus). ST. Reviews: New Statesman 15/3/63, 400; Stage 7/3/63, 15. Comment: Centre Stage. Part of the St. Pancras Arts Festival. "This rather trying story of the diabolically sexy Scot unsettling South London sank almost without trace in the incongruous municipal setting" (New Statesman). Stage said that the adaptation retained "so much of the bizarre and slightly frenetic feeling of the book."

Comment: A baffling thriller about a missing wife. "A contrived thriller that seems a frail contender for survival in the West End market" (Variety). The play "must set some sort of record for red-herrings, clichés and anticlimaxes" (Daily Mirror). Sphere noted that the theatre programme omitted the names of the characters but which were used in performance [see 62.299]. Times enjoyed Thomas's "virtuosity in manipulating complex incident." Illustrated London News could not think of another play with such an "intricately-calculated" plot, and thought it was "a winner."

Comment: "A sparkling, perceptive comedy" with a good central performance by Bernard Miles (Variety). A mixture of stereotypes and "some acute observation of social detail" (Tribune). New Statesman was uninterested by "the young people's heavily contrived dilemma," and more interested in "the relationship of Arthur's parents," Ezra and Lucy. Times praised Naughton's "honesty of imagination," but found the production "a rough and ready affair, leaden in pace and uncertain in timing." "Naughton writes with grace, humour and a wonderful warm compassion for his people. Laughter is constant, yet underneath lies tenderness and sadness ... the best thing the Mermaid has done in its short but erratic life" (Daily Herald). Comment: English Stage Company. Forceful acting from Richard Harris in a monotonous piece (Christian Science Monitor). "It is a performance extremely careful and calculated" (Illustrated London News). Spectator made similar observations. "For at least two-thirds of the evening it is enthralling" (Times). "More than two hours long, the production may be passed as a gallant, well meant effort, but it cannot be called a success" (Stage).

Comment: In the play four men reflect on life and death. Stage said the "subject matter is by no means new and the macabre novelty of the setting [two coffins on stage throughout the play] adds nothing to the stale ideas." Tribune remarked on the very small audience on opening night [apparently typical] and described the play as "a pretentious and unsuccessful piece of pseudo-Pinter."

"A mystery strongly in the commercial-theatre idiom but relieved from banality by the brutal mentality of the four characters and the total absence of a spark of nice feeling among the lot of them" (Stage). "A supremely conventional example of its conventional genre" (Times).

Comment: Christian Science Monitor defended the piece which starred Ian Carmichael as a junior devil who is sent to Monte Carlo to compete for souls with an angel (Moira Lister). Birmingham Post said the production depended entirely upon Carmichael's performance because nothing else about it was worthwhile. Variety thought it was nothing more than an uninventive sketch. Times noted Melville had complained about the censorship of his play; however, "enough remains of the play's glib vacuity for one to arrive at a fair idea of what it was like before it fell into the hands of the censor."

63.66 It's All Happening (Revue) Piers Stephens (deviser) and Roger Booth (deviser) and Paul McDowell (add material). HAMPSTEAD 12/3/63 (Lt). Comment: Christian Science Monitor reported the Lord Chamberlain had censored a sketch about Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip which had already been seen on BBC television [in That Was the Week That Was]. “Baffling that established performers should be willing to appear” in this “appallingly bad” show (Variety). Although Guardian found very little that was entertaining, it reported there was “quite a lot of cheerful laughter” from the audience. “The tedium is endless in its scope and variety” (Observer). “Its only hope of success is the refusal of a bright, talented cast of six to be beaten by the material” (Daily Mirror).

The play was about steel girder erectors. “Behind the documentary approach ... is a confused and unconvincing background of hate, cupidity, adultery, and abortion” (Observer). “It seems very true to life while entirely failing to be theatrical nor appearing to provide much of interest to anyone who is not a building worker” (Stage).

Comment: The anthology comprised “negro poetry, songs, dances and music,” but was occasionally boring and pretentious (Times). “Some of these ... are earnest little epics chronicling major events such as the abolition of slavery with more pride than poetic ability but others are works of power, skill and sophistication, often with a strong streak of satire or suppressed bitterness” (Stage).

Comment: Spectator thought the academic tone spoiled the wit and thematic substance of the piece, a view echoed by Variety. Tribune disliked the play for its gratuitous use of lesbianism in what was a conventional and superficial comedy on marriage. Stage opined the play should have begun where it actually ended: “what goes before is merely a working up to it, and an exceptionally banal, tedious, pretentious process it is, too.” This revised version was “tidier, though still talkative” (Times). The first New York production (29th Street Playhouse 11/4/91) ran for 15 performances.

Comment: Stage said the production "appears to be an attempt at sugaring the Moral Re-Armament pill in such a way that it may be unsuspectingly swallowed by the unconverted while the converted are fully aware of getting precisely what they want." "It presents the modern world in elementary symbolic terms—warring neighbours, a wall, type-names such as Gold, Easy, Samovar—and it says during its three acts a variety of unexceptionable things. There is, I am sure, place for the earnest homily" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The piece paled in comparison to How to Succeed [63.89] and was enjoyable only because of "the miraculously easy charm of Tommy Steel" (Spectator). Variety viewed it as a successful vehicle for Tommy Steele and said the musical was superficial but had "disarming charm." A "slight but agreeable musical" that was well received on opening night (Guardian). "Beverley Cross has made a stumbling mess of the story" (New Statesman). "A facile and unoriginal piece of work, sacrificing everything to the one purpose of charming the audience" (Times).

Comment: The theatre had been renamed and was formerly the Princes (see Stage 28/3/63, 28–31); Times noted the refurbishment had not improved playgoers' comfort. Spectator discussed the elements of American musicals at great length with the present example being "the most finely wrought product now on view in the London theatre." "Abe Burrows's direction is slickly professional and makes effective use of theatrical equivalents of certain cinematic techniques, sharp cuts, slow fades, freezing and speeding up of action" (Tatler). "A cinch to run a couple of years or more" (Variety). Guardian was less enthusiastic (faulting the music and singing) and noted it was received "quite well ... but not with the wildest enthusiasm." The first New York production (46th Street 14/10/61) ran for 1,417 performances.

Comment: Harry H. Corbett performed the plowboy

"with a blend of cruelty, garrulity and self deception," with other good performances from Donal Donnelly and Maxine Audley (Guardian), an opinion seconded by Variety and Tribune. However, Observer was not convinced by Corbett but was by Audley. Tribune astutely put its finger on "that habitual and almost obsessive preoccupation of American drama: the contrast between consoling illusion and unbearable truth." Tatler said that if Corbett and Audley "had been only slightly less convincing, I would have been laughing at the preposterous excess of it all." Corbett's performance reminded Daily Herald of his television Steptoe character: "he is once again a sentimental, forehead-clutching character, battling with a love-hate relationship." The New York production ran for 56 performances.

Comment: The 15/6 performance marked the final performance by Old Vic Company at the Old Vic which was then taken over by the National (see Stage 6/6/63, 15).

“The Old Vic is going out in a blaze of glory” (Variety). New Statesman admired Michael Elliott’s “manifestly sincere” direction but strongly disdained the “sneeringly camp” Lucio as “the most unworthy Shakespearean performance I’ve ever seen on the London stage.” “Elliott has directed it with a strong, straight drive. There is no kind of fumbling around for something self-consciously new” (Illustrated London News). Guardian noted the cast’s tendency to rant, Spectator a tendency to rush speeches. Times (4/4) described Elliott’s production as “one of impassioned austerity which sets the action at one remove from common reality.”

Comment: English Stage Company. The play is also known as To Clothe the Naked. Guardian and Observer praised Diane Cilento for her performance and the translation. Tribune was unconvinced by Pirandello’s version here of truth and illusion, in sharp contrast to that in Who’ll Save the Plowboy? New Statesman also found itself not caring about the substance of the play; similarly Spectator. “It’s a sort of grand opera without the music ... The plot has as many twists and loose ends as a dish of spaghetti but it is often much harder to swallow” (Daily Mirror). “The most telling performance, apart from Miss Cilento’s, was that of New York actor Joseph Wiseman” (Tatler). “It is, I am afraid, a ponderous affair; and, except for Diane Cilento ... and Freda Jackson, indifferently acted. I have often trembled to consider what might have happened if Pirandello had adapted The Comedy of Errors” (Illustrated London News).

About the teachers and boys in a comprehensive school. “A deeply felt and sharply written study of a comprehensive school-boy groping his way out of the sterile jungle of ‘gang’ life” (New Statesman). Spectator said it was a good play (and better than Naked playing in the evening), but it needed revision. “For once we are not offered any formula explanations about the deprived and underprivileged” (Times).

Comment: Spectator said the script had removed Vanbrugh's "elegance and bite," replacing it "with a string of the most obvious obscenities overplayed by a succession of shuffling, shouting pantomime dames." Guardian was less censorious and thought this approach appeared to be popular. "A naughty period piece more or less in the style of operetta" (Tatler). Observer wanted the music to stop so the play could continue. Times said that the piece "knocked the genuine bawdry out of" the original and the result was "a harmless show for the family." Dehn's libretto "has wit and a sense of pastiche to collaborate with Vanburgh. James Bernard's score is similarly in the mood" (Birmingham Post).

Comment: The piece was essentially a series of short absurdist sketches set in a Parisian shop. Observer cited the origin of Dubillard's work on French radio. "Its theme of life's unpredictability is wittily translated in a set of charades, gaily fanciful and fitfully enchanting" (Variety). "Superb original Paris cast, including the author" (New Statesman). Times reported there was a "thin house ... with noticeably few critics present."

Comment: Agnes Bernelle was unable to capture the bite of the words and music of these German satirists (Tribune). Variety was equally unimpressed. Bernelle's solo show "amounts to no more than a miscellaneous ragbag of material with no consistent aim" (Times). "An evening of almost unbelievable gloom ... Satire that shocked pre-war Germany is only a bore in post-war Britain" (Daily Mirror). "But the savagery seems to have had its teeth drawn, and the delights promised to the title never really materialise" (Daily Herald).

Comment: Second City Company, Chicago. "Unpretentious impishness ... playfully winning" (Observer). "A superb little team of satirists ... the satirical joke[s] supple, swift and snide" (Guardian). "Professionals to their finger-tips. Brilliant actors, too" (Tribune). "An intelligent, talented cast but last night I found most of their satire a little blunt and too obvious. It kept me smiling, but not laughing" (Daily Mirror). "A less impressive team than either of their forerunners in London" (Times); Illustrated London News concurred.

Comment: The piece contained "some of the maddest dialogue and situations this side of a goon show—and there is no message, it is all fun" (Daily Mirror). "The same subject is being treated more slickly and more profoundly by the American Second City company" (63.119) (Daily Herald). Observer found the play both delightful and wearisome, a reaction shared by the audience. Spectator thought the play was indulgent, sentimental, and overwritten. Tribune said the production was worth seeing but was unable to determine what Schisgal's true purpose was. "Written by a highly intelligent hyena" (Times). The first New York production (Booth 11/11/64) ran for 901 performances.

Comment: Coward "made a special trip from Geneva to see the Hampstead production" (Stage 27/6/63, 8). "It is no surprise at all that Coward's Private Lives floats so buoyantly through the night ... The comedy, in its sustained wit, has become a 20th-century classic. I recommend to the collector James Roose Evans's assured production" (Illustrated London News 18/5).

Comment: "A superb performance by John Cairney" (Spectator). Tribune said the production did "justice to Sheridan" by providing the play with the "pace and good delivery to make it sparkle." Variety averred the play's "dead wood" needed cutting and the acting comprised "an uneasy mixture of styles."

Comment: "The show is entirely Beryl Reid's ... a real artist and trouper with a technical command I would recommend for study to every young actor in town as well as the Actors Studio in New York" (Observer). Melville's “targets are mainly selected from show business, but even on this subject he rarely has anything to say” (Times). “An old-fashioned revue, lacking only chorus girls and a big production number to qualify for the prewar pattern. I think it more than likely that there are enough surviving squares to keep them in business for months to come” (Tatler). Melville “is still with the wittiest revue-men of them all” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The revue was “a trip down memory lane, recalling some of the great artists and the hit shows” staged previously in central London, a idea which Variety said was better in theory than in practice. Guardian enjoyed the show but thought it might be “a bit too parochial and nostalgic,” particularly as a late-night show. “It tries, unwisely, to be an anthology ... of songs and sketches from theatres in and round Leicester Square between Dibdin and modern intimate revue. It succeeds only ... in an impression of a terrible concert-party for the troops in Korea” (Illustrated London News).

Feydeau and Maurice Hennequin. PICCADILLY 29/4/63. 1st perfd Palais-Royal, Paris, 30/11/1898. Cast: Stage 2/5/63, 15; WWT/14. Gusman Dominique Juliani; Sophie Bérengère Dautun; Angèle Ribadier Madeleine Delavaivre; Eugène Ribadier Jacques François; Thommereux Jean Pierre Vaguer; Savinet Dominique Rozan. Pres Michael Dorfman; Dir Jacques François; Dec Bernard Evain. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 4/5/63, 4; New Statesman 10/5/63, 723; Observer 5/5/63, 29; Stage 2/5/63, 15; Times 30/4/63, 15. Comment: “The wife’s rages and the husband’s futile attempts at deceit are presented extremely spiritedly by Madeleine Delavaivre and Jacques François” (Christian Science Monitor). “An exploitation of absurdity which must have seemed more original in its Victorian days than it does now” (Stage).

63.128 The Importance of Being Oscar (One-man show) Micheál MacLiammóir. ALDWYCH 29/4/63. Cast: Variety 15/5/63, 76; WWT/14. Micheál MacLiammóir. Pres Peter Daubeny; Dir, Dec Hilton Edwards. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 4/5/63, 4; Illustrated London News 11/5/63, 740, 18/5/63, 782; New Statesman 10/5/63, 723; Observer 5/5/63, 29; Sphere 11/5/63, 233; Tatler 15/5/63, 436; Times 30/4/63, 15; Tribune 10/5/63, 11; Variety 15/5/63, 76. Comment: Christian Science Monitor remarked that the audience “seemed rather sluggish” at times. Observer dubbed the performance “as full-blooded as ever.” MacLiammóir “has raised being oneself to the level of an art form. His shows have a unity that is derived from his own luminous personality” (Tribune). “Even if, as in 1960, we can tire of the Wilde legend and realise that much of his work was shoddy, MacLiammóir’s appreciation, sympathy, personal wit, and technical assurance make of it a night to be experienced with gratitude” (Illustrated London News).

63.129 Stop the World—I Want to Get Off (Mus, 2a) Leslie Bricusse (bk, mus, lyr) and Anthony Newley (bk, mus, lyr). HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 29/4/63. Thelma Ruby, Wendy Cross, Sue Cross, Laurel Ford, Jean Carnt, Holly Doone, Janette Miller, Jo Osmond, Jennifer Maynard, Maxine Arquis, Vincent Everett, Roy Desmond. Pp Marfield (Theatre Enterprises) Ltd.; Gen mgr Claude Withers; Mgr Cyril Harcourt Smith; Mus dir Alfred van Dam, Michael Reeves; Pres Bernard Delfont, Marigold Music Ltd.; Dir John Broome; Set, Light Sean Kenny; Mus arr Ian Fraser, David Lindup, Bert Rhodes, Gordon Langford; Cost dgn Kiki Byrne; Pd supervisor Terry Cooke; Cost Nathans; Sc bld E. 63.130 The Uninvited Guest (Thriller, 2a) Agatha Christie. INTIMATE 29/4/63. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Salem, Vinson, Wagoner, Weintraub. Comment: A variant title of The Unexpected Guest.

63.131 I Must Be Talking to My Friends (Ent) Micheál MacLiammóir. ALDWYCH 2/5/63.* Cast: Stage 9/5/63, 13; Variety 15/5/63, 76; WWT/14. Micheál MacLiammóir. Pres Peter Daubeny; Dir, Dec Hilton Edwards. Reviews: Illustrated London News 18/5/63, 782; Observer 5/5/63, 29; Spectator 10/5/63, 603; Stage 9/5/63, 13; Tatler 15/5/63, 436; Times 3/5/63, 18; Tribune 10/5/63, 11; Variety 15/5/63, 76. Comment: "An armchair survey of Irish and Anglo-Irish literature ... [which] entice [MacLiammóir] into swamps of vocal self-indulgence" (Observer). Spectator said the programme was less satisfactory than The Importance of Being Oscar and "there is also a new appealing 'flip' quality." Illustrated London News preferred this programme to MacLiammóir's Wilde programme.

63.132 Magnyfycence (Morality P) John Skelton (adpt Michael Imison). TOWER, CANONBURY, 3/5/63. Written c. 1516. Cast: TTC. Reviews: New Statesman 24/5/63, 804-05; Spectator 10/5/63, 603. Comment: "In general, both the production and the acting is good. All in all, the piece is a fascinating theatrical foetus" (Spectator).

The play won a prize of £150 for the best play in the Repertory Players season. It was about James I, and Times faulted the dialogue and its delivery by the cast. "The theme has so continuous and logical a development and so taut a construction, as to eliminate any tendency towards the episodic" (Stage).

63.136 All for Mary (F, 3a) Harold Brooke and Kay Bannerman. WIMBLEDON 6/5/63. Plot: French, French/2.

63.137 The Final Trick (C thriller) Rex Howard Arundel. INTIMATE 6/5/63. Comment: Bowden gives title as The Final Twist; Jeremy Hawk was in the cast (Bowden, 115). See also Murder He Says (62.391).

63.138 Murder at the Vicarage (Mystery, 2a) Moie Charles and Barbara Toy (drm of Agatha Christie's novel, 1930). RICHMOND 6/5/63. 1st perfd New, Northampton, 17/10/49. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Kabatchnik/2.

Comment: "The worst play I have seen" (Guardian). Much more generously Variety described it as "a neat, if leisurely whodunit." "A plain little play which jogs along ... without much suspense or drama" (Daily Herald). "The play's virtues are those of solid construction and intelligent working out, not of speed and surprise" (Times).

63.140 Some Men and Women (Anthology). HAYMARKET 8/5/63. 1st perfd Palace Court, Bournemouth, 25/3/63. Cast: Stage 16/5/63, 15; Variety 22/5/63, 68; WWT/14. Sybil Thorndike, Lewis Casson. Pres Tennent Productions Ltd. Reviews: Illustrated London News 25/5/63, 820; Observer 12/5/63, 28; Stage 16/5/63, 15; Times 9/5/63, 16; Variety 22/5/63, 68. Comment: A limited engagement of 13 performances. Sybil Thorndike and Lewis Casson performed extracts from their repertoire. They “brought to us the kind of performance that will hold the memory and the imagination long after the mayflies of the year have flickered themselves into oblivion” (Illustrated London News).

63.141 Green Room Rag. PRINCE OF WALES 12/5/63. 1 perf. Reviews: Stage 16/5/63, 16; Times 13/5/63, 8. Comment: “The undisputed star of the evening was Sammy Davis Jr., who gave generously of his time and talent in an act which was witty, warm and generally wonderful” (Stage).

63.142a The Searching Satyrs (P) Sophocles (trans Roger Lancelyn Green of Ichneutae, c. 460 B.C.). HOVENDEN 13/5/63. Cast: Stage 16/5/63, 15. Phoebus Apollo Timothy Reynolds; Silenus Charles Reynolds; Satyrs Walter Pope, Lindsay Kemp, Gabrielle Downey, Davina Dundas; Hermes Hugh Ward. Dir Valery Hovenden; Mus Davina Dundas; Ch Lindsay Kemp. Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 16/5/63, 15. Comment: Performed under the collective title B.C.–A.D. “The Hovenden are to be admired for a bravely experimental programme which results in an evening of unusual dramatic contrast” (Stage).

63.142b The Swap (P) Geoffrey Weston. HOVENDEN 13/5/63.* Cast: Stage 16/5/63, 15. Jason Alexander John; Andrews John Spradbery; Ivor Charles Reynolds; Twins June Brewster, Kevin Hennessy; Policeman Walter Pope; Girl Gabrielle Downey. Dir Lisa Gordon Smith. Review: Stage 16/5/63, 15. Comment: Performed under the collective title B.C.–A.D. In the play “we see the powers of today symbolised by two tramps in a public park preparing to fight each other with an increasing amount of weapons, and who are finally overpowered by their own downtrodden “seconds” (Stage).

63.143 The Doctor’s Dilemma (P, 3a) Bernard Shaw. WIMBLEDON 13/5/63. 1st perfd Court 20/11/06 (m). Plot: Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Mander/3, Matlaw, Purdom, Shank, Shipley. Comment: The pre-West End production prior to opening at the Haymarket in May (63.156). The first New York production was at Wallack’s 26/3/15.

63.144 Down Came a Blackbird (C, 2a) Peter Blackmore. INTIMATE 13/5/63. 1st perfd “Q” Theatre 1/9/53. Comment: The comedy involved a secretary, the length of her nose, and romance.

63.145 Henry V (Hist P) William Shakespeare. RICHMOND 13/5/63. Comment: Michael Atkinson played Henry.

63.146 Day of the Prince (C, 3a) Frank Hilton. Comment: English Stage Company. “Hilton takes Ionesco’s neuroses about family life and serves them up with the trimmings of conventional farce” (Spectator). Variety described it as an uneasy mixture of styles and not well-constructed. Stage said it “is that rare thing, a genuine farce of character and behaviour. It is also a macabre slice of family life, with a thread of surrealism.” Hilton “has a long way to go as constructor of farce [sic]” (Times). “Somewhere, deep inside the social message, is a farce struggling to get out. With tighter writing and slicker direction it might have succeeded” (Daily Herald). Illustrated London News reported that “a few people were perplexed by the laughter about them, knowing that they ought to join in, but unable to see why.”

63.147 The Masters (D, 3a) Ronald Millar (adpt of C. P. Snow’s novel, 1951). HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 14/5/63.* Comment: The pre-West End production prior to opening at the Savoy in May (63.162).

63.148 A Shot in the Dark (C thriller, 3a) Harry Kurnitz (adpt of Marcel Achard, L’idiote, 1960). 611; Times 17/5/63, 18; Variety 29/5/63, 53. Comment: The piece was originally entitled The Maid's Room. Variety said the adaptation had "largely forfeited wit for facetiousness and innuendo," the plot was thin, and the acting lacked "gaiety and charm." Illustrated London News thought that it was "evident that neither Mr. Kurnitz nor his director, Harold Clurman, has considered the effect of American idiom in this very French play. That would not matter so much if the play were at all compelling." Kurnitz's script "represents Broadway at its sniggering, priggish, blunt-witted worst" (Times). Daily Herald wondered whether Judi Dench would transition "from the classics to her first modern role. [At first] she seemed too self-aware," but did settle into her role. The first New York production (Booth 18/1061) ran for 389 performances.

63.149 Henry IV (T, 3a) Luigi Pirandello (trans Frederick May of Enrico IV, 1922). TOWER, CANONBURY, 17/5/63. Cast: TTC. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Hischak, Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel.

Reviews: Daily Herald 18/5/63, 7; Guardian 18/5/63, 5; Stage 23/5/63, 5; Times 18/5/63, 5. Comment: "Bright and loud but not really up to the usual Palladium standard" (Times). "There is something almost endearing about corn in this kind of show. And there is certainly something endearing about [Arthur] Haynes and his partner, Nicholas Parsons, who both know the worth of the raised eyebrow and the double take" (Daily Herald). A "lively summer revue which will obviously pack the Palladium with thousands of satisfied patrons in the months to come" (Stage).

63.150.2 The Three Sisters (P [4a]) Anton Chekhov (trans Elisaveta Fen of Tri sestry, 1901). OLD VIC 19/5/63. 1 perf. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Review: Stage 23/5/63, 15. Comment: Presented by the Vic-Wells Association. The play was performed by junior members of the Old Vic company. "Little more than the minimum was achieved in Fulton Mackay's production, which was pleasantly adequate and aided by good period settings by Richard Montgomery" (Stage).

63.151 Norman (C, 3a) Frank Harvey. DUCHESS 20/5/63. 1st perfd Royal Court, Liverpool, 22/4/63. Comment: "Is the author making fun of lower middle-class families or satirizing the no-longer-new wave dramas by ill-educated writers who lack craftsmanship"; Variety could not tell. Observer thought Frank Harvey was too heavy-handed in the satire directed at other new dramatists. Spectator found merit in the play if the satiric intent is overlooked. "A curious flat-footed caper" (Tribune). Times thought Harvey was trying to avoid offending anyone and the result was boring and a waste of time. "The only excuse for a play like Norman would be if it were devastatingly funny, and hit its targets straight and with understanding" (Stage).

Comment: Teatro Popolare Italiano Company. The piece was about the hero (played by Vittorio Gassman) in drama and popular tradition from Aeschylus to Danilo Dolci. Spectator would have preferred seeing a single complete play rather than this anthology. However, Stage declared it was “magnificent theatre.” Illustrated London News said Gassman was a “man of fine presence and voice, obviously an inspiring figure ... [but he] lacked for me the one major quality of excitement ... I was not excited: the skin did not prickle or the hair rise.”

63.155 Night Conspirators (Mystery, 2a) Robert Muller. SAVILLE 22/5/63. 12 perf. Cast: Stage 30/5/63, 15; Theatricalia; Variety 5/6/63, 56; WWT/14. Comment: The play was about Hitler, who had hidden in Iceland since 1945, returning voluntarily to Germany to be tried. Tribune faulted the author for not knowing what he wanted to say and how to say it. Variety said it was interesting as a political tract but not on stage. Times faulted the “stilted violent language that used to be reserved for horse-whipping scenes.” Illustrated London News said what had worked in the shorter television version did not work on stage: “in the theatre the debates that were to prepare the way for a final flurry of action, moved too slowly: they were not aided by some uncertainty in playing and stiffness in direction.” “Peter Wyngarde gives a splendidly honest performance as Werner Loder, the pivot of the entire play, and his remarkable contribution helps considerably towards sustaining interest in the plot” (Stage).

Comment: Donald McWhinnie’s direction employed some “bizarre casting” that resulted in an subtle account of the play (Observer). “Shaw’s send-up of the medical profession is still fresh and very funny after fifty-seven years. Brian Bedford excels,” with good performances by Liam Redmond, Anna Massey and Moray Watson (Daily Mirror). The play’s middle scenes worked well for Spectator which also opined that Shaw’s first and last acts should be consigned to the wastebasket. Tribune said the scenes satirizing the medical profession really succeeded. “The production does nothing to disguise the play’s structural weakness” (Times). “Donald McWhinnie’s production is intelligent and only mannered to a degree which suits the period” (Tatler).

"Audiences of 1000 anchored off the Traitor's Gate watch nightly the re-enactment of seven years of London's history—the years from 1660 to 1667. The story is told by light and taped sound effects and actors' recorded voices" (Illustrated London News). The show began at 10:00 pm and lasted forty five minutes: "not the cheapest show in town," but it had novelty value (Variety).

Comment: The play was about the three sole survivors of a nuclear holocaust wondering what do to. "It needs a Shaw to deal with such a situation if it must be dealt with at all. Unfortunately, wit rarely flows" (Stage). "It was a sweaty, sniggering affair; and I have seldom been happier to see a curtain fall" (Illustrated London News). Observer wondered why the play was done. "This whimsical and pretentious piece fell like a dull thud and its chances of survival are nil" (Variety 26/6), and they were. The Philadelphia tryout flopped and a projected Broadway production was abandoned (Variety 31/1/62, 61).

Comment: The play was about a stolen tiara. "Though Janet Allen's dialogue had one or two amiable lines, and the piece had been gummed together efficiently, it was all wildly out of touch with the world of 1963" (Illustrated London News) Guardian said the play was old fashioned but incorrectly opined it might have its admirers, while Variety correctly forecast an early demise. "The atmosphere of the play and the characters are so very old fashioned, and rather tame" (Stage). Times thought the piece was "not altogether an incompetent play."

Comment: The plot concerned the machinations involved in selecting the new master of a Cambridge college and why. What Millar "has done in the third act ... is to transmit to the house the conflict and the breathless doubt of an uncommon piece of storytelling" (Illustrated London News). Observer dubbed it a stately and Edwardian evening in the theatre. The piece seemed all too familiar for Guardian which noted the audience was attentive and appeared to enjoy it. More favorably, Tribune called it a good dramatic and intelligent piece, and urged people to see it. Spectator thought Millar's adaptation was done well although the play was still "fairly dull." "Easily the most successful play in the series" of Millar's versions of Snow's novels (Times).

"May have been a pioneer production but it is now pretty thin stuff" (Stage); Illustrated London News agreed. "Its vitality and freshness remain in tact: it might have been written yesterday" (Times). "The wonder is that it isn't more dated in its effect" (Tatler). The first New York production (Adelphi 28/12/44) ran for 462 performances.

but first we have to sit painfully through the three scenes of the first act and the unpromising beginning of the second, during all of which it seems that we are in for the worst type of banal murder tale" (Stage). The first New York production (John Golden 22/10/57) ran for 63 performances.

Comment: Hart's adaptation used a late starting point in the novel and provided necessary information retrospectively. Guardian approved the adaptation in this generally "excellent little production." Variety also approved, but questioned whether the production could enjoy a substantial run if transferred to the West End, clearly overlooking the attraction of Michael Denison, Dulcie Gray, Violet Farebrother, and Keith Baxter. Hart made "a neat, old-fashioned play out of Forster's novel" (Times 7/6). "The play grips from the first minute, and is extremely well acted" (Daily Mirror); however, Daily Herald declared "a stiff play that bears so little relation to reality."

Comment: Performed by Dr. Murray Banks, a former professor of psychology at Long Island University, USA. Daily Herald said it was "all very glib, and very smooth, and all very superficial ... I started cracking [up] about five minutes after Dr. Banks started his act." Stage gave Banks "a high rating as a raconteur, especially of Jewish stories."

Comment: The play was about a pair of newly weds and would have been much interesting if handled realistically; instead Finbow adopted the style of Pinter and Ionesco (Observer). New Statesman said the play was "funny and visually telling, and failed only in occasional well-signalled flights of literature." David William's production was "designed effectively to bring out the best in its players" (Times). "This year's stage picture is elaborate, with the facade of a Tudor mansion among the trees, and some sturdy landscape gardening" (Illustrated London News). Comment: Guardian opined the play was dated and the translation and production did little to make the piece interesting. "A surprisingly polished and civilized entertainment," but Jeremy Spenser was too mannered (Times). Daily Herald said Spencer was miscast. Birmingham Post called the play "a lamentably insipid affair ... the piece draws where it should bubble." The first New York production (Playhouse 16/8/32) ran for seven performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. Daily Herald described the play as "a powerful, absorbing and curiously beautiful study of a man's preoccupation with the world of violence." "The piece must be taken, I gather, as a parable about the impossibility of living sanely in isolation ... but the play is labouring and repetitively portentous" (Illustrated London News). Tribune faulted most aspects of the play but singled out for praise the performances of Nicol Williamson and Sarah Miles. For Observer the play appeared to be a first draft. Spectator thought Livings was not developing as a dramatist. Times thought the melodramatic elements overwhelmed the play and contradicted Livings's message. "A compelling if, at times, puzzling 2½ hours. Henry Livings never writes easy-to-follow plays, and this is a good example" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Comment: When performed at Stratford in 1959 this Peter Hall production was loaded with gimmicks; at the Aldwych it is "trimmed, refined, transformed, and triumphant" (Tribune). Guardian agreed the production had now mellowed though it still had drawbacks. Times said that the production possessed "a richness of detail and emotional depth that force one to encounter the play as if for the first time." "One has mixed feelings about the clowns, who are bedevilled by the imposition of too much 'business.' Paul Hardwick is a conceited, blustering Bottom but his clowning grows tedious" (Stage).

Comment: The piece was about the "age-old unsuccessful love of Pierrot for Columbine, set within the confines of a troupe of concert-party artists, who give a 'play within a play' in the form of one of the funniest lampoons of end-of-pier entertainment I have ever seen"

(Stage).

Comment: The opening of a new theatre, inside a hotel (see Stage 20/6/63, 19). Spectator said the production was an "auspicious beginning," especially with Ralph Richardson and Barbara Jefford. Observer noted there was some needless and detrimental fiddling with the text; otherwise a good production under the "controlled inventiveness of William Ball's direction." "There was a certain amount of under-speaking at the premiere" (Illustrated London News). Variety reported that William Ball had directed the same translation of the play at the current production at the Martinique off-Broadway.

Comment: A programme of work by O'Neill compiled by Alfred Allan Lewis and performed under the collective title Hughie. Variety called it "an itsy-bitsy miscellany ... It does scant justice to Eugene O'Neill." "A theatrical dog's breakfast," but with an excellent performance from Meredith Burgess" (Guardian). "On the whole the programme is rather like the digest approach to literature ... a quick cultural flip through a man who wrote 60 plays in order to get down all his tumultuous thoughts, ideas and emotions. It doesn't work and it's damn near impudence" (Daily Herald). "If the triple bill had been left to speak for itself, I might have responded more eagerly: as it was, my pleasure was blanketed by the illustrated lecture. Why not cut it entirely and fill the time with a fourth short play?" (Illustrated London News). Times reported the programme was given "an enthusiastic welcome" on the first night.

The play was "concerned with the cruelties and corruptions of Communism as seen through the eyes of one family and their friends ... too narrowly personalised to be a documentary and yet too generalised to be a good play" (Stage).

Comment: Observer praised John Neville for his "enormous technical animation," though he seemed somewhat too old for the role. Most of Variety's review was devoted to praising Neville. Guardian gave an additional congratulatory nod to Glenda Jackson, Audine Leith, Alan Townsend, and Margaret Courtenay. Spectator said the play was "much flimsier" than Naughton's All in Good Time, performed at the Mermaid (63.58). A "delicious, homely new play [with] Alfie played with a rare delicacy by John Neville" (People). Stage also said All In Good Time was a better play, but Alfie "is the more interesting. ... Naughton's triumph [is] that he takes us into the soul of Alfie." The first New York production (Morosco 17/12/64) ran for 20 performances.

Comment: Guardian thought, probably thanks to J. B. Priestley, the novel had transferred well to the stage; Observer was not convinced completely. Illustrated London News described the play as "a feverish high comedy ... [or an] intellectual farce. The trouble is that, for all its pretensions, I find much of the play obtrusively unamusing. It tries hard; but its characters are rootless and motiveless." Daily Mirror said Murdoch made sex both funny and boring. "That rare phenomenon, a literary work which becomes more clearly itself in adaptation to another medium" (New Statesman); Times (28/6/63) echoed that view. Times (5/7/64) reported that the play was now in two acts. The first New York production (Royal 20/10/64) ran for 29 performances.

Bits of Beckett, of Pinget, of avant-gardisme, float through her play" (Spectator). Stage said the script was "admirable," but the play belonged on the radio not the stage. "A very delicate and moving Parisian conversation-piece, spoken with the subtlest ease by Bridget Turner and David March, and directed comparably" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: A play about a school in financial difficulties. "Might have been my play some years ago. ... [but] Gilbert's plot is insipid and predictable; ... I could believe in hardly anything" (Illustrated London News). "A leadenly inadequate vehicle for Alastair Sim [as a schoolmaster]" (Tribune). Guardian said it was a dated play. Only staged because of Sim (Variety). "The ending is obvious after the first fifteen minutes and the fact that your interest is kept to the end is not entirely due to Mr. Sim—but without him the play would flop" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: The first-night audience received the piece quite well even though the singing was feeble (Guardian). Times reported that "a large Italian contingent in the audience ... greeted this sorry piece of work with tumultuous enthusiasm." Variety thought the production needed some pruning and the book more wit. "Drags interminably" (Observer). Stage praised various aspects of the production but found the story "often banal and cumbersome." "There is no single tune that sticks in the mind" (Daily Mirror). "For all its incident, it manages to be singularly empty" (Illustrated London News).

"The acting is of an infuriating badness" (New Statesman). Spectator disagreed and noted that James Roose-Evans's "hard, tight production" emphasized the central feature of the piece that it is "nothing but talk." Stage praised Roose-Evans who "achieved the miracle of reaching a level of high-comedy playing which can hardly have been bettered during the original production." Variety observed that the play had been updated slightly with some contemporary references.

Comment: Times commended the piece but said the production failed “to bring the main characters to life.” “Bitty and sketchy... [but with] the marquee appeal of Harry Secombe, one of the favorites of the British stage” (Variety). Secombe, “the sweet-singing clown from Swansea, is the heart, the soul, and the podgy joy of it all” (Daily Mirror). “An unqualified hit that will run ... until Harry Secombe loses his paunch. It is as English as Christmas pudding” (Daily Herald). For Observer, Irish Times (and other critics) the most interesting facet of the production was Sean Kenny’s ingenious sets. The first New York production, which also starred Harry Secombe as Pickwick (46th Street 4/10/65), ran for 56 performances.

Comment: Actors’ Workshop. “In his direction Robert O’Neill dealt skilfully with the changes throughout the period of the play, welding the episodes smoothly into continuity, making interesting (although necessarily limited) use of lighting and achieving an effect which, after the first rather slow act, gripped and held one’s attention” (Stage). The first New York production (7th Avenue South 30/4/57) ran for 232 performances.

Comment: The 1963 Cambridge Footlights Revue. “What it does have is a delightful idiocy that it is next to impossible to put on paper” (Birmingham Post). “More zany than biting satire” (Variety). Guardian thought the revue was fresh and original, and said it was well received by the audience. Daily Mirror reported that, unusually, the audience returned after the interval full of enthusiasm. Times thought this was the funniest Cambridge revue so far. The piece received 102 performances at the Lyric.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian opined that at three hours long this was probably the most complete Beggar's Opera for two centuries; however, it deprecated the "self-consciousness" Peter Wood introduced into the production, a point amplified by Spectator. Tribune declared Wood's direction was "inspired." Times detected unevenness in the presentation of various scenes. "All of the mechanics are relishingly managed; but the Royal Shakespeare Company (eager though it is) cannot cope with the melodies. Only Derek Godfrey's Macheath comes over with entire success" (Illustrated London News).

"David William's production ... achieves the unexpected by being better than the high standard of last year" (Stage).

Comment: Observer thought the play survived the poor casting (apart from Joss Ackland) and criticized the omission of the carnival scene. “Only late in the play did Joss Ackland make us believe that Galileo was a man of flesh and blood and not a cardboard figure” (Daily Mirror). Spectator thought the production was much stronger than three years previously (60.192). Better than its predecessor at the Mermaid, but “as a whole the production remains lacking in detail and loosely directed” (Times). Not to be missed (Tribune). Birmingham Post opined that Brecht’s reputation would be improved if none of his work was produced for a year or so.

A good performance from David Hemmings and excellent direction by Ann Jellicoe (Guardian, Spectator, Variety). Variety did not think the piece was strong enough to transfer to the West End. Times said the play worked if viewed as an allegory, but that “there is in any case an element of self-pity and special pleading which diminishes the play’s value.” “Written thoughtfully, and it is sincerely acted, especially by David Hemmings and Bernard Kay. It makes a grey evening; but, as a document in misery (of a kind very rare in the theatre) it does have a certain value” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Observer welcomed "Toby Robertson's spring-heeled production." "Robertson's direction creates an atmosphere of delightful comedy, captures the wit and brings the characters out in all their fascination" (Stage). "A lusty and high-speed romp" (Daily Mirror). "While most of the company is acting away like mad, the fun is not immediately communicable. At the premiere I felt something of an outsider except when Eileen Atkins and Ann Bell were on the stage" (Illustrated London News). Times found fault with aspects of the acting.

Wiley is a young man who becomes dissatisfied with every aspect of life as he encounters it. Compassionate. but over-emotional, he fights against the clinical mentality of doctors and nurses at the American hospital where he is an orderly, only to find that his view of things is equally liable to error (Stage).

Comment: New Pike Company. This "festival of Irish comedy" was to include Sean O'Casey's Figure in the Night; however, the Lord Chamberlain objected to so much in the play that it was withdrawn (Irish Times 19/7/63, 1; Stage 11/7/63, 1). "A 40-minutes distillation of Brendan Behan on politics, sex and religion," thin on plot (Guardian). Variety said it rambled but was humorous. Spectator thought that compared with the Synge plays Behan's seemed "dis-composed." "An odd line or so apart, it is the clumsiest elementary stuff, relying on jokes about names ... and an occasional raucous song" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: New Pike Company. Spectator was grateful for the production of the two Synge plays and the atmosphere they evoked. The company was "much happier in The Shadow of the Glen than The Tinker's Wedding which declines to a scramble" (Illustrated London News). The first New York production was at Maxine Elliott's in November 1911.

Comment: Illustrated London News found Kilty’s use of the epistolary convention to be tiresome. Christian Science Monitor wondered why Kilty had bothered to write this flat, lifeless play; moreover, John Gielgud “was ill-advised to appear” in it. “There was a substantial audience, apparently consisting in the majority of tourists. But as a production it seems to me to fail on every important point” (Stage). Variety also blamed Kilty’s adaptation for its lack of dramatic power. “A dry, wordy affair which had few dramatic high-spots” (Daily Mirror). “Grossly inadequate” (Times).

63.238 Come Blow Your Horn (C, 3a) Neil Simon. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 12/8/63. Roy Desmond, Bernard Shine, Elaine Montgomerie. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/4, 374, Bronner, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Loney, MacNicholas, Salem.

Review: Stage 15/8/63, 15. Comment: Also performed 17/8/63 (m) in the yard of the George Inn, Southwark. "Although a few members of the cast appear unused to coping with the Shakespearean idiom, and cases of bad diction are in evidence, every member shows a good understanding of character and situation, and there are some performances of outstanding merit. Notable among these is that of Lauriston Shaw as Henry VI" (Stage).

Comment: New Pike Company. "It is a wheedling, blarneying letter, with news about a variety of eccentrics in a Galway village. It tells some involved and not very funny stories about them" (Illustrated London News). The acting was "tentative," the production "makeshift" (Guardian). "A dreary, labored effort, readily forgotten" (Variety). "Alan Simpson's production is a slow moving, graceless affair," with little ensemble acting (Times). "An extremely old-fashioned affair—a rehash ... of every cliché associated with Irish rural comedy-drama, fairy legend and sinister superstition, character eccentricity and religious and social mess" (Stage).

The revival was "distinctly inferior to the original" (Times). Stage commended the play and production by John Dexter; however, Alan Dobie was not as good as Frank Finlay had been as Corporal Hill. This production was also staged at the Plymouth, New York, on 1/10/63 and ran for 149 performances.

Comment: A good adaptation with "rather staid" acting and uncertain production (Spectator). "For the most part it is a tiring, tedious piece, with halting dialogue and wearisome characters" (Stage). Guardian faulted Powell's dialogue: "pleasantly dry" in the novel, "positively dehydrated" on stage. "A poor specimen" of a novel being adapted for the stage (Times).

63.251 A Clean Kill (Murder Mystery, 3a) Michael Gilbert. WIMBLEDON 26/8/63. Plot: French/2, Loney, 316. Review: Stage 29/8/63, 16. Comment: The piece was a last minute substitute for the American play The Albatross for which the performing rights had not yet been granted (see 63.327).

Comment: New Pike Company. "An uneven mish-mash of whimsy misfiring lyricism and sublimely successful farce" (Guardian). "A leaden production" (Tribune). Variety concurred with the general negative verdicts. "The play seems to be the work of a Dublin Barrie" (Times). "Almost too Irish to be true. It is a fact that the more Irish plays one sees the more one wonders whether any son of Erin can ... ever put pen to paper without consulting a mythical volume entitled The Bumper Book of Irish Whimsey and Metaphor" (Stage).

Comment: "Some of [Brown's] original material is 'pointed social comment,' but have no fear. Even on the eve of his compatriots' great march on Washington it came over without rancour" (Birmingham Post).

Plot: Gassner, 546, Hochman. Review: Stage 5/9/63, 13. Comment: Median Players. "Margaret Hall's direction was also of good amateur order, inhibited as she must have been by the difficulties of the stage but she must be congratulated on some interesting character explorations and some pleasing and quite exciting timing which compensated for lack of pictorial pattern" (Stage).

Simon Ward "makes better sense of the story than many a great actor I have seen" (New Statesman). "The deep introspection of the soliloquies was expressed with a fair amount of conviction and, if [Ward's] performance did not scale the summit, the foothills were well and truly conquered" (Stage). "Shakespeare plain ... nothing tricky" (Observer).

Comment: Observer and Spectator rendered negative verdicts while Tribune somewhat enjoyed this outdated, formulaic piece. Rattigan “remains almost unchallenged as our surest theatrical craftsman, a master of situation, a manipulator of stage action. But nowadays, when every man is his own psychiatrist, perhaps this is not enough” (Stage). For Times the play failed to present an understanding of the central character, Gregory Antonescu. There was general praise for Charles Boyer making his London debut. The first New York production (Brooks Atkinson 12/11/63) ran for 54 performances.

63.263 Victims of Duty (TC, 1a) Eugène Ionesco (trans Donald Watson of Victimes du devoir, 1953). ESTONIAN 5/9/63. Cast: Stage 12/9/63, 15. Plot: French/2, Matlaw. Review: Stage 12/9/63, 15. Comment: Campden Hill Theatre Company. The lighting “is excellently designed to assist the atmosphere and most of the multiple aspects of the various characters were interestingly analysed” (Stage).

Comment: Michael Gambon gave “a sensitive performance,” but most of the cast was “unpolished” and “amateurish” (Guardian). Tribune was far more forgiving. “Performed beautifully under the direction of Mick Kaye, who has achieved a homogeneity of style and the sense of ensemble which we continually hope for at Unity and seldom obtain” (Stage). The New York production ran for 149 performances.

63.264b Oh Freedom (Folk-song ent) Charles Chilton. UNITY 6/9/63. Reviews: Guardian 7/9/63, 5; Stage 12/9/63, 13; Times 7/9/63, 12; Tribune 13/9/63, 9. Comment: A musical history of slavery, directed by Roger Hudson. “Totally untheatrical” (Guardian). Tribune’s verdict was even harsher. “Under-rehearsed even by these modest lights. More serious, however, is the patronising air which pervades the programme. One wonders whether white men, however well-intentioned, can ever avoid this pitfall when writing about the coloured races” (Stage).

63.265 The Open Window (Melo, 3a) Lenore Coffee and William Cowen Joyce. RICHMOND 9/9/63. 1st perfd Sombbrero, Phoenix, Arizona, 22/3/54. Comment: The “plot revolves around a megalomaniac who drives his first wife to suicide and who badgers and dominates her successor, his servant, and everyone else that crosses his path” (Variety 31/3/54, 68).

Comment: English Stage Company. Alec Guinness was “a complete success” as Berenger (Spectator 20/9). “Guinness’s performance is what counts: the disintegration of a man” (Illustrated London News). Tribune disagreed; it found Guinness “fussy,” and the play unsatisfying. Stage could “detect little of the imagination, inventiveness, poetry and sense of mystery in life that have made Ionesco’s previous work so gripping and moving.” Times said the “writing ... varies between the solemn and the frivolous." Variety thought the production was "a cinch for transfer" to the West End because of "the ticket selling appeal of the stars" (Guinness, Google Withers), an inaccurate prediction.

Comment: James Roose-Evans "has an entrancing gift of evocation; of summoning in the simplest way the sounds and sights of an atmospheric narrative. Here, again, he recreates a poet's wistful remembrance in terms of the theatre" (Illustrated London News 5/10). Spectator thought that Lee's work had not transferred convincingly to the stage although it did retain "the same lyrical spirit as the book, in praise of simplicity." Guardian said the adaptation lacked "the pungency, wit or sentiment" found in similar plays that employ a narrator—Stephen D, Under Milk Wood, and Own Town. Variety embraced similar views to Spectator and Guardian.

Comment: The title also appeared in print as * * * *. Variety said the Phoenix was too large a space for this intimate and innocuous revue. "Exceedingly clean throughout, and quite often very funny. If none of the jokes went too far, quite a number of them went on too long, especially the political ones" (Stage).

63.273 House of Cards (MC, 2a) Peter Greenwell (mus, bk; based on Alexander Ostrovsky, Even a Wise Man Stumbles; trans David Magarshack of Na vsyakogo muredretsa dovolno prostoty, 1868) and Peter Wildeblood (lyr) and Guy Morgan (add dialogue). Review: Stage 19/9/63, 15. Comment: Fenella Fielding portrayed a series of great theatrical ladies and exhibited “great expertise” (Variety). “The main objection to this entertainment is that it is almost desperately parochial ... [however] the perfect vehicle for Fenella Fielding, champion of theatricality at its most artificial” (Stage). “What a waste of Fenella Fielding of the gloriously sexy voice and undoubted revue talent. As a condensed cabaret turn this could be funny, but two hours ... Oh dear, no!” (Daily Mirror).

The plot involved the potential demolition of a pub. Spectator found it formulaic and not good. “A warm hearted, meaningful [musical], full of brisk, tuneful entertainment” (Stage). Variety offered only praise for the exuberant, young cast, and John Bury’s sets.

Comment: Both pieces were “produced and played with cool certainty and punctuated with giggles and sighs of decreasing assurances by the audience” (Guardian). Tribune commented that audience members had walked out, or fallen asleep during the production, but said Dwarfs was “a work of considerable power.” “A double bill of bewildering contrast. One is a sick comedy, the other a weirdly enigmatic dramatic exercise” (Variety). Spectator was neither convinced nor involved by The Dwarfs. “Anyone in his right mind who understands [The Dwarfs] is obviously not in his right mind” (Daily Mirror).

Comment: The original title was Mr. Mayor. A “comedy with an obvious warning: Beware the power-mad Hitlers in our midst ... well-intentioned but all rather heavy going” (Daily Mirror). Spectator noted parallels with Frisch’s The Fire Raisers, and praised the “brilliant mannered style” of the cast. Tribune found considerable “intellectual confusion” in the piece and the dialogue was “banal in the extreme.” Times said the play was empty “of real content ... [but] efficiently written from line to line.”

Comment: “Little more than a mild attempt to cash in on the current satirical wave” (Variety). “Dead horses savagely flogged” (Times). “The effect of [Behan’s satirical jabs] is blunted by being delivered in a formal theatre, when they cry out for the more exhilarating atmosphere of an intimate cabaret or club” (Stage).

Comment: Times thought the production possessed a “relentless, if jaded air.” Stage said Lynne had “exploited the dance to accentuate comedy of movement and situation, to reflect the mood of evocative music and to tell the most melodramatic of stories. At its best this dance revue has that compelling quality inherent in pure theatre of any kind, but I would like to cut out those few spoken words which exist in the script.”

"The story, situations, characterisation and dialogue are brittle and shallow enough, but they are always diverting" (Stage). "Fred Clark ... gives one of the finest comic performances seen on a London stage ... Not that the play itself is all that funny" (Daily Mirror). Despite the critics' verdicts, the show is certain to be a hit as it was in New York (Variety). Joan Bennett's West-End debut. The first New York production (Playhouse 27/11/62) ran for 1,007 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. "A request that children under 16 should not be admitted to theatre was made by the Lord Chamberlain's Office and a notice to that effect has been posted outside the Aldwych box office" (Stage 26/9/63, 1). Illustrated London News reported that there was no applause on the first-night; the cast did not appear after the final scene, and "the audience moved away, hushed. It had been an evening of fearful memories." Spectator and Variety discussed the extensive textual cuttings and adaptation of this production. The Variety reviewer had also seen the original, longer Berlin production when the piece was entitled The Deputy. Tribune said the Royal Shakespeare Company ought to be ashamed at presenting this "hopelessly bad play." There was general praise for the performances of Alec McCowen, Alan Webb, Ian Richardson, and Paul Hardwick. The first New York production, as The Deputy (Brooks Atkinson 26/2/64), ran for 316 performances.

Comment: Dora Bryan portrayed the career of a rising performer, for which Variety said "the stage comes alight with her every appearance." "Miss Bryan works like a real trouper, shines like a star, and stretches versatility to great lengths in order to make the evening entertaining" (Stage). "A loose excuse for some very loose material" presented in varying styles: burlesque, pantomime, pierrot seaside performance, and old fashioned revue (Observer).

The play was about a laborer's metaphorical fantasies of building a cathedral. Observer praised Peter King as an "effectively moronic" Ted. "A complicated story of predictable simplicity is made sharply and often hilariously original" (Times).

Comment: "At the premiere (and I had never known anything like it at this theatre) it closed with the Haymarket audience joining in the chorus of 'Mud, Mud, Glorious Mud'" (Illustrated London News). Spectator confessed its prejudiced distaste for Donald Swann but enjoyed Michael Flanders's "conversational style." Tribune was not really amused. "Only the most determined misanthrope could fail to enjoy" this piece (Variety). The first New York production (Booth 27/12/66) ran for 105 performances.

Comment: A four-week limited run in an enlarged version. Spectator said the production was slapdash. "Saved from complete collapse only by the wit of one or two lyrics" (Guardian). Stage said it was difficult to discern "what type of musical" was intended: "Is it supposed to be satirical, romantic, nostalgic? Satirical-romantic, artificial and mocking?" "An agreeable, undemanding evening" (Times). Tribune attempted to provide a corrective to the poor reviews of other critics.

Comment: A charity preview was given on 2/10/63 and a midnight charity performance was given on 3/3/64 in aid of Oxfam. The "old-fashioned gallery benches" were removed with this production; new "plush, tip-up seats" were installed instead and could be booked (Stage 1/10/63, 1). "An extremely enjoyable Roman romp" (Observer). However, Spectator was disappointed by the thin text and expected Frankie Howerd to be funnier. "A triumph in itself from every point of view and a triumph for Frankie Howerd in the leading part" (Stage 10/10). "A ragbag of classical comedy situations played out in the abstract in woolly pyjamas" (Times). Tribune disparaged every aspect of the show. Reviews: Stage 17/10/63, 13; Times 15/10/63, 15. Comment: "A parable about man's need to face and overcome his innate corruption" (Times). "The fundamental concept of the play is that no good can come to anyone from running away from the world or from one's own self. This the author has expressed through the idea of a playwright whose characters take a life of their own and themselves run away not from, but with him, until the position becomes so far reversed that he is the puppet of their creation" (Stage).

Comment: Performed under the collective title Cockade. Christian Science Monitor was offended by "the brutality of language," the "revolting and filthy words" in all three plays. Spectator thought the plays were "derivative." However, Tribune hailed Charles Wood as "a new writer of unquestionable talent." "There is nothing the least romantic in Mr. Wood's compelling look at the Army and soldiers. He is grim, ironic, hardhitting. He is clearly a writer of talent, with the power steadily to build up and reveal character, a live theatrical craft, and a sensitive, extremely observant mind" (Stage). A brilliant performance in John Thomas from Norman Rossington (Guardian).

Comment: Despite the play's unvarying pitch, Tribune found the writing "firm and effective ... some scenes are compelling." "The play lapses chiefly because the tension of relationships is maintained on too even a keel, whereas it should mount steadily for maximum impact. But this is far outweighed by the quality of dialogue between protagonists" (Stage); Times expressed a similar judgment.

Comment: Times praised the company for being "ambitious, scrupulous and dedicated," but the production did not succeed despite "Paul Bacchus's careful direction and an outstandingly beautiful set by John Dorsett." "The players were well drilled but not at home. There was a lot of fussy movement and the dialogue was not always effectively projected" (Stage).

Comment: The inaugural production of the National Theatre Company (see Stage 24/10/63, 18–19). The production ran nearly five hours. Guardian said Peter O'Toole gave "a performance of some solid achievements" reminiscent of Olivier's nearly thirty years ago, and noted Sean Kenny's "revolving permanent set" got in the way (a point amplified in Spectator). Irish Times said O'Toole was brilliant in this "conventional, careful production." Observer remarked on the "quite exceptional" supporting cast, the genesis of a strong ensemble company: Michael Redgrave, Diana Wynyard, Robert Stephens, Rosemary Harris, Derek Jacobi and Max Adrian. Stage was fulsome in its praise of O'Toole. Tribune listed four good aspects of the performance; however, it lambasted the production as "frankly disastrous," as a result of excessive pageantry and gimmickry. The production remained in repertory until 4/12/63.

Comment: The production lasted over three hours. Observer said Camus' version over-emphasized the melodramatic elements of the original. Guardian agreed, adding that the melodramatic tone was furthered by the use of a triple revolve which speeded up the action too much. "A play of considerable interest. At the Mermaid ... it has received rough treatment in production, though some of the acting is outstanding" (Stage). Tribune called the production "efficient and the acting good all round," but failed to find a reason for the adaptation except that it saved time "for people who won't read the novel." "The cast is well above the usual Mermaid quality" (Times).

Comment: Intended as a vehicle for Kenneth More's return to the London stage, it was a pity that the play lacked craftsmanship (Christian Science Monitor, Spectator). "Cooper loses his way ... not once but many times. He introduces all sorts of novel and promising ideas, but fails to follow them up or exploit them adequately" (Stage). However, Tribune found a different purpose in the play: Cooper "has made within his conventionally written play an ironic comment on conventionally written plays." Times commended the performances of Celia Johnson, Cyril Raymond, and Kenneth More.

She calls the Dauphin Charlie and confides 'Tha is not king yet, lad'" (Daily Mirror). "The more I see St. Joan [sic], the more prolix and gabby I find it" (Spectator). Tribune was impressed by Joan Plowright's intense performance; John Dexter's direction was orthodox and straightforward. Irish Times praised the "superb production," Joan Plowright's performance, and "Shaw's wonderful sense of theatre as we listen to the fascinating arguments couched in the most beautiful language." Variety thought this ranked "as one of the best productions" of the play. "The production, in general, is strongly and lucidly designed; it has in Miss Plowright a Joan for the records; and it has placed Shaw, as he should be placed, high in the repertory of the National Theatre" (Illustrated London News). The piece contained “almost every stock cliché from the farcical gag-book” which the star appeal of Cicely Courtneidge and Jack Hulbert cannot overcome (Variety); however, Stage thought they might save the play. “A bit of an old-fashioned bore ...The whole evening is rather like an old movie—one which I might have enjoyed had it been silent” (Daily Mirror).

Comment: “A discredit to show business” (Illustrated London News). Guardian noted that the first-night reception was less than “rapturous,” and thought the piece lacked sufficient humour. “The Lane could have done better than a twenty-five-year old piece that at its best is fitted only to a theatre of modest size” (Stage). Christian Science Monitor said the gallery booed parts of the second act; the problem was that the songs were already familiar and the humour weak. “Quite staggering awfulness—mechanical clowning, raucous underlining of every joke, prosaically lavish sets, snatches of classical ballet” (Observer). “The action never gets off the ground ... [the text is] as heavy and witless as a Christmas pantomime script” (Times). The first New York production (Alvin 23/11/38) ran for 235 performances.

McEvoy. Review: Stage 14/11/63, 15. Comment: “Full of predictable gimmicks which are perhaps rather more than less funny for their predictability. Comment: This was not an English Stage Company production but rather a commercial one before the theatre was closed for reconstruction. The play showed a conventional middle-class young woman exerting her will over a bohemian would-be writer. Variety generally thought well of the play and production but doubted it would transfer to the West End. However, Illustrated London News thought the piece, with its present cast, had a future. “Corlett builds up atmosphere and situation and reveals character extremely well ... His fumbblings, both in construction and dialogue, are those of a young writer” (Stage). Generally, notices were mixed and, because of a poor second-night box office, the play was withdrawn early.

Comment: "The biting lyrics and jazzy honky-tonk music give the work a flavour unique in opera, while Michael Geliot's production is as up-to-date as the stamp trading war. Although some of the cutting edge is missing from the voices, it would be unkind to cavil at such a small point when the ensemble acting is so good" (Stage).

"A black, stylish and compelling work ... which deserves a larger audience [than at the Arts]" (Variety 27/11). Tribune (29/11) described the play as both "repugnant and fascinating" yet it generated "bristling excitement," with good acting from Charles Gray and Donald Pleasence. The first New York production (Cort 14/11/64) ran for 17 performances, with Donald Pleasence and Charles Gray repeating their roles.

Having seen the same production in 1959 (with a different cast), Tribune was afflicted by "profound boredom." Illustrated London News had disliked the original production of the play (Wearing 59.199) which now "revealed itself once more as a study in acute selfishness." Spectator described it as "a uniquely successful play" with admirable acting from Nicol Williamson. Observer added further praise for Susan Hampshire, Margaret Tyzack and T. "Not high art, but it is very respectable entertainment, expertly calculated to appeal to the public who read daily about takeovers" (Times 22/11). Variety correctly predicted the production would be "another winner." Times (27/2) reported a new ending was substituted during the final week of February 1964.

Comment: The original title was Sergeant Dower Must Die. The play was about a soldier held hostage by an unnamed enemy. Variety called it a "literate work" that lacked emotion. "Too slick and melodramatic" (Christian Science Monitor). "Well and vigorously written" (Times). "It didn't convince steely-hearted old me that it could possibly happen. This is not a play about people, but of symbolic characters who make speeches" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: "What a load of codswallop ... The characters are a richly-assorted bunch of screwballs ... There is a limit to 'it's all in the mind' stuff that can be inflicted on audiences" (Daily Mirror). Variety thought the play was obscure and a "clinker." Guardian reported that the audience seemed bewildered by the play but found Edith Evans, Michael Bryant, Kenneth Williams were "splendid." Observer's extensive review explored the two parts of the play and its potential meaning in which the staging was an important, integral part.

Comment: The novel was adapted "with delicacy and faithfulness" (Spectator), although Tribune said it was an "impossible task." "Very much the play as James might have written it, and the result is every bit as tedious as Guy Domville" (Times). Illustrated London News thought the piece was too drawn out, unimaginative, and lifeless. "A slow, languid, genteely composed drama ... What we expect to happen, happens, with no surprises and little tension. We expect the words that are said, and though they are often said well ... they have a hollow tone" (Stage).

Comment: Flawless acting from Donald Wolfit, Flora Robson, and Margaret Rawlings (Spectator); Illustrated London News agreed. Guardian said the cast was strong but in some areas fell a little short. Observer thought that David Ross's production was "impressive in its slow, heavy seriousness, but unmoving," a view echoed in Variety's "heavy going." The production "misuses a fine company" (Times).

Comment: National Theatre Company. Guardian said there were somewhat unstylish performances from Maggie Smith and Robert Stephens, but a marvelous one from Laurence Olivier, on whose performance Illustrated London News elaborated extensively. Irish Times was much more laudatory, as was Observer which also commended highly René Allio's inventive sets. "William Gaskill's direction exemplifies the art of relating a classic to the modern world without distorting the original" (Times). The production remained in repertory until 5/12/64.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. This revival had lost some of its inventiveness and “high spirits” (Observer). Spectator called the direction “trickys-pixy” and it blotted out the play itself. Stage welcomed the “the bubbling spirit of it all being flecked with fantastical invention and silver-tongued mockery.” Variety commended the company’s “impeccable ensemble work.” “The company have acquired a glowing reputation for their ensemble playing and here they seem to be demonstrating it in the abstract with a series of advanced theatrical exercises” (Times).

The play, which received the Henry Foyle New Play Award 1963/64, was about the tension between tenants in a basement bedsit. Times said the plot was obvious but Kingston’s writing possessed fluency. “The theme is a bare statement that there are several kinds of truth, and that those who most extol truth are as likely to find themselves strangers to it as those less scrupulous” (Stage).

The productions were traditional and had nostalgic value, but Times opined a fresh approach would “infuse new life into the operettas.” “All the old audience enthusiasm is still there, with delight at the traditional Victorian intonations, gestures and trivial rhythmic steppings, and insatiable demands for the repetitive follies of the ‘never mind the why and wherefore’ trio” (Stage). “I sat in customary Gilbert and Sullivan bliss, emerging now and then to realise that I ought to be sternly critical" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The pantomime was a variation on the Cinderella story. Although rough round the edges, "the most intelligent and clever Christmas entertainment I have seen for many years" (Christian Science Monitor). Spectator was less impressed. "Too many private jokes, too much under-rehearsed rough-and-tumble, and a short-windedness of invention" (Times).

Reviews: Stage 2/1/64, 11; Times 18/12/63, 13. Comment: Times thought the one drawback to the play was that it was not "sinister enough." "Includes a great deal of scope for audience participation and provides enough opportunities for shouting and jumping about to satisfy even the liveliest child throughout what might otherwise have proved too long a show for the little ones" (Stage).

Comment: Spectator admired Sean Kenny's sets which made good use of the large Mermaid stage. "The success of Treasure Island still depends on the acting, the delivery of those ferocious lines which can strike pleasurable terror in a child's heart. Particularly, of course, those uttered by Long John Silver, whom Joss Ackland makes into a red-bearded ruffian of the most engaging sort" (Stage).

Comment: Guardian praised the production. New Statesman said "the play romps zestfully along, with plenty of nice, silly, handsomely costumed characters." The piece "has its moments of being beyond the comprehension of the youngest children. Older ones—and adults—find every moment enchanting and the humour a perfect combination of the subtle and the slap-stick" (Stage).

Comment: "A sort of poor man's Treasure Island [with] a small band of inane panto pirates" (New Statesman). "A curiously unsubtle pastiche on the buccaneer with the heart of gold," given "rather half-hearted acting and production" (Times). "The Christmas adventure up the Orinoco includes officers and seamen in the Royal Navy, pirates and cannibals, and makes demands which the company do not quite meet" (Stage).

Comment: National Theatre. John Dexter's production captured the play's warmth, with fine acting from Joan Plowright and Frank Finlay (Times). Guardian reported the production was "received with glee" on opening night. Observer said this triumphant production elevated the comedy to classic status alongside such works as The Way of the World, and The School for Scandal. Tribune was critical of both the play and the production. The play remained in the repertory until 10/7/65. The first New York production (Princess 2/11/15) ran for 135 performances.

Reviews: Stage 16/1/64, 15; Times 11/1/64, 5. Comment: Performed under the collective title Port and Lemon, of which a Victorian music-hall show was a part, and which Times described as "too much pastiche and too little art." "It has both charm and a sense of period in Isobel Shelley's production, with its clearly defined impression of a social order which is only disturbed by downright villainy" (Stage).

The complete trilogy was performed on opening day, and twice more during the run. Thereafter "the plays are given in a sequence of three performances on successive evenings" (Variety). Times Praised the trilogy "as a noble example of ensemble acting" and for restoring the work "to the understanding of modern audiences." Guardian commented on the stamina required to see the trilogy in a single day. However, Observer found the one-day marathon "surprisingly untiring." "The splendour of the [trilogy] is in its speed and surge. It thunders down upon us in a vast cataract. It causes us to realise, yet again, the futility of any academic discussion of Shakespeare that does not relate his plays to the theatre" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company Experimental Group. RSCA describes the programme thus: “Theatre of Cruelty was performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company Experimental Group at LAMDA Theatre Club, London, from 12 January–10 February 1964. A changing programme of works including The Spurt of Blood by Antonin Artaud, Typewriter, By Jove, Heathcliff and Spine by Paul Ableman, The Public Bath and The Guillotine by Peter Brook, Ars Longa Vita Brevis by John Arden, Scene by Alain Robbe-Grillet, and the Marowitz Hamlet.” Guardian said “here is avant garde in all its important therapeutic absurdity being kindly fostered,” and described one evening’s offerings which changed nightly. Observer said that at times the venture seemed too militant in demanding a particular kind of theatre. Tribune agreed and thought it was “dangerous and can lead to the divorcing of theatre finally from the people—the very opposite of the intention.” “As Charlotte Brontë wrote to her publisher in quite another context: ‘The strangest thing is that we are called upon to welcome this unutterable desolation as a state of pleasant freedom” (Illustrated London News). Charles Marowitz’s version of Hamlet (“The Marowitz Hamlet”) was performed on 12/1/64.

Comment: Times praised Michael Meyer’s new translation but found the acting somewhat uncertain and inhibited. Guardian said Trevor Howard’s performance was “memorable [and] held [the] audience in silent horror.” However, Spectator thought it was superficial and Joyce Redman was “an unhelpful Laura.” This is “one of those heavy, very theatrical plays which only magnificent acting can make believable. In Trevor Howard it had such an actor. He is excellent” (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Times valued the piece for its insider’s “fictional account of the fight for the Tory leadership.” Spectator called it a “forlorn attempt” to revive drawing-room comedy. “All the characters are eccentrics, none more so than the part of his Lordship’s mother, played delightfully by Sybil Thorndike ... a successful West End comedy because its policy is a sound one: make the customers laugh” (Daily Mirror). “Very poor. As a comedy it is banal and witless, as a farce it is tedious and without freshness of invention, as social comment it is terribly dated, and feeble, too” (Stage).

This new production possessed “nothing in the least iconoclastic” and so need not trouble “Savoyard traditionalists” (Times). “All the old familiar business is there—the fussy fan-manipulating, the little mincing and artificial movements, and a few fresh bits of fooling for Ko-Ko’s repeated entries ... But all goes well, smoothly and happily (Stage).

Comment: This one-woman show, performed by Margaret Webster, was “a family scrapbook made of poems, extracts from Mrs. Gaskell, letters to Ellen Nussey” and extracts from the novels (Times). “Webster is a sure summoner. She has merely to speak to fill the stage. Wisely she makes no attempt to look like a Brontë, but her imagination calls clearly to the imaginative” (Illustrated London News). “More distinguished for literary quality than dramatic impact” (Variety). Observer said the piece was calm and efficient. The New York production ran for two performances.

Comment: A “tawdry melodrama” featuring a post-war Hitler in a mental home given a “memorably bizarre” performance by Micheál MacLiammóir (Times). “The fact that all but one of the characters is mentally ill produces monotony rather than interest, especially as the characters, including Hitler, are dull” (Stage). “Anyone who thinks this is worthy of a West End theatre, wants his head examined” (Daily Mirror). Variety said the piece needed “hefty reworking” for it to be a success. Irish Times summarized the various, mixed critical responses.

Comment: This play about non-

Comment: National Theatre. A “grating, small-scale performance” from Tom Courtenay, but convincing acting from Robert Lang, Anthony Nicholls and Cyril Cusack (Times). Guardian found the acting unimpressive and the revolving set was unhelpful. Christian Science Monitor thought otherwise about the acting. “A fine play, finely directed and acted, with Tom Courtenay ... fulfilling all the promise of his early Vic seasons with a performance of extraordinary depth and power” (Stage).

19/2/64, 58. Comment: The play was about “a grammar school ‘guinea pig’ cast adrift among the Etonians” at the famous school (Times). “Hardly likely to reassure anxious mothers. The boys are violent, the masters weak, and the dialogue resolutely bright” (Christian Science Monitor). Variety decried the piece as “a trumpery stage piece” full of clichés. Tribune opined the novel would make a good movie but made a bad play.

Comment: The production lasted three and a half hours. “At the premiere the house was alert to the last, and the curtain fell upon one of the most spontaneous receptions I remember” (Illustrated London News). “As stage-craft, the play is the quintessence of Ibsenism” (Tribune). Guardian admired the “superb parts” and the acting of them by all the cast. Observer was “dazzled and fascinated” by the play, but not moved because of “the cruelty of the characters.” New Statesman dismissed the play as over-blown, as “fireworks, ranting and pathos,” but praised Alan Schneider’s direction and the cast’s performances. “The cast ... exploit every nuance of the writing” (Times). Variety predicted the production would be more successful than “the frivolous and escapist shows” in London. The New York production ran for 664 performances.

Reviews: Observer 16/2/64, 25; Tribune 14/2/64, 12; Stage 13/2/64, 14. Comment: The theatre was formerly the Hovenden located in Garrick Yard, St. Martin’s Lane. It had been refurbished. This was taxi-driver Levinson’s first play, about an idealistic schoolmaster, which Tribune described as “a riot-like a strip cartoon by Dickens.” Observer held an opposite opinion: “a quite exceptionally foolish piece.” “Although the fantasy is rarely airborne, the dialogue is lively, and the title-role is a fully realised character” (Stage).

Comment: Guardian reported the first-night audience seemed uncertain how to respond to the play although it enjoyed the “very authentic sound of the Dublin family bickering.” Irish Times provided a synthesis of the critics’ “puzzlement about the intentions of the author,” even though they praised the piece. Typical was Tribune’s reaction, that Leonard had not determined what kind of play he wanted to write. Times commended the performances of Norman Rodway and Marius Goring.

Comment: Tribune declared that the acting of Joan Greenwood, George Cole, Maurice Good and André Morell was ineffective. However, Variety said the revival was “serviceable” and “dependable,” although it failed to reach the standards of other post-war London productions. Both reviews noted the “individual vocal style” of Joan Greenwood, generally known as a comedienne. Times faulted the cast and the direction. Stage declared “Joan Greenwood is the most true and gripping Hedda I have seen since Sonia Dresdel made a sensation in the part” (at the Westminster 16/3/43; Wearing 43.42).

Comment: Guardian said the cast tackled the gallery of numerous characters with "skill and spirit." "A folksy, offbeat entertainment in which interest and yawns are intermittently opposed" (Variety). "The chief defect of the stage version is its failure to turn the interlocking material to dramatic account" (Times). The first New York production (Booth 29/9/63) ran for 111 performances.

Comment: "Gradually it emerges that the unspeakable crime in the eyes of the conventional world is to have put truth and the seeking after truth above the shibboleths of civilisation" (Stage). Stage also noted that the play had been prepared for radio broadcast which resulted in the presence of the superfluous narrator on stage.

Roose-Evans's direction was "flawless" and the cast "magnificent"; therefore, the descent into melodrama was caused by the play itself. "We had to endure a lot of balderdash about a well-off family living in Hobart Town in 1850 ... Porter's convoluted dialogue, obviousness, shallow dramatic trickery, and ponderous characterisation must be witnessed to be believed" (Stage). "Porter's play may have a melodramatic base. In the theatre it rises to something exceedingly impressive" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The play, previously a television play and a film, provided little opportunity for Brenda Bruce in the lead (Guardian). "Awful" (Tribune). "The triteness of the magazine-story plot defeats attempts to achieve gripping theatre" (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Tribune called the compilation "a mess," but said it was finely delivered. A "somewhat muddle-headed anthology of protest" that omitted "more explosive and unpopular manifestations," and so was futile (Times). "The programme has some good speaking by Clive Swift and Bryan Pringle, and a few moments that are genuinely affecting" (Illustrated London News).

RESIDENCE THEATRE 23/2/64. 1st perf thus. Cast: Stage 20/2/64, 8. Falstaff Ron Inglis; Prince Hal David Cole; Mistress Quickly Colette O'Neil; Justice Shallow Beaufoy Milton; Brenda Kampner, Alan Mason, Ray Roberts, Peter Newby, Peter Noel Cook, Alec Walks, Richard Wilding, Robert Aldous, Antony Higginson, Philip Voss, Jane Young. Stephen Rich, Peter Negus. Dir Nicholas Light; Dgn Spencer Chapman; Light Dudley Owen. Review: Stage 27/2/64, 13. Comment: "Falstaff's escapades are meant to contrast with the alarums and excursions of early fifteenth century English history, and to bring what is, after all, the sub-plot into the very centre of the stage is even more bold than giving us Hamlet without the prince" (Stage).

64.51 The House on the Cliff (C thriller) George Batson. INTIMATE 24/2/64. 1st perfd Leas Pavilion, Folkestone, 4/12/62. Comment: The piece "uses all the well-tryed suspense artifices—sliding bookcases, voices in the night and shots in the dark. The story revolves round Ellen Clayton's struggle to recover from paralysis after a car crash which killed her father" (Stage 13/12/62, 14).

64.52 Peter Pan; or, The Boy Who Wouldn't Grow Up (P) J. M. Barrie. WIMBLEDON 24/2/64. Plot: Bordman, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Geduld, 53–70, Griffiths, Hirschak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: Spectator said it was all too fake. "It may be in an old-fashioned setting and some of the jokes are certainly corny, but ... [it] is quite gusty, busty and bright entertainment. The show, one of the best-dressed in London, is an imaginative attempt to recapture the sparkle of entertainment in hansom cab days" (Daily Mirror), a view shared by Times.

Comment: Theatre Workshop. Guardian said the piece was peopled with caricatures, some funny scenes, and enthusiastic acting. Tribune entertained mixed feelings about this modern version of Dick Whittington, but said that ultimately it was a "true dramatic experience." "The whole thing cries out for music and salty lyrics" (Variety). Observer derived little pleasure from the piece apart from "a neat trio of parts taken by Barry Humphries." "Instead of portraits from life, we get a threadbare crew of stage clichés" (Times).

Comment: "Goonery without Milligan, indeed without any goons, deteriorates fast to British Rubbish and worse" (Spectator). Variety said the piece did not live up to Milligan's The Bed-Sitting Room (63.26). The material "is of unbelievably poor quality" (Observer). "The best place for inspired amateurism is the amateur theatre" (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company which was at the Queen's for a brief season while the Royal Court was being altered and decorated. Observer said that Tony Richardson's production was admirable and that the acting reached an "amazingly consistent ... high standard." "A cast which for brilliance can hardly be matched, even at the National Theatre itself" (Christian Science Monitor); and similarly Tribune. Illustrated London News praised all the cast apart from Ann Beach and Peter Finch. Tony Richardson's production was unsentimental, Vanessa Redgrave gave an outstanding performance; what was missing was "the elusive sense of the Chekhovian present" (Times).

64.68 The Good Woman of Setzuan (P, Prol, 14sc) Bertolt Brecht (anon trans of Der gute Mensch von Setzuan, 1943). UNITY 13/3/64. Patanne Fairfoot, Tom Vaughan, Mary Goddard. Comment: Guardian and Variety panned the show. "Glaringly illustrates the dangers of attempting to transform a classic into a piece of popular entertainment" (Times). The piece was "brash, blustering, and thoroughly inept, and kills the glorious comedy of the play. Surprise, the effect of situation and a comic sense of character relationship and idiosyncrasy are all badly managed" (Stage). "This new musical is well dressed, but poor in comic material. The cast, however, is excellent" (Daily Mirror). The first New York production (Martinique 10/11/61) ran for 141 performances.

Review: Stage 19/3/64, 13. Comment: A triangular relationship play. "What lifts this play way out of the banality class is not, of course, the theme, but the treatment and, in this fortunate case, Alexander Doré's inspired direction. Both dialogue and characterisation are beautifully done" (Stage). The play was adapted by Daniel May and performed in 1965 (65.254).

Comment: An author "lives out the incidents of his current novel on the life of Nero, and then finds the situations paralleled in his home in present-day Henley ... [the play] plods wearily through foreseeable incident after incident" (Stage). "A witless affair which doesn't rate even a minor run" (Variety). Times described the piece as amusingly bland and made no demands on the audience. Illustrated London News disliked both the play and the production.

64.81 The Cold Wind and the Warm (P) S. N. Behrman. 23/3/64, 6. Comment: Comédie-Française. World Theatre Season. Christian Science Monitor relished this "gay, light, fresh" production. Spectator thought the farce was underplayed, while Times said the production was an excellent example "of what comic acting ought to be," an opinion shared by Illustrated London News.

64.83 A Dash of Spirits (P, 3a) Robert Koesis. WYNDHAM'S 22/3/64.* 1 perf. Cast: Stage 26/3/64, 8; WWT/14. Margaret Anderson Jane Hilary; Allen Anderson Basil Hoskins; Mrs. La Salle Mollie Maureen; Sidney Lee Fox; Gilbert Geoffrey Hutchings; Millisandra Hy Hazell. Dir Maurice J. Stewart; Dec Michael Young. Reviews: Stage 26/3/64, 8; Times 23/3/64, 6. Comment: Repertory Players. Koesis failed to settle on what kind of haunted house play he was writing (Stage). This attempt at a Noël Cowardesque "sophisticated comedy thriller" disintegrated into something of a sentimental farce (Times).

64.84 The Windows of Heaven (C, 3a) Shimon Wincelberg (based on Rachmil Bryks, A Cat in the Ghetto, 1959). ICA 22/3/64. 1st perfd Royal Dramatic Theatre, Stockholm, 1962; 1st British perf. the double-bill was “linked by the fact that each piece is a treatment of the master-servant relationship. Neither Brecht nor Genet has ever warmed me to prolonged enthusiasm in the theatre”; however, the acting in both pieces was good.

64.87b The Maids (P, 1a) Jean Genet (anon trans of Les bonnes, 1947). LAMDA 24/3/64. Mary Morris, Ruth Meyers, Margaret Courtenay. Plot: Best/62, 170, Bordman/4, 387, Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem. Comment: Schiller Company of Berlin. World Theatre Season. Guardian compared this production with the National Theatre’s earlier in the season (64.26) and said the German one “virtually without qualification did full justice to the author.” Observer said the two productions were evenly matched, but in different areas. “Of the two productions, the British is much the more hysterically Teutonic” (Times). “More stark and chilling than our own, and the acting is quite different in style” (Stage).

64.90 No Time for Love (C) James Liggatt. INTIMATE 30/3/64.

64.91 Peter Pan; or, The Boy Who Wouldn’t Grow Up (P) J. M. Barrie. Reviews: Observer 29/3/64, 20; Stage 2/4/64, 11; Times 31/3/64, 13. Comment: Unicorn Theatre. “This is a traditional—even a familiar tale of a genie-in-a-bottle ... is, in fact, a cautionary tale against greed; but it has an unexpectedly amoral attitude towards industriousness” (Stage).

64.93 Where Angels Fear to Tread (D, 2a) Elizabeth Hart (adpt of E. M. Forster’s novel, 1905). RICHMOND 30/3/64. Comment: A two-week engagement.

Comment: Guardian said the play received “a mildly enthusiastic reception” on opening night. The piece tried “hard to be a riot of fun” but failed (Observer). “Should have been comic. But pathetic dialogue and flabby direction make it a frustrating evening” (Daily Mirror). “A severe disappointment” (Christian Science Monitor). Times said the cast did what it could with the “ungrateful parts.” The first New York production (Longacre 11/10/61) ran for 21 performances.

Comment: Schiller Theatre Company of Berlin. World Theatre Season. Christian Science Monitor observed "many people, including Germans, do not hesitate to dismiss Clavigo as absurd. They think it romantic, flamboyant, stagey ... [but] the young Spanish writer Clavigo [is] of absorbing interest." Times thought the play had more than "curiosity appeal," and Klaus Klammer invested Clavigo "with a mercurial comedy."

Comment: Tribune opined the play had nothing new to say about human identity. "No clear-cut message emerges, unless it be that war is terrible and man ruthlessly cruel" (Stage). "A sorry little parable, a silly and tendentious morality tale limping along in the shadow of Brecht" (Times). The New York production ran for 16 performances.

Comment: Peppino de Filippo's Italian Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. "A cheerful Italian farce in the commedia dell' arte manner ... Peppino de Filippo, who leads his Neapolitan company, would be an ingratiating comedian anywhere" (Illustrated London News). Spectator said the production came alive in the second half. Observer said the piece was essentially a harlequinade. A "modest little piece of traditional farce" (Times).

Comment: National Theatre. Produced "brilliantly" by George Devine, with tour de force performances the cast (Guardian). Observer discussed how Beckett's pieces would be reduced more and more until the result was "Beckett himself in a sealed box" [prophetically true; see the thirty second long Breath, 1969]. The piece at hand "would be just as effective with tape-recorders in the urns." The first New York production (Cherry Lane 4/1/64) ran for 89 performances.

Comment: Spectator appreciated Pinero's theatrical skills, Observer didn't. Guardian faulted the production for not making more of the farce; however, Nigel Patrick gave a "magnificent performance" of Vere Queckett. "A skilful play, and the second act found me, and many others, weeping with laughter" (Tribune). Illustrated London News was among those laughing heartily, and noted the production made no attempt to send up the piece. Times said Pinero's plays "are relished for their continued theatrical vitality, and not as passports to the lost world of Victorian jollity."

Comment: The piece employed some material from revues performed in South Africa in 1962 (see Stage 1/2/62, 14). Tribune was troubled by the South African cast's obsession with race. Variety said the material was uneven and noted the cast wore different hats to indicate the race of the persons they were portraying. Times approved the production generally and opined it did not exhibit signs of South African political censorship.

64.107 Come Blow Your Horn (C, 3a) Neil Simon. INTIMATE 13/4/64. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/4, 374, Bronner, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Loney, MacNicholas, Salem.

Review: Stage 16/4/64, 15. Comment: David S. Boliver demonstrated “the truth of the time-honoured maxim that no actor can direct himself” (Stage).

Review: Stage 16/4/64, 13. Comment: The “plot, a mildly promising one, suggests fantasy, the action suggests farce and the pseudo-naturalism of the dialogue suggests nothing but boredom, which prevailed” (Stage).

64.111 The Subtopians (C, 3a) Terence Frisby. ARTS 14/4/64. 1st perfd Guildford 26/3/62. Comment: A well-observed “peek at suburban life ... with accurately drawn characters,” and good dialogue, though somewhat repetitive”; good performances from Bill Fraser and Betty Baskcomb (Variety). “Probably a better play than the over-emphatic dialogue and stagey quarrels let us see” (Tribune). Times indicated the play was now “tauter” than at Guildford, and Frisby's direction of his own work was like “chamber music.”

64.112 Beyond the Fringe (Revue) Alan Bennett and Peter Cook and Jonathan Miller and Dudley Moore (mus). MAY FAIR 15/4/64. 1,016 perf. Sam Hutt, Michael Latimer, Jean Benedetti, Anthony Paul. Dir David Phethean. Plot: Bull/3, French/2, Law, OTF/2, Salem, Vinson. Review: Stage 23/4/64, 17. Comment: Revised edition. “Some new material keeps the show highly topical, but the older items remain as potent as ever” (Stage).

64.113 Yerma (T, 3a) Federico García Lorca (trans Margery Withers of Lorca's play, 1934). TOWER, CANONBURY, 17/4/64. Cast: TTC. Plot: Gassner, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Shank, Shipley.

Comment: Dublin Abbey Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. Irish Times said the "audience was attentive, polite, and respectful, rather than spontaneously enthusiastic." Guardian said the production was no more than capable. Daily Mirror thought the cast did make the characters "believable, funny and sad." However, Christian Science Monitor criticized the cast for being "too conscious of the humour of their jokes," and there was no "deep sense of tragedy." Spectator said this and The Plough and the Stars (64.124) were performed "as dutiful revivals ... an awful mustiness hangs in the air." The first New York production (Mayfair 15/3/26) ran for 74 performances.

Comment: National Theatre. NTA incorrectly gives opening night as 23/4/64. A special charity matinée given on 22/6/64 for the Actors' Charitable Trust. The famous Laurence Olivier performance of Othello widely praised by reviewers; Observer's headline, "A Moor for all time," was typical. Opening night "brought what must have been the most roaring applause, expressed in decibels, that a Shakespearian performance has known in our day. For many years I have listened to cheering in the theatre; only three nights have ever come within measurable distance of the salute to Olivier. At the end many were on their feet, applauding" (Illustrated London News). However, Stage was disappointed by Olivier, and said the production was "among the least impressive." Frank Finlay "was no study of cunning, black hearted villainy. Instead, with his jerky mannerisms Finlay reminded me of Norman Vaughan" (Daily Mirror). The production was kept in the repertory until 4/2/1967.

64.119 Belladonna (MP) Dennis Whittingstall. ESTONIAN 22/4/64.* Review: Stage 30/4/64, 14. Comment: Campaigners Company. Set in a brothel, the musical, directed by Russ Logan, was outdated while attempting to be modern (Stage).

Review: Stage 30/4/64, 15. Comment: Shakespeare for Schools. Performed by the Ipswich Arts Theatre Co. “A commendably lively account ... made wondrously magic by Strand Electric. The imaginative lighting created transformations, disappearances and colour changes which were of great help to the fairies” (Stage).

64.121 Twelfth Night; or, What You Will (C) William Shakespeare. INTERVAL 26/4/64. 1 perf. Review: Stage 30/4/64, 14. Comment: The last performance at the Interval’s premises in Dean Street. “A highly appreciative full house”; “Roger Williams directed his cast most ably on the marionette-size stage, and played Sir Toby with a wicked eye and a saucy grin ... Penelope Allen was a pleasing Viola” (Stage).

Comment: Something of a lawyer's thriller loosely connected to the nineteenth-century Sir Roger Tichborne case (Spectator). Observer said Robin Maugham should have made the piece either completely fictional or genuinely historical, a sentiment echoed in part by Tribune. Times thought Maugham had made a good story out of his material and that it "demands intelligent consideration."

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company Experimental Group. This production staged only 12 of the play's 17 scenes. Spectator said it was the direction by Peter Brook and Charles Marowitz which turned the piece "into a dramatic experience." "To appreciate it fully, the audience would need almost as much rehearsal as the cast. Seeing it but once, one is more conscious of the amount which has eluded one than of the amount absorbed" (Stage). Illustrated London News praised the direction but held the play in extremely low esteem.

Comment: Polish Contemporary Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. The play involved a moneylender who has bought up a rake's annuity and whom he must keep alive. Tribune was reminded favorably of Balzac's characters, but was irritated by the translation provided from loudspeakers. Observer found the language problem "insuperable" because of the appalling translation.

Comment: Observer (10/5) compared the wit to Wilde's and praised the excellent cast. Christian Science Monitor acknowledged Orton's talent but appeared mostly "aghast." Tribune also praised Orton's talent but faulted the play for making the characters' motives too obvious. "It was the language that made the night" (New Statesman). Times (7/5) found the play somewhat obscure but said it possessed "sufficient natural theatricality." Stage (14/5) called Orton "one of the most honest writers I have ever come across, particularly in the theatre, where compromise is commonplace"; the play possessed "sharp wit, dialogue that is not only vigorous and compelling but also highly illuminating; exact, penetrating characterisation, and a technique with a wild freshness, yet firmly and clearly managed." Illustrated London News described the work as "a play that for me begins in falsity and never emerges," and reviewed the production negatively. See also Lloyd Evans, 124–25. The first New York production (Lyceum 12/10/65) ran for 13 performances; Dudley Sutton repeated his role as Sloane.

Comment: Greek Art Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. This production had won the 1962 Paris Festival Award. "Aristophanes' comical irreverence comes across with a contemporary flavour, but without betraying the author" (Irish Times). Spectator was equally enthusiastic, particularly so far as the chorus was concerned. "The efforts at modernisation are less happy; amplified music may pass muster, but I jib at amplified singing with the cast 'miming to a record'" (Tribune). "The perfect tourist entertainment—a Grecian pantomime ... played in vein of high-pressure knockabout" (Times).

Comment: Several reviewers compared the play with John van Druten's Young Woodley. "A mechanical narrative at the expense of character and dramatic development" (Spectator). Tribune thought Bowen had managed to inject new life into a well-worn plot (involving an affair between a schoolmaster's wife and a student), particularly by means of crisp dialogue and the portrayal of emotional demands.

Variety called the play perceptive but in need of revision in order to be a success; the dialogue was "rather literary," Wendy Craig gave a fine performance as the wife.

Comment: A “clever, nervy little pair of plays” (Guardian). Although critical of the plays, Tribune praised “the best of American acting.” Spectator said The Tiger was just a curtain raiser that unfortunately raised the curtain on The Typists. Variety predicted only a “moderate run” for these “slender” plays.

Comment: Confusion and romantic involvements occur when two couples named Smith share a houseboat for a holiday (Stage 4/6/64, 12). On opening night at the Wimbledon 200 local people named Smith were given free seats (Daily Herald 16/6/64, 7).

For Observer “the pity is not how it was done but that it was done.” Christian Science Monitor said that Maggie Smith’s “unconventionally humorous Hilde Wangel” was “an immense relief from the customary Ibsenite solemnities.” “So far as its sets are concerned, one has no quarrel with the production” (Times). Illustrated London News praised all the cast apart from Maggie Smith who was unsuited to Hilde. The production remained in repertory until 9/7/65; however, see also 64.363 for reviews of the production with cast changes.

Comment: English Stage Company. A charity preview for the Unity Theatre given on 10/6/64. The play was written in 1929/30, published in 1931, and given a radio performance in 1932 (Berlin). The first stage performance was in Hamburg in 1959. Observer noted that, unsurprisingly, the piece had dated, but that Siobhan McKenna's Joan was "infinitely better" than her "far too romantic performance" in Dublin in 1961. Christian Science Monitor described her performance as "superbly touching," while Tribune praised her "blazing sincerity and sublimely simple humanity." McKenna "is indeed a heroine and a saint ... Lionel Stander, the American actor making his London debut, is excellent as Mauler" (Stage).

Comment: "A very bad play ... a hotch potch of fortune telling, voodooism, and ancient superstitions" (Guardian). "Wolfe thinks and writes on a glossy magazine level, and then not at all brilliantly. Her play is laboured and sadly deficient in an atmosphere of the sinister and strange, on which any effective result must depend" (Stage). Variety reported the new American management had spent $50,000 giving the theatre a face-lift and $30,000 on the production of this failure. Times reported the gallery reacted strongly to this disastrous production.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety criticized Pinter's direction, but praised "outstanding performances" by Brewster Mason and Patrick Magee. Observer agreed that Pinter should not direct his own work. "The play, if it can be called that, remains a piece of arty-crafty nonsense—beautifully-acted nonsense last night by Brewster Mason, Doris Hare and Patrick Magee" (Daily Mirror). "It is surely impossible not to feel that The Birthday Party is a rattling good play" (Tribune). Times thought this production made "the play seem slicker and less dangerous" than earlier iterations. The first New York production (Booth 3/10/67) ran for 126 performances.

Reviews: Middlesex County Times 4/7/64, 15; Stage 25/6/64, 15. Comment: "This play, which made a good impression at the Royal Court, has an even greater impact in the round, despite the sad fact that the forestage of this fine new theatre has developed some disturbing creaks and not all of the cast could manage to be audible to those sitting behind them at any given moment" (Stage).

"Abse has endeavoured to show the power lust of an effete General, the sadism of an ineffectual Captain, the obtuseness of a corporal and a soldier engaged in fighting off a barely-felt sense of guilt, and the nobility of oppressed people in an occupied country. The result of this mixture of admirable ingredients is surfeit and emotional indigestion" (Stage).

Comment: A charity preview was given on 23/6/64 in aid of the Yvonne Arnaud Theatre, Guildford. The piece proved "there is a market for polished, epigrammatic, drawing-room comedy as light entertainment" (Variety); Illustrated London News agreed wholeheartedly and extensively. Guardian also agreed, but only so far as the opening scenes were concerned; the remainder became embarrassing. Christian Science Monitor opined the plot could have been devised by "an underfed computer," but recognized the play's superficial attributes would go down well with its audience.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian praised John Bury's "splendid setting," and noted "the audience listened closely but showed no marked reaction." The play is "a maddening tangle of effectiveness and ineptitude," the cast tended to overact (New Statesman). Spectator compared the production to medieval "apocalyptic drawings," "an allegorical ride of Man, Life and Death." Variety provided a comprehensive and clear description of all the elements of the production but still concluded it "remains a puzzling collector's piece." Illustrated London News described it as "protracted Grand Guignol. If we take it in that way, acknowledging the responsively inventive production of Clifford Williams and the performances of all concerned—especially of Patrick Magee, pathetic, bragging, doomed—it can be an efficiently sinister evening in the theatre.”

Comment: American Evan Hunter flew to England to attend rehearsals and the Birmingham premiere. He was better known for The Blackboard Jungle, as novel and film. Variety doubted whether “the adolescent behavior of American highschool kids” would appeal to West End audiences. “Protracted, facetious and slackly written” (Guardian). A “smug essay on the adolescent mating urge” (Times). However, New Statesman could not understand why the play had “enraged” other reviewers.

Comment: Phoenix Theatre Company, Leicester. New Statesman left the performance at the interval because he had seen better productions of Marlowe and could count on seeing more, which he could not do ten years earlier. Guardian vented its spleen on Marlowe's "wretchedly disorganised play." Tribune was more favorably disposed towards Marlowe's "great play," and in particular enjoyed Anthony Hopkins as Lancaster. Times noted the cast performed "with a high-speed virility" in physically difficult conditions.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Performed under the title Expeditions One, a collection of very short plays. Guardian expressed cynical views about why these brief pieces had been staged. "It would be hard to pretend that I found anything experimental" in these pieces (Spectator). Times supported the idea of producing short pieces but faulted this particular collection. New Statesman dubbed them "fairly infertile tracts of 'unexplored theatre.'"

Comment: The plot was "inspired" by Rudolf Nureyev's defection to the West. "Trousers fall, doors slam and the cast chase about upstairs and up chimneys to the constant roar of laughter. It's a lot of ballet nonsense, beautifully done. Giving their accepted slick, polished performances are Brian Rix, Basil Lord, Larry Noble and Leo Franklyn" (Daily Mirror). "Truly repulsive" (Observer). "Certainly a more sophisticated joke than the previous Whitehall shows, but it preserves their basic components" (Times).

Comment: New Shakespeare Company. “An ensemble production, excellently acted” (Spectator). Stage declared that Henry Bardon’s settings were the “most effective” ever seen at the Open Air.

64.233 The Hands of Eurydice (One-man P) Pedro Bloch [trans William Newman and Gonzalo Gomez of As mãos de Eurídice, 1951]. ARTS 16/7/64. Plot: Hochman. Reviews: Daily Mirror 22/7/64, 11; Times 21/7/64, 7. Comment: Performed by Alvaro Fontana as Domingo Tavares. “A sort of spiritual strip-tease” and initially the audience was embarrassed and giggled nervously, but Domingo Tavares “finally established superb informal contact with his public.” (Times). Daily Mirror reported performances had been very poorly attended.

Comment: Variety declared the play, in which a murder is not committed, didn’t stand a chance of success. “This squalid little thriller” was apparently produced “to plug a gap between bookings” (Times). Stage said it was good in parts but overall a failure.

64.235 Charley’s Aunt (FC, 3a) Brandon Thomas. WIMBLEDON 20/7/64. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/2, 354–55, Fletcher, French/2, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley. Comment: The cast included Jimmy Thompson.

Comment: Strangely directed by David William as a comedy of pathos, with a weak cast (Guardian). Observer entertained a completely opposing view, while Christian Science Monitor steered a middle course. The play “is really the basic Puddle Dock show with a natural part for Bernard Miles” (Simon Eyre); however, Miles “has no hand in the production” (Times). William “has done nothing to blur the piece, though he has looked with an amusingly fresh eye at such a figure as the Artful Dodger. The spacious Blackfriars stage is right for a comedy of this gusto: the cast, led by John Woodvine, gets the text across with a quick enthusiasm” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The original title was Don't Ask Me, Ask Dad (64.214). A successful version of a Whitehall farce (Observer). Times (5/8) said there was little to recommend in the piece apart from Disley Jones's set. Variety thought the music was "indifferent," but conjectured that the Brian Rix co-produced piece would attract out-of-towners and provincial audiences.

Comment: “A delightful fantastical comedy-satire in which mime and sound are deployed to an extraordinarily successful degree, the hero himself, Mr. Whatnot, speaking not a word but conveying volumes as he dances, prances, darts and insinuates his way in and out of the great ancestral home of the Slingsby-Cradock family” (Stage). A painful “elongated revue sketch” (Observer). “Lightweight entertainment, but goes down nicely on a hot August night” (Tribune). Variety praised the lighting and sound effects on which the piece relied extensively. Times described the piece as a collection of unrelated “cheerful ideas.”

Comment: National Youth Theatre. “A gamble in playing Coriolanus not in togas against a Roman background but in military uniforms of the first World War period. The result ... while not a tremendous success, gives a face-lift to [the] play” (Daily Mirror). “The production is vigorous and vivid for the most part. There is a swinging pace and plenty of excitement generated by the eager crowds of youths who form the mob and the rank and file soldiers” (Stage). Tribune found much to like in the production, but John Nightingale was inadequate. Observer said Nightgale was “good in his quieter scenes.”

"Word, mime and songs are cunningly interwoven so that the whole bare stage ... is constantly alight with movement." Observer agreed: "the action scenes are, I think, the most theatrically exciting that I have ever seen." "A brilliant theatrical tour de force in which character and personal action dominate rather than the basic content of intellectual debate" (Stage). Spectator was amazed by Patrick Magee's performance, and declared the production "unforgettable." Comment: "Mere fooling at its casual, relaxed best" (Times). "The show is well staged, with a complicated lighting plot that plays its own part by gaining some laughs of its own and, once the padded earlier part is over, offers some real comedy in music" (Stage). The first New York production (John Golden 2/10/53) ran for 849 performances.

"A disappointingly pedestrian affair" (Tribune). "It was near enchantment all the way. The production by Paul Hill is extremely lucid and fast moving and although the running time, including one interval, is just over two hours, not a word is lost. The speaking of these young actors is very good indeed" (Stage).

Comment: The play was "about young people running a riding school after the accidental passing of their mother," and emphasized the importance of religion providing hope (Christian Science Monitor). Spectator faulted the dialogue and plot development. "A conglomeration of ideas any one of which might have made a good play" (Tribune). Times saw some merit and faults in the piece.

Comment: Living Theatre Company of New York. The Company's policy was to interchange roles nightly. Christian Science Monitor noted that some repetitious parts of the play were booed by the audience but eventually applauded warmly. Spectator watched with "rather bored fascination." Tribune was troubled by the current predilection for violence in the theatre, but praised the "brilliant skill" of the production. Times noted that the cast played "with a casually perfect naturalism that denies prominence to anyone in particular." The New York production ran for 239 performances.

Comment: "One of those cosy murder mysteries that centre around two women and one man ... plodding dialogue ... average drama with a neat twist ending" (Daily Mirror). "Moderately dull," and "well acted by Paula Byrne and Eric Lander" (Guardian). Variety said the piece failed in virtually every way and was combined with "wooden direction and largely indifferent acting."

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian said Nicol Williamson performed "magnificently, with a steady modulation from bravado into despair," a view echoed by Christian Science Monitor, Spectator and others. "Osborne seems alone among current British playwrights in being able to create heroes of our own time" (Times). Given that Look Back in Anger at the Court in 1956 had launched Osborne's career, Variety thought it was appropriate that an Osborne play should reopen the theatre after its recent renovation. The first New York production (Belasco 30/11/65) ran for 166 performances in which Nicol Williamson played Bill Maitland.

The play concerned capital punishment. Times said the two plays contained an "unaccustomed seriousness" not usual in Home's plays. "Home can be ardent, and he can be witty. His players, Mary Kerridge and Griffith Jones, have comparable gifts, but the evening does not really belong to the 'tents of thought' or the 'dazzling place of play'" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The play dealt with a family gathering at Christmas and little more. Times said the play possessed "a certain slow charm," but lacked a "strong narrative drive," and ultimately was boring. "Practically everything rests on the beautifully-planned performances of Dame Sybil, Miss Ffrangcon-Davies, and Mr. Rogers, and for these—if not for much else—the night is worthwhile" (Illustrated London News). Variety thought that the box-office appeal of Sybil Thorndike, Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies and Paul Rogers might result in success; it didn't.

Comment: Stage Sixty. Observer called the play a "tendentious parable about power, freedom and identity ... [not] helped here by clockwork-slow production and inefficient gloom." Variety also thought the production never came alive, and added the proposed repertoire of the new management probably would not appeal to the local audiences previously brought in by the now-departed Joan Littlewood. Times said the play lacked "a sense of inevitability," although German audiences might get more out of it because of their familiarity with the Count Öderland legend.

It scores on almost every count: on the book, on the lyrics and music, on the sets and on the performances” (Spectator). “A cinch for a long and profitable run” (Variety 7/10). Times (23/2) commended the performance of Georgia Brown when she took over the lead from Rachel Roberts.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian said the play “is broken-backed” and the direction did nothing to fix that problem. Agreeing, Spectator said that Clifford Williams had reduced “the Jew’s stature almost to the level of everyone else,” which resulted in a “ludicrous play.” However, Variety opined that “Williams’ boisterous direction” saved the play from disaster. Illustrated London News reluctantly accepted that perhaps Williams’ broad treatment was the best way to make sense of the play. Times provided examples of laughter-inducing lines during the performance.

Comment: The play was about a man who confines himself to bed because he sees no reason to get up. “As Oblomov, Spike Milligan gave an astounding exhibition. Now and again, when he kept within hailing distance of the author’s lines, he moved the audience to emotions of sympathy and liking” (Christian Science Monitor). “This tired play was enough to send a chronic insomniac to sleep. Occasionally, shafts of pure goonery—when Spike departed from the script—shone through, but my main feeling was one of wonderment at the waste of so much talent” (Daily Mirror). Variety described Milligan in the lead as “gimmick casting,” and disapproved of other aspects of the production.

Comment: National Theatre. Variety found the production disappointing: "There is neither enough vigor nor subtlety in the direction; the sets are no more than serviceable and the acting is variable in quality." "Billie Whitelaw gives a strangely muted playing of a strumpet. It should have been overblown. Joyce Redman gives a nice tongue-in-cheek performance as a lady of ready wit, and there is some good deadpan acting from Sheila Reid" (Daily Mirror). Spectator dubbed the piece "a harmless domestic comedy," but did not know why the National had staged it. Times said the direction failed to answer the question of whether the play was "a serious study of reason overthrown by lust."

Comment: While the play appears to be very conventional, the plot "actually and rightly held the whole theatre" (Spectator). Stage was delighted to see Kathleen Harrison again playing Mrs. Watty as she had done in the 1938 premiere (Wearing 38.254). James Roose-Evans's "loving revival" and "Pauline Jameson, Kathleen Harrison, and Brook Williams (Emlyn's son) are so right and engaging" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Variety dubbed this a “bewildering and pretentious” “Freudian fantasy.” Guardian thought the piece worked on a “psychological plane” in demonstrating thoroughly that George, the central male character, is “a frightened little man.” A “facile box of tricks ... mere laughing gas” (Times).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety averred the play would have little chance in a commercial theatre, but its chances improved at the Aldwych with Peter Hall as director. Observer was not surprised that this “first anarchistic farce” was booed by the gallery. Christian Science Monitor presented a clear exposition of the play and praised Peter Hall, and the performances by David Warner, Nicholas Selby, and Donald Sinden. “A startling and thoroughly successful piece of theatre” (Spectator). Times said that, like other plays by Livings, the play suffered from “shapelessness and hit-or-miss effects.” Stage opined the play “fits into no recognisable category, not even farce, although it contains some of the mechanics of the genre,” and dubbed it an “anarchic fantasy.” See also Lloyd Evans, 129–30. The first New York production (Circle in the Square Downtown 16/10/66) ran for 233 performances (with Dustin Hoffman as Brose).

Comment: On 2/11/64 a charity preview was given in aid of the St. John Ambulance Brigade. The musical was generally panned. "Very bad it is, too. The gay, witty atmosphere of the original play has vanished: instead there is crude parody of Elvira's visitation from the realm of ectoplasm in order to torment her husband Charles and his new wife, Ruth" (Stage). Times reported "the show ... has Mr. Coward's blessing." Illustrated London News, while acknowledging that the book could have been better (especially if Coward had done it), noted "the great majority of the first-night house cheered it, and did so spontaneously. It cheered in particular Cicely Courtneidge's notion of Madame Arcati." The first New York production (Alvin 7/4/64) ran for 375 performances.

Comment: “A coarse-grained and flabby specimen of ... boulevard light comedy about the wife chumming up with the mistress and the husband being led home again” (Guardian); Daily Mirror agreed. “The name bait” of Margaret and Julia Lockwood in the leads “is the show’s main asset” (Variety). “Plays of this kind perish as soon as they are uprooted from the boulevard” (Times). “A slow, obvious, rather shoddy little piece. Perhaps this appears so mainly because the French contrive these things so much better than the English” (Stage).

Comment: Spectator singled out “the towering performance of Vladek Sheybal as He.” Tribune agreed but thought the performances of the remainder of the cast were uneven and, unfortunately somewhat competitive. Birmingham Post thought “Andreyev’s inner symbolism” was downplayed; “The to-and-fro of the circus green room can be itself a satisfaction, and James Roose-Evans has treated a director’s play like the master he is.”

Comment: "The story of the American Negro, from the first cruel shipments from Africa up to his present semi-freedom. All the material is authentic; there are evasive speeches from past Presidents, letters between slave and master, reports of lynchings and a moving account of the first attempt at integration at Little Rock High School ... put across simply and factually" (Daily Mirror). Spectator faulted the piece for being a poor version of a television documentary. Stage said the piece "has an emotional impact which is overwhelming. So overwhelming is it that it can hardly be classed as theatre at all." The New York production ran for 493 performances.

Comment: The production ran for only 36 performances at the Vaudeville. The cast offered to work for a week without pay, but Equity prevented the action (Daily Mirror 22/2/65, 3). Variety (25/11) thought that as "a novelty" the piece might attract a London audience; it noted the extensive performances of the play and the musical in America. Of the Vaudeville transfer, now presented by Jim Dale, Variety (10/2) noted "As it is no longer played straight, the production is now largely dependent on audience participation" which was lukewarm. New Statesman discussed the current prevalence of old-time music hall around London and this piece's connections. Stage said the piece should be "regarded as a social phenomenon rather than as a piece of good theatre, for that it certainly is not. However, it is decidedly good fun, a genuine slice of Victorian uplift with the kind of moral at which it is unfortunately all too easy to laugh today."

64.362 The Master Builder (D) Henrik Ibsen (adpt Emlyn Williams of Bygmester Solness, 1893). OLD VIC 17/11/64.  Cast: Stage 19/11/64, 13; WWT/14. Ragnar Brovik Edward Hardwicke; Kaja Fosli Jeanne Hepple; Knut Brovik Edward Caddick; Halvard Solness Laurence Olivier; Aline Celia Johnson; Doctor Herdal Peter Cellier; Hilde Wangel Maggie Smith; Foreman Ron Pember; Friends Janie Booth, Elizabeth Burger, Terence Knapp, Sheila Reid, Maggie Riley, Christopher Timothy. Dir Peter Wood; Dec Rudolf Heinrich; Light Brian Free-land; Assist dir Sunny Amey; Sm Neville Pearson. Plot: Bryan, Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: National Theatre. A revival of the company's earlier production (64.182) with cast changes; in particular, Laurence Olivier replaced Michael Redgrave as Solness. Olivier "has now created a Solness to whom one can respond directly" (Times). Illustrated London News praised Olivier, noted Maggie Smith was now a much improved Hilde, and Celia Johnson was very moving.

64.363 Little Me (MC, 2a) Neil Simon (bk; based on Patrick Dennis's novel, 1961) and Cy Coleman (mus) and Carolyn Leigh (lyr). Comment: Christian Science Monitor reported this anglicized version was a “resounding” success. Observer was unimpressed, but commented on the attraction of Bruce Forsyth playing seven different roles. Illustrated London News said Forsyth “gives a confident, bang-it-over performance, agile and glib, but seldom rising above a useful charade level: a pity, for this is where one needs a comedian of blazing originality.” Variety was impressed by Forsyth, and declared the piece “easily the best musical to come from Broadway for some time.” “The most obvious virtue of the show is that it all hangs together” (Times). The first New York production (Lunt-Fontanne 17/11/62) ran for 257 performances.

64.364 It's a Drag Game (Mus) Dennis Whittingstall (bk, mus, lyr). ESTONIAN 19/11/64.* Review: Stage 26/11/64, 13. Comment: New Kensington Drama Group. “A bad musical, messy, derivative, flat. Yet it is still the work of some one with a feeling for the theatre” (Stage).

64.365 Brush with a Body (C thriller, 3a) Maurice McLoughlin. INTIMATE 23/11/64.

64.366 Marlene Dietrich (One-woman show). QUEEN'S 23/11/64. Cast: WWT/14. Marlene Dietrich. Dir, Mus arr Burt Bacharach. Comment: Dietrich “is one of the theatre’s most startling, exciting phenomena, and who could ask for anything more?” (Times). “People discuss personality: a vague enough term. Marlene Dietrich’s is a dazzle as if she has been using a hand-mirror to flash the light into our eyes. Sometimes in the theatre it is pleasant to surrender absolutely” (Illustrated London News).

64.367 The Balance (P) Stephen Lynn. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 24/11/64.* Cast: Stage 3/12/64, 25. Review: Stage 3/12/64, 25. Comment: Stage thought the play presented arguments for revising the law on abortion too melodramatically.

64.368 Birds, Marriages and Deaths (Revue) Roger McGough and John Gorman and Michael McGear. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 25/11/64. 1st perfd Edinburgh Festival 1964. Cast: Stage 3/12/64, 7. Reviews: Observer 22/11/64, 23; Stage 3/12/64, 7. Comment: The Scaffold (i.e. also the authors of the piece). “Their satire is largely unpolitical, untopical, and deals with ordinary life, ‘the patterns of the city’” (Observer).

64.369 Julius Caesar (T, 2a) William Shakespeare. Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian called it “quite good plain Shakespeare,” but the mechanics of the production were exposed. Spectator thought Lindsay Anderson over-emphasized contemporary parallels, and the cast was uneven. “It certainly is the most sub-standard treatment of Shakespeare since—what?” (Tribune). Times had reservations but maintained it was an important production “with its own poetry and its own statements on tyranny.” “A sadly disappointing revival” (Illustrated London News).

64.370 Night Was Our Friend (Mystery thriller, 2a) Michael Pertwee. INTIMATE 30/11/64. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Windsor, 30/5/49. Comment: The thriller involved a woman put on trial for the murder of her husband which she did not commit.

64.371 Rope (Thriller, 3a) Patrick Hamilton (suggested by Thomas De Quincey). RICHMOND 30/11/64. 1st perfd Strand 3/3/29. Plot: Best/29, 399, Bordman/3, 389, Fletcher, French, French/2, Gunn, Hirschak, Kabatchnik/2, Salem. Review: Stage 3/12/64, 24. Comment: A two-week engagement. The first New York production, as Rope's End (Masque 19/9/29), ran for 100 performances.

Comment: A “revised version” of Oblomov (64.317). Guardian reported the earlier version was now “guyed sky high for easy laughs,” and could only “endure” half of the production. “Helplessly funny and the most liberating theatrical experience in London” (Observer). “An hilarious hotch potch of free association, extravagant visual goonery and brusque (if hardly Brechtian) alienation” (Times).

64.373 Chaganog (Revue, 2pt) Julian Chagrin (deviser) and George Ogilvie (deviser) and Neville McGrah and Malcolm Sircom and Duke Ellington and Joseph Ascher and David Climie and Neville Phillips and Dennis Wilson and Dave Brubeck and Ian McPherson and Vivian Ellis and Frank Horrox and Don Lawson and Michael Charnley and Paul Desmond and Dizzy Gillespie. Comment: Variety said a few items were “witty and charming,” but most were below par. “Trivial, sub-talented, marshmallow entertainment” (Spectator). Times (4/12) thought Chagrin and Ogilvie had “allotted far too much space to their own comic mimes.” Illustrated London News (26/12) reported that the audience received the production “with delight.”

64.374 Tamburlaine the Great (T) Christopher Marlowe (adpt Robert Pennant Jones). TOWER, CANONBURY, 4/12/64. 1st perfd c. 1587. Cast: TTC. Plot: Fletcher, Hochman, Holzknecht, Law, Patterson, Salem, Shipley. Reviews: Spectator 11/12/64, 813–14; Stage 10/12/64, 14. Comment: Both parts were performed in an abridged version that ran for about three hours. Spectator discussed the merits of the complete, two-part, version, and found this production lacking. Stage commended “David Rowe-Beddoe [for] making Tamburlaine extremely credible and Ann Ives [for] making a beautiful and restrained Zenocrate.”

64.375 The Other Palace; or, The Virtue of Happiness (P, 3a) Rodney Ackland. QUESTORS 5/12/64.* Cast: QTA. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 11/12/64, 12; Stage 10/12/64, 13. Comment: “Ackland writes with conviction and strength. The play has wit and comedy, dramatic tension and an absorbing atmosphere. It belongs to no current trend of thought, feeling or approach; it is only conventional technically. It is something only Mr. Ackland could have written, out of his past and from a present knowledge clearly born of suffering and prolonged consideration of the questions, doubts and dreams he examines so movingly” (Stage).

Comment: National Theatre. Irish Times admired the pageant and setting, but they did delay the real conflict of characters; "Colin Blakely was excellent as Pizarro." Christian Science Monitor noted the production was more constricted by the Old Vic space compared with Chichester, but the difficulties were largely overcome and the result was a success. Times said the production was "uniquely suited to the Chichester theatre's open arena stage." Variety acclaimed it as "one of the great theatrical contributions of our time," and praised all aspects of the production. Spectator, while lauding the production, raised objections to Shaffer's text: "its language was inadequate for its mighty theme." "Though it may be hard to remember a more exciting visual unity in the modern theatre, the dialogue fails, again and again, to rise" (Illustrated London News). The production remained in repertory until 29/6/67. The first New York production (ANTA Playhouse 26/10/65) ran for 261 performances.

Nicholette Robinson, Laura Thomas. Dir Christian Simpson; Ch Stanley Jack; Sm Hilary Clulow. Review: Stage 17/12/64, 14. Comment: Negro Theatre Workshop. The piece "served to show the talents and sincerity of the company in this retelling of the Nativity in terms of present-day Notting Hill Gate" (Stage).

Comment: The plot involved a peripatetic corpse. "A standout vehicle for Irene Handl" and her malapropisms. (Variety). Handl's was "a conventional, plainly written part ... given warmth and personal significance by an artist of instinctive taste and understanding, whose comedy technique is finely used" (Stage). While Handl was funny she was not really suited to the role of being a detective (Times). "Even if Miss Handl generally manages to disarm us, her comic personality performance does disturb the drift of the plot, and it is not a very good plot, anyway" (Illustrated London News).

Reviews: Stage 7/1/65, 11–12; Times 10/12/64, 15. Comment: The piece was full of moral lessons. It "concerns the adventures and mis-adventures of a poor but well meaning youth, his friends and enemies, it will strike no unfamiliar or puzzling note to the young. The show is, of course, designed to put over a piece of Moral Re-Armament propaganda" (Stage).

A murder mystery with an inconclusive resolution concerning the accused murderer. Illustrated London News commended Brian Oulton's direction, but thought little of the play.

Comment: Players' Theatre Club. "The audience is just as important as the performers ... [but Robin Hunter] never really got the audience join in the choruses with gay abandon—so essential to creating the right atmosphere for this kind of entertainment" (Daily Mirror). Times said the trans-plantation to the "plush toy-theatre" of the Prince Charles robbed the production of its charm. "Fits very well into the comfortable spick and span red plush Prince Charles. The fact that no beer is allowed in the auditorium, and smoking is barred, does not at all spoil one's enjoyment" (Stage 17/12).

Comment: "The plot involves the international romantic misadventures of the members of a family owning a factory which manufactures maxibules (though what they are is never explained)" (Variety). "At one point the gallery noisily protested. 'I am disgusted,' said one of the characters in the play. 'So are we,' came back an emphatic answering cry" (Christian Science Monitor); Variety reported similar discontent, and opined the only reason for the production was the "gimmick" of Max Adrian in two dozen different roles. An "insufferably whimsical play" (Times). "If there is a more inept, boring, and confusing play than Maxibules I hope I never have to review it" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer said John Blatchley had successfully evoked a pantomime atmosphere that resulted in "an evening full of magic and horse-laughes." Guardian held the opposite view: "The fantastical dresses and nursery fairy-book costumes and scenery devised by André François worked against the play." Times faulted aspects of the production which was little more than "a jolly Christmas show."

"The toy theatre sets and costumes have been designed by Terence Emery from the original Thackeray drawings and set the right key of fantasy with their brilliant hues reminiscent of the bold splurges of colour in tuppence coloured play sheets" (Stage). "Something that looks more likely to be an annual stayer than any other children's play in years. For one thing it has body; its invention is ample. Children are bored with tenuous anecdote" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Spectator thought Barrie's original warranted musical treatment and the result was generally good. “It's a show that will probably appeal to women more than men, costumes are gay and the sets attractive. But as a musical, it remains far from admirable” (Daily Mirror). Observer discussed the show at length but remained unimpressed by this British attempt at a musical. Variety thought the show might struggle in competition with the numerous other musicals in London. Tribune recognized that challenge, but declared “by any intelligent standards, this musical has got the lot—brimming with talent, much more than usually tuneful, and directed with a characteristic mixture of subtlety and bounce.”

F. Driver. Reviews: Stage 7/1/65, 14; Times 28/12/64, 12. Comment: "Starting off with an idea based on Beauty and the Beast, [Drin] side steps horror-tactics by having his hero turned into a puppet" (Stage).

64.409 The Three Wishes (P for children) James Ambrose Brown. LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH, 26/12/64 (m). Cast: Stage 7/1/65, 11; WWT/14. The Woman Carole Baynon; Brother Douglas Thorne; Suliman Lawrence Keane; The Genie Geoffrey Atkinson; Wise Man Robin Meredith. Dir Caryl Jenner; Sc dgn Hilary Atkinson; Cost dgn Matyelok Gibbs; Sm Lynette Stevens. Review: Stage 7/1/65, 11. Comment: The revival suffered "a great deal from the alteration of the Wise Woman into the Wise Man" (Stage).

64.410 Events of an Average Bath-Night (C, 2a) Kenneth Campbell. VANBRUGH 28/12/64.* Cast: Stage 31/12/64, 11; Variety 13/1/65, 76; WWT/14. Boddle Alan Lawrance; Jelp Bruce Myers; Woman Yvette Rees; Faz John Forgeham; Twoo Ian Trigger; Policeman Kenneth Campbell. Dir Warren Mitchell; Dec Neil Hobson; Mus Clifton Parker; Sm Roselyn Parker. Reviews: Stage 31/12/64, 11; Times 29/12/64, 9; Variety 13/1/65, 76. Comment: This piece, about a man in a bath and his thoughts, was "an untidy piece of whimsy ... gets lost in a welter of naive dialog, knockabout humor and over-drawn characters" (Variety). A "messy and infantile piece" (Times).

64.411 Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street (Melo, 4a) George Dibdin Pitt. QUESTORS 30/12/64. 1st perfd Britannia 22/2/1847 as The String of Pearls; or, The Fiend of Fleet Street. Cast: QTA. Review: Middlesex County Times 8/1/65, 3.

Comment: English Stage Company. Beckett attended rehearsals. Variety noted the emphasis on humour, particularly in the exchanges between Nicol Williamson and Alfred Lynch which had "the style and timing of a music-hall duo." Guardian saw their playing as over-acting and straining for effect. New Statesman favored this new approach and said what now emerged was the characters' humanity and charm. Spectator praised Anthony Page's direction because "he has revealed it as the comedy it is. His Vladimir and Estragon are no longer waiting for Godot at all, this is merely their excuse." Tribune (8/1) saw only Beckett's nihilism.

64.413 The Importance of Being Oscar (One-man show) Micheál MacLiammóir. QUEEN'S 31/12/64; trfd to ST. MARTIN'S 1/2/65. Cast: Stage 7/1/65, 9; WWT/14. Comment: For Stage the magic of MacLiammóir's performances never faded.

Productions

1965

65.1 I Must Be Talking to My Friends (Ent) Micheál MacLiammóir. QUEEN'S 4/1/65; trfd to ST. MARTIN'S 1/2/65. Cast: Stage 7/1/65, 9; WWT/14. Micheál MacLiammóir. Pres Brunswick Plays Ltd., Laurier Lister; Dir, Dgn Hilton Edwards. Reviews: Guardian 5/1/65, 7; Stage 7/1/65, 9; Times 5/1/65, 11; Tribune 15/1/64, 14. Comment: Times preferred MacLiammóir's performance of this Irish anthology to his Wilde programme (64.413) because it was "both more astringent and more strongly felt."

65.2 To Kill a Cat (P, 3a) Roland Pertwee and Harold Dearden. INTIMATE 4/1/65. 1st perfd "Q" Theatre 1/5/39 as Independence. Comment: A murder mystery.

65.3 Ring for Catty ([C], 3a) Patrick Cargill and Jack Beale. INTIMATE 11/1/65. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Windsor, 9/7/51 as Rest Hour. Plot: Loney, 299. Comment: The play was set in a hospital ward and related various aspects of the patients' lives.

65.4 The Gift (P) Lynne Reid Banks. VANBRUGH 12/1/65.* Cast: Stage 14/1/65, 13; WWT/14. Gran Mavis Walker; Edna Bickley Kathleen Michael; A Lady Visitor Gillian Martell; Wally Hywel Bennett; Jack Bickley Kenneth Griffith; Joan Pamela Ruddock; Harry Michael Candler; Shirley Georgine Anderson. Comment: The play "appears to be an attack on the welfare state and the notion of human equality"; rather dull as a "political tract," better as a "horror story" (Christian Science Monitor). "Trite do-goodery ... The social symbolism is staggeringly condescending" (Observer). Spectator found the piece puerile. "The kind of piece that either fixes the attention or thoroughly exasperates. Around me at the Vanbrugh were both the exasperated and the rapt" (Illustrated London News). Times listed "famous images from the theatre of the absurd" that appeared during the course of the play.

65.5 The Willing Horse (C) Edwin Lewis. INTIMATE 18/1/65. 1st perfd Pier, Hastings, 7/11/60. Comment: This domestic comedy was about a mother who was always at the beck and call of her family.

65.6 You'll Come to Love Your Sperm Test, or, You Gave Her a Thorough Examination, Doctor? (P) John Antrobus. HAMPSTEAD 18/1/65. 1st perfd Traverse, Edinburgh, 10/11/64. Cast: Stage 21/1/65, 17; WWT/14. Comment: Guardian found the piece "inconsequential," "embarrassing," and sometimes "uproariously funny." Spectator described the first-night as one of "bored embarrassment," and the performance as bad. "It offers ninety minutes of witless arrogance and loose-mouthed crudity. The acting is as weakly foolish as what is said to be a semi-improvised script" (Illustrated London News). Times described the piece as a "bungling assault on the taboos of the nursery."

65.7 The Crucible (P, 4a) Arthur Miller. OLD VIC 19/1/65. 54 perf. Plot: Best/52, 154, Bordman, Bordman/4, 312, Bronner, Bryer, Fletcher, Gassner, Hishchak, Hochman, Law, MacNicholas, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shank, Wilmeth. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 25/1/65, 4; Daily Mirror 20/1/65, 14; Guardian 20/1/65, 11; Illustrated London News 30/1/65, 40; New Statesman 29/1/65, 174; Observer 24/1/65, 24; Spectator 29/1/65, 137; Stage 21/1/65, 18; Tatler 3/2/65, 226; Times 20/1/65, 13; Tribune 29/1/65, 14; Variety 17/2/65, 64. Comment: National Theatre. This was the first American play to be staged by the National. Arthur Miller saw the production on 22/1/65 (Stage 28/1/65, 13). Laurence Olivier's direction was "acute and authoritative" (Variety). Colin Blakely and Sarah Miles gave magnificent performances in this "harrowing" "powerful piece of theatre" (Daily Mirror). Guardian wondered why the National was staging this "overrated ... much tarnished and inferior work." However, Observer thought, now the McCarthy era was past, the play "seems much more dense and thoughtful." Christian Science Monitor acknowledged the play as good if not great, and said that, under Olivier's direction, which toned down the hysterical element, "its impact is tremendous." The production remained in repertory until 2/3/66.

65.8 Quaat-Quaat (P, 2a) Jacques Audiberti (trans Irving Pfeiffer) of Audiberti's play, 1946). QUESTORS 23/1/65. 1st British perf. Cast: QTA. Plot: Hochman, Matlaw, 46. Reviews: Stage 28/1/65, 14; Times 25/1/65, 7. Comment: "Audiberti destroys the force of his allegory by declaring its meaning time and again"; the slow production did not help (Times).

65.9 Legally Speaking (F) John Dighton. DUKE OF YORK'S 24/1/65.* 1 perf. Cast: Stage 28/1/65, 14; WWT/14. Aubrey Bishop John Dawson; Elspeth Fernanda Marlowe; Desmond Michael Ridgway; Lionel Bishop David Kelsey; Edward Hill Noel Howlett; Miss Gurney Pearl Catlin; Victoria Sargant Beryl Ede; Rowena Broadbent Katharine Page; Gilbert Minnow Seymour Green. Dir David Phethean; Sm Haydn Davies. Reviews: Stage 28/1/65, 14; Times 25/1/65, 7. Comment: Repertory Players. This weak farce involved two solicitors in the same firm representing two different clients suing each other.

65.10 Nightmare. INTIMATE 25/1/65. Comment: I have been unable to identify this play.

65.11 The Offshore Island (P, 3a) Marghanita Laski. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 26/1/65. Cast: Stage 28/1/65, 14. James Verney Jim O'Brien; Mary Alison Mullin; Rachel Margaret Cooper; Martin Ian Ainsley; Sgt. Baltinsky John Foster. Dir Bil Keating; Dec Jeremy Parker; Sm Carolyn Richter. Reviews: Stage 28/1/65, 14; Tribune 5/2/65, 14. Comment: Tribune thought the play had been seen to better effect on BBC TV (14/4/59): "larger-than-life effects which worked on the small screen often seem just hammy" in the Little's small space accommodating fifty people.

65.12a Afraid to Fight (C, 1a) Georges Courteline (anon trans of La peur des coups, 1894). TOWER, CANONBURY, 29/1/65. Cast: TTC. Review: Stage 4/2/65, 16. Comment: The production of these plays was "worth more than mere curiosity value, for Courteline is an accomplished satirist and a staunch upholder of the rights of the man in the street against the law, bureaucracy and landlords" (Stage).

65.12b Article 330 (C, 1a) Georges Courteline (anon trans of L'article 330, 1900). TOWER, CANONBURY, 29/1/65. Cast: TTC. Plot: Hochman, Matlaw, 168. Review: Stage 4/2/65, 16.

Comment: Observer called Gillner's adaptation a "meddling rehash," although some of Gogol's "delicate Russianness" was still detectable. The production was lifted by the performances of John Moffatt and Robert Eddison (Variety). Tribune noted there was "a happy ending quite contrary to Gogol's," but overall enjoyed this production which was much better than the Mermaid's usual efforts. However, Spectator found the acting "uneven," and the production "at times appallingly slipshod." Times was generally disappointed by the performances but welcomed the opportunity to see the play itself.

65.14a Don't Make Me Laugh (P, 1a) Charles Wood. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Performed under the overall title Home and Colonial. "The various dramatists ... appear to be talking to themselves in spite of the company's powerful efforts ... to explain what it is all about. One gathers that these are the routine tributes to rebellion" (Illustrated London News). Laugh was "a fashionable baffling Grand Guignol in an army married quarter" (Guardian).

15; Tribune 19/2/65, 15; Variety 24/2/65, 73. Comment: This play about big business will stand as “the worst written, worst acted and worst produced play of 1965” (Tribune). But Christian Science Monitor was quite entertained, Spectator needed more comedy, and Variety was absorbed until the final act which was preposterous. Times faulted several aspects of the play and production. Daily Mirror approved of the play and production.

Gerald Groffman, Lyn Lesbirel. Dir Sheil Arter; Dgn Hilary Hayton. Plot: Hochman, Vinson, Walford. Review: Stage 18/2/65, 14. Comment: Toynbee Players. “The characters are more interesting than the slight story of a deserted husband, a seedy detective and a runaway wife” (Stage).

65.21b A Phoenix Too Frequent (P, 1a) Christopher Fry. TOYNBEE 11/2/65. 1st perfd Mercury 25/4/46. Plot: Bordman/4, 290, Demastes/1, Hischak, Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Vinson, Walford, Weintraub. Review: Stage 18/2/65, 14. Comment: Toynbee Players. The first New York production (Fulton 26/4/50) ran for 5 performances.

65.21c This Time There'll Be No Walk Home (P, 1a) Bill Norfolk. TOYNBEE 11/2/65. 1st perfd YWCA, Baker Street, London, 19/2/64. Joyce Powell, Tom O'Leary. Dir Bill Norfolk. Review: Stage 18/2/65, 14. Comment: Toynbee Players. “In the short duration of the play, the author has successfully explored several facets of human loneliness and non-communication” (Stage).

Comment: The moral messages of the Westminster productions were now presented in costume drama (Times). The play, about slavery abolitionist William Wilberforce, “rarely springs into vivid life, there is something mechanical about the characters, there is little tension” (Stage).

65.23 A Midsummer Night's Dream (C) William Shakespeare. TOWER, CANONBURY, 12/2/65. Cast: TTC.

Review: Stage 18/2/65, 14. Comment: Unicorn Theatre. The play "has a weak story line and is devoid of the inspiration towards individual thought which present-day children seem, however unconsciously, to require" (Stage).

65.25 Dodo's in Love (C) Harold Brooke and Kay Bannerman. INTIMATE 15/2/65. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Windsor, 13/5/57. Comment: Described as an entertaining, delightful, but inconsequential family comedy.

65.26 Travelling Light (C, 2a) Leonard Kingston. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 15/2/65. Plot: Loney. Comment: Kingston's first play. The original title was Edgware Road Blues (63.374). The pre-West End production prior to opening at the Prince of Wales in April (65.87).

Comment: National Theatre. Observer commended Franco Zeffirelli for setting the play in Messina, as well as his response to Shakespeare's plays: "It is their theatricality, their humanity, and their instinctive recourse to the concrete." "This must be regarded as a director's idiosyncratic night out: Shakespeare's comedy used as base for a flare of pictorial and histrionic invention, a whirl of comic device" (Illustrated London News). Variety said Zeffirelli had turned what is often a "dull comedy into lively entertainment," praised the performances of Albert Finney, and Maggie Smith, but said Robert Stephens was uneven. Times thought it was a "hit-or-miss" production that picked up in the second half of the play.

Comment: London Playgoers Club and Theatre Perimeter. Tribune declared Georgina Ward could not act. "Ward is not naturally imaginative. Though she knows what Strindberg is about, she is always too consciously an intelligent actress examining the character" (Illustrated London News). Variety euphemistically said she "has not yet the technical range needed for the role." "The pace is sluggish, the interpretation obvious" (Stage).

Comment: In this revival John Woodvine performed Simon Eyre with a “personal richness which helps an amusing, if not notably inventive production take off and fly” (Observer). Times declared that Robert Gillespie’s production “must be one of the most successful ventures into the world of Elizabethan drama.”

65.40 Hippolytus (T) Euripides (trans Kenneth Cavan-der). HAMPSTEAD 3/3/65. 1st perfd 428 B.C. Cast: Stage 11/3/65, 7; WWT/14. Aphrodite, Artemis Margaret Robertson; Hippolytus Sandor Eles; Old Servant, Messenger Michael Deacon; Leader of Chorus Yoma Sasburgh; Second Chorus Jessica Barnes; Third Chorus Louanne Richards; Nurse Norah Blaney; Phaedra Betty McDowall; Theseus Bryan Coburn; Attendants Patrick Libby, Donald Kerr, Roger Rees, Keith Tangyuk. Dir, Dgn James Roose-Evans; Cost dgn Dawn Pavitt. Comment: Times described James Roose-Evans’s production as a “lusciously intimate approach” to the play although Sandor Eles’s Hippolytus was too conventionally virile. “The present revival has all the Roose-Evans sense of colour, design, and movement: one will not forget the Greek-vase dances, the coiling silken scarves, the imaginative command” (Illustrated London News).

65.41 God Bless the Guv'nor (Melo) Ted Willis. UNITY 5/3/65. 1st perfd Unity 26/12/45. Plot: Bull/3.

Comment: The original title was Room 429. “A hotel bedroom escapade” that, in spite of all its faults, seems to survive (Guardian). “What goes on—and what comes off—during three plodding acts would hardly shock a Mother Superior" (Daily Mirror). "It aroused bored incredulity" with its stereotyped farcical plot (Tribune). Times called the piece "this fragile entertainment and reported the "tepid response" of the audience. "A slight, predictable affair ... that is most remarkable for lack of invention and weakness of wit" (Stage).

65.49 Happy End (MP, 3a) "Dorothy Lane" [Bertolt Brecht and Elizabeth Hauptmann] (bk; trans Monica Shelley; adpt Michael Geliot of Brecht's play, 1929) and Bertolt Brecht (lyr) and Kurt Weill (mus). Comment: English Stage Company. Deft direction from Michael Geliot and excellent singing from Bettina Jonic (Guardian). Christian Science Monitor also praised Jonic's Salvation Army girl in this "high-spirited parody." Variety and Times thought Kurt Weill's music was the main attraction. Tribune averred it was one of the "few British productions of Brecht to have done justice to the century's greatest dramatist." A New York production with a different translation (Martin Beck 7/5/77) ran for 75 performances (75.397).

Comment: Stage Sixty. The production coincided with the publication of the Milner Holland Report on the landlord-tenant system (see discussion in Tribune 19/3/65, 8–9) and also Rachmanism in the 1950s and 60s. "One of the ablest Shavian revivals" (Illustrated London News). Observer said the play still impressed and noted its "fortuitous topicality." Tribune observed that copies of the Milner Report were on sale at the theatre. It also said it was ironic that the play lacked a working-class character (and anyway Shaw was "inept" in creating them); however, the comedy was modern because of its sickness and moral hypocrisies. "Ronald Eyre's direction brings out the full irony of the situation, but not at the expense of humour, of which there is much" (Stage). The first New York production (Herald Square 7/3/1907) ran for 16 performances.

Comment: Observer said the play was boring, needed cutting, and most of the cast were “undistinguished and vocally abrasive,” a view echoed in Variety. However, Guardian declared that Robin Midgley’s direction prevented the play from being tiresome or dated. “Midgley’s production is well above the theatre’s usual standard” (Times).

Comment: Observer said the play needed cutting and Osborne suffered from a “failure of self-criticism.” Spectator called the piece “an animated novel,” and listed its several failings as a play. Predicting “a healthy run,” Variety (31/3) praised the play and Nicol Williamson’s “remarkable, mammoth performance.” Of Dobie’s performance Variety (20/10) said it “differs considerably from that of his predecessor, lacking the histrionic fireworks. He plays the disintegrating lawyer as a more balanced though equally unpleasant character.”

Comment: The press night was delayed until 24/3/64, although the official opening was 17/3/65 (Variety 24/3/65, 88). “Hardly a play, barely a debate, more an evening of zealous talk on behalf of the Eastern religion ... [with] colourful performances” by Saeed Jaffrey, Bhaskar, and Surya Kumari (Stage). “Mingles some absorbing Indian ritualism ... with some thoroughly dire European emotional drama” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Spectator said this was an overblown comedy of an artisan who, incredibly, wins the heart of a woman of wealth, and was a waste of the talents of Sybil Thorndike, Ursula Howells, Megs Jenkins, and Robert Brown. Illustrated London News also lamented the waste of talent on this “triangle-comedy always on the edge of collapse.” Variety was more forgiving, thinking the play “neatly constructed” with believable characters, but lacking a “distinctive punch.” “A warm-hearted comedy that’s very welcome to the West End” (Daily Mirror). Times opined the piece might have been “an effective one-acter,” but lacked a “sense of direction” as a full-length play.

Comment: Compagnie Jean-Louis Barrault–Madeleine Renaud. World Theatre Season. "It is astonishing to mark the players' intensity, the warmth of passion released by M. Barrault, by Maria Mauban, and by Genevieve Page, within the rigid frame. Racine in English is almost impossible ... we must wait for a French company to find the heart of the closely-wrought verse" (Illustrated London News). Guardian reported that excellent acting "swept the audience along magnificently." Spectator faulted Barrault's approach to Racine because it mangled the text. "Palatially done" with a "high nervous" performance by Geneviève Page (Observer).

The play ran for “three hours and thirty-five minutes” (Spectator). “Too colossal for any imaginable economic staging, it needs considering as one of the last great works of Christian Europe” (New Statesman). Times described the play as “a profoundly alien work” and would make non-believers thankful they are not Roman Catholics. Illustrated London News could only respect the play, but nothing more.

Comment: Compagnia dei Giovani. World Theatre Season. A "boulevard farcical comedy of infidelity played out with a good many witty touches but not exactly a theatrical revolution" (Guardian). "It is a thin, somewhat drawn out play, but has lots of amusing things in it" (Stage). A "stylish" production and "brilliant" acting, but rather wasted on this piece (New Statesman). "Certainly, in this brand of preposterous comedy, we have seldom got so close to a cast; Giorgio de Lullo has directed us as well as his company" (Illustrated London News).

An intelligent production of a dated play with a compelling final scene from Barry Warren (Tribune). Echoing a criticism in Tribune, Observer disapproved of Leonard Rossiter's portrayal of Manders as "the villain in a bad Victorian melodrama revived for smart laughs." However, Times approved of the production for revealing Ibsen's "openly comic ironies." "I have not known a performance more telling in its naturalism, one that puts before us more certainly a narrative obscured in the past by over-obtrusive playing. In Adrian Rendle's production five characters have sought and found their author" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Variety reported the comedy had been expanded to meet the requirements of a larger theater and for an audience "more accustomed to gals, gags and glitter." Illustrated London News said the play was at the wrong, too large, theatre. "It is difficult to see exactly how [the piece] should be taken: as a brash, sexy farce or as a serious drama with moral undertones. Or perhaps it is meant to be no more than a picture of people living in Earls Court, with no moral or other emphasis at all" (Stage).

Comment: English Stage Company. Illustrated London News quoted from the programme that “for public performances the Lord Chamberlain has demanded the omission of the scene in the reformatory in which a group of boys play a communal masturbation game.” This “strangely modern play” was “beautifully done” (Guardian). “It is a well staged, well acted play and most certainly not pornographic” (Daily Mirror). The production inspired Observer to discourse on the state of the London theatre, the policies at the Aldwych and the National, censorship, and the decline of acting in the commercial West End theatres.

Comment: On the censorship of parts of the revue see Guardian 22/4/65, 23 and Observer 25/4/65, 10, the latter in satirical vein by Michael Frayn. Variety described the resulting revue as lacking in “purpose and direction. Its satiric barbs are random and wavering.” Times said the revue, in need of revision, was somewhat uneven and some of the sketches were dated; nevertheless, worth seeing.

Comment: The first-night audience “was strongly in tune with its cheerful fatuity” (Guardian). Spectator dubbed it an “ovating audience,” adding, the play “is some of the most actable and enjoyable light comedy that the century has produced.” “A night of uninhibited gaiety (Illustrated London News). “Plays as funny as this are no longer being written in England” (Times).

65.102 Mrs. Warren's Profession (P [4a]) Bernard Shaw. Comment: “June Jago plays Mrs. Warren with a mixture of toughness, hypocrisy and vulgarity in a performance that is entertaining, yet sometimes at variance with the mood of the play” (Stage). Illustrated London News commended the performances of June Jago, Gary Bond, and Ann Firbank. Philip Grout’s “realization of Vivie, played with icy control by Miss Ann Firbank, is right for our time” (Times).

65.103 The Paper Hat (C, 2a) Lesley Storm. GLOBE 22/4/65. 28 perf. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 12/4/65. Comment: The plot concerned an Irish mother trying to rescue her runaway daughter (about to be married) from the snares of London. The production was notable mostly for the performance of the “grand Dublin comedienne, Marie Kean” (Guardian). Observer thought the acting was shabby. Stage said the sole reason to see the play was London debut of the Fidelma Murphy giving a “sad, grave beautiful performance.”

65.104 All the King's Men (Mus) David King (mus) and Alan Foss and Anthony Hall. TOWER, CANONBURY, 23/4/65.* Cast: Stage 15/4/65, 14. Comment: Davalant Productions. A “musical romance about Shakespeare and his circle” by and for actors, and not really successful because of its “inbred quality which usually attacks plays about the theatre, even when they are period pieces” (Stage).

Produced without decor. Christian Science Monitor said Cregan’s poorly written piece had missed the opportunity to deal meaningfully with the issue of comprehensive schools in England. Tribune greeted the play and the performance enthusiastically, as did Times.

65.106 The Circle (Modern C, 3a) W. Somerset Maugham. Comment: Habimah Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. "With enormous piety Habimah has conserved the production" of this historic work in its repertoire (Guardian). Times was disappointed with the production generally. Jerusalem Post reported the production had received "disappointing notices," but the first-night audience gave the cast eight curtain calls.

Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: Stage 6/5/65, 22; Times 30/4/65, 17. Comment: Times indicated this revival needed improvement "in both music and staging." "Frank Hauser's strong, clean, intelligent production is full of invention and sparkle. The comedy is light as air, except when Mr. Hauser underlines something particularly quaint, when there is a splendid touch of mockery mixed with the satire of Gilbert and the gentle satire of a modern producer fresh to the work" (Stage).

65.112 King John (Hist P) William Shakespeare. TOYNBEE 30/4/65. Comment: New Park Theatre Club.

Comment: Actors Studio Theatre Company of New York. World Theatre Season. Tribune said that, despite his talents in other forms of writing, Baldwin had failed to master the dramatic form; moreover, the production itself was abysmal. What the play "acutely needs is a dash of cold, uningratiating reason" (Observer). Variety said the opening-night performance was "lethargic," and acknowledged the play had some weaknesses. The production broadened and coarsened the play (Times). The New York production ran for 148 performances.

65.117 Collapse of Stout Party (C) Trevor Peacock. WIMBLEDON 3/5/65. 1st perfd Playhouse, Nottingham, 10/2/65. Cast: Stage 8/4/65, 8. Gordon, Christopher Godwin. Dir Frederick Farley. Plot: Fletcher. Review: Stage 6/5/65, 24. Comment: "This Lord Arthur behaves like a silly ass out of goodness of heart rather than solely through want of brains. It is a classless interpretation in which he is none the less an English aristocrat and a timeless one in that, although his acting is modern in impact, it welds smoothly into the atmosphere of the nineties" (Stage).

Comment: A "fair-to-feeble imitation of American tycoonery and office japes; quickly tedious, when done no better than this" (Guardian). "The marquee potential of Margaret Rutherford and Sidney James should help, though the show seems a dubious commercial prospect" (Variety). Illustrated London News discoursed extensively on Margaret Rutherford's abilities, and how this play did not realize them. The first New York production (Belasco 5/11/53) ran for 526 performances.

Comment: The play was arranged from private diaries, documents, and letters of Queen Victoria and her contemporaries. Dorothy Tutin did her best in "a dull part" (Observer). Guardian judged Tutin's performance more expansively. Christian Science Monitor (18/5) said the production was a surprisingly great success, with Tutin's performance "a remarkable achievement," which was given an ovation on opening night. Times praised both the piece and Tutin's performance. The first New York production (Henry Miller's 28/2/68) ran for 60 performances.

Comment: Observer indicated the production managed to realize what the Actors Studio in The Three Sisters (65.131) could not: real Chekhov. "John Fernald's production skilfully blended the comic and the tragic" (Tribune).

Comment: Stage Sixty. Tribune said the revival was praiseworthy not least because it helped to remedy "the obtuse initial reception" and thus failure of the 1951 premiere (Wearing 51.192). Spectator discussed the play's faults at great length, but concluded "on the banal level of dramatic experience, it coheres and convinces, it is—despite everything—a genuine play.” Times echoed that judgment.

Comment: The two plays were performed in three hours, separated by a thirty minute interval. A bold proposition, and even with its faults, deserving of an audience (Guardian). “A lot better than it might have been,” but Bernard Miles is not the actor to play Oedipus (Tribune). “The real disaster is Bernard Miles’s Oedipus” (Times). Variety called the production of both plays “serviceable” but nowhere in the league of Laurence Olivier’s 1945 success (Wearing 45.146).

Comment: National Theatre. Nothing “can disguise the dramatic poverty of this weary morality” (Spectator). Similarly Tribune described the play as “a succession of expository scenes, all drawn out long after we’ve grasped the point.” Variety joined this chorus of disapproval of the play, but singled out for praise Madge Ryan and Lynn Redgrave. “The only serious piece of miscasting is Lynn Redgrave’s Katrin” (Times). The production remained in repertory until 29/1/66.

The production lasted four hours. “The play is an incontestable masterpiece; one would not have known it from Lee Strasberg’s production, which seemed to be one long pause, occasionally interrupted” (Illustrated London News). “Theatrical onanism” by the Actors Studio (Observer). Spectator apologized for adding “my own tones of condemnation—in a critics’ cacophony quite unanimous—to the Actors’ [sic] Studio’s deplorable rendering, or rending.” Jarrell’s version “accomplishes the supposedly impossible task of making Chekhov a bore” (Times).

Comment: Christian Science Monitor commended the devastating irony in this "story of such sudden changes of fortune." Spectator praised Mitchell's adaptation, but observed that Compton-Burnett's novels were formulaic. Variety doubted a long run, and found it took time to become "attuned to an evening of literate, if old fashioned talk." Times noted Mitchell's dialogue was taken directly from the novel.

Comment: Christian Science Monitor found the play's "elaborate speeches about death and funerals" too gloomy. Similarly, Variety said "at times the playgoer can almost sense the dialog aging," and the play lacked "drive and purpose." Times opined Bagnold devoted "too much attention to creating a star part [for Edith Evans] and too little to the sense of the play." Daily Mirror reported that Evans was not always audible. The first New York production (Royale 2/1/64) ran for 108 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. A revival of 1964 Stratford production by Peter Hall and John Barton. Variety commended the physically short Ian Holm for creating "a large impression as the soldier-king whose regality mingles excellently with a down-to-earth common touch." Observer and New Statesman also noted the effect of seeing Henry played by "a small, frail-looking actor"; it tended to open up the neglected aspects of the text; Illustrated London News agreed, and found Holm's portrayal effective.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian commented on the enigmatic qualities of Pinter's work and said for the most part the audience seemed to enjoy the play. Observer called the production "an exultant night," and "offered the stirring spectacle of a man in total command of his talent." "The acting, without exception, is superb, but Paul Rogers' titanic

Max calls for particular applause" (Tribune). Variety discussed and praised individual performances. "Peter Hall's production remains a work of exquisite precision" (Times). See also Lloyd Evans, 131–35. The first New York production (Music Box 5/1/67) ran for 324 performances.

Comment: Stage Sixty. Guardian commended Stage Sixty for its policies and stylish productions, but did not think the play all that important. “Its characters are the slave of the plot and its plot is meretricious” (Spectator). “Good acting, weak play” (Tribune). Times embraced those judgments. Illustrated London News was a notable dissenter, finding merit in both the play and the acting.

Comment: “Purportedly an expression of Claudine Henry’s obsessive ideas about the effect of death on the living. It could hardly have been less intelligible if it were in gibberish. It is a theatrical disaster” (Variety). The message, Spectator opined, was “those who know do not speak ... those who speak do not know.” Tribune refused the review the play. “A tedious experience” (Times).

Comment: Spectator thought the production failed to exploit “the natural advantages of an open-air setting.” “A sharp, bright, unsentimental production,” and ticket refunds if the weather is inclement and the production cancelled (Tribune). In Harold Lang’s production “the pastoral convention gives way to hard-edged Italian comedy” (Times).

65.160 How I Assumed the Role of the Popular Dandy: For the Purposes of Seduction and Other Base Matters (P, 2a) Derek Marlowe. QUESTORS 12/6/65.* Cast: QTA. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 18/6/65, 8; Stage 17/6/65, 15. Comment: “Marlowe is surely one of this era’s most skilful jugglers with words. He uses the language audaciously—he does not even fear the employment of puns—but brilliantly. The disadvantage of this is that the listener—and, I fancy, at times the author also—finds himself giving more attention to the manner than to the matter” (Stage).

Comment: “Alas, the present unaccountably thin revival, without style or assurance, is no introduction to Maugham. Most of the acting is tentative” (Illustrated London News). A good example of “a conventional play of intrigue” with juicy roles (Tribune). Guardian thought the production, which was “not dazzling but ... never boring,” might find a suitably square audience.” Variety noted the production was for a limited run. Times said the play conformed to “standard West End requirements,” but noted “the contradiction between its extremely careful construction and its hack dialogue.”

Comment: This very lengthy play was apparently about a “middle-aged baby’s infantile longings for more self-assertion and freedom than he can cope with” (Stage). A previously scheduled production at LAMDA on 17/1/65 by the English Stage Society was cancelled at the last minute because of illness.

Comment: The piece was commissioned by the Corporation of London to commemorate the 750th anniversary of the sealing of Magna Carta. Arden, after dispensing quickly with the sealing, “begins to show how a document that would mean so much to future ages was accepted in its own time as an expedient, and roughly shredded. Theatrically, he is interested not so much in the rumpus before and at Runnymede as in the Charter’s apparent failure” (Illustrated London News). Irish Times noted the public performance followed a week of private performances. It found the play somewhat confusing but creditable. Variety said the play was lively and eloquent, “but heavily over-written and far too long.” “The play is Brechtian” (Times).

Comment: Observer declared the play was “the funniest new writing in the West End since One Way Pendulum,” and “Eileen Atkins is amazing.” “An acute, intelligent, stylish, and very funny piece was work” (Tribune). “Has all the earmarks of success” (Variety 30/6). Spectator noted that Marcus had made a successful comedy out of two very unlikely subjects. “The immediate effect of the play comes from its brilliant situation comedy and sense of character” (Times). Eileen Atkins and Beryl Reid repeated their roles in the New York production (Belasco 5/10/66) which ran for 205 performances.

25/6/65, 15. Comment: International Theatre Club. The piece attacked the silliness of both the political Right and Left. Times noted the play “uses the same strip cartoon techniques, and the same in-jokes about American liberal attitudes” as Jules Feiffer’s Crawling Arnold. “As a revue sketch, this would have been apposite, if cruel, but expanded into a two-act play, Passacaglia overreaches its aims, and its squibs are fired off too indiscriminately” (Stage).

Comment: The performance lasted three hours on opening night. "There were times last night when Peter O'Toole, in the face of idiotic jeers from the Gallery, found the going tough on stage" (Daily Mirror). Spectator declared Mercer's dialogue "is staggering in its effrontery." New Statesman saw the play was an anthology of the "angry young man" type, without a beginning or an end. Tribune detected far too many themes in the play, all of which became blurred. "A fascinating welter of words that provides Peter O'Toole with a marathon orgy of self-pitying dramatics" (Variety 7/7). The production closed when Peter O'Toole became ill. The first New York production as at the Hudson Guild 7/3/79.

Comment: English Stage Company. Technically a private “club members only” performance because of censorship restrictions due to the homosexual elements (see Stage 13/5/65, 1). Guardian attacked the censorship of what was now a commonplace topic; moreover the play did not contain “a moment of calculated vulgarity.” New Statesman provided an example of a scene that would have been deleted in a censored version of the play and that was also “one of the best things Osborne has written.” Tribune found the writing and the characters flat, a sentiment echoed by Spectator. “Yet, in A Patriot For Me, with its duel, its uniforms, its espionage, its beautiful Countess, its Central European setting (rough approximation to Ruritania), its passions, and its blustering comic interlude, one does meet familiar things. The great difference is that the passion is homosexual; the comedy is relentlessly transvestite” (Illustrated London News). Times commented on the “voraciousness” of Osborne’s talent that keeps on growing. The first New York production (Imperial 6/10/69) ran for 49 performances. Maximilian Schell played lead in both productions.

65.188 The Arbitration (C) Menander (trans Gilbert Murray of Epitrepontes, c. 304 B.C.). TOWER, CANONBURY, 2/7/65. Cast: TTC. Plot: Hochman, Shipley. Review: Stage 8/7/65, 15. Comment: Stage reported there was some commendable acting.

65.189 The Big Knife (P, 3a) Clifford Odets. INTIMATE 5/7/65. 1st perfd Shubert, New Haven, Connecticut, 26/1/49; 1st British perf Theatre Royal, Birmingham, 16/11/53. Comment: The adaptation and the “with-it non music” caused New Statesman to leave the production at the interval. Guardian catalogued the numerous, disastrous facets of the adaptation and production. "One of the poorest entries in the Mermaid's uneven record" (Variety). "The Mermaid's worst show to date" (Times).

65.194 A Letter from the General (P, 3a) Maurice McLoughlin. INTIMATE 8/7/65. 1st stage perf Lauriston Hall, Edinburgh, 19/8/61. Plot: Fletcher.

65.195 Murray Brown. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 8/7/65. Comment: Brown gave dramatizations of Poe's "The Tell-Tale Heart," and "The Cask of Amontillado," and works by Homer, Ovid, and Melville.

Most of the material "had no point nor purpose" (Guardian). "A few amusing sketches, but very little bite" (Tribune). Times found the first half almost professional; "the second half is disastrous."

65.197 Time Remembered (RC, 3a) Jean Anouilh (anon trans of Léocadia, 1940). O'Neil. Plot: Best/28, 225, Bordman, Bordman/3, 358-59, Bronner, Bryer, Hischak, Hochman, Kabatchnik/2, Loney, 157, Matlaw, Mplots, Patterson, Salem, Shipley, Sobel, Wilmeth. Review: Stage 15/7/65, 14. Comment: Actors' Workshop. "This complicated and rather ill-balanced investigation into a mental state must be infinitely more entertaining to the cast than to the audience" (Stage). The first New York production (Plymouth 7/9/28) ran for 91 performances.

65.200 The Creeper (Thriller, 3a) Pauline Macaulay. ST. MARTIN'S 14/7/65. 204 perf. 1st perfd Playhouse, Nottingham, 28/10/64. Comment: The plot involved an eccentric and his platonic male companions, the last of whom proves fatal. "A macabre little play which promises too much" (Spectator). "A brand new school of fetishist melodrama. I hope there are no pupils" (Observer). Variety said the piece might have a respectable run aided by Eric Portman's assured performance. Times wondered what the play was really concerned with.

65.201 Squire Puntila and His Servant Matti (C, 12sc) Bertolt Brecht (trans Paul Kriwaczek and Paul Lewis of Herr Puntila und sein Knecht Matti, 1948; adpt Jeremy Brooks). Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer approved the adaptation's "ripe slang" and "jolliness," but said the revue form precluded any sense of continuity. Variety called it "an evening of fairly desperate clowning," and Brecht's propaganda would not convert the unpersuaded. "Has all Brecht's usual, wearying didacticism" (Christian Science Monitor); Daily Mirror shared the sentiment, adding "the acting almost makes you forget the idiotic story." Times mentioned Brecht's sources (Chaplin's City Lights and Finnish folk stories) but said Brecht made them quite his own.

65.202 The Reluctant Peer (C, 3a) William Douglas Home. RICHMOND 19/7/65. Plot: Loney. Comment: A two-week engagement.

Comment: Travers' "masterpiece, revives wonderfully well," and was "received with delight" on opening night (Guardian). The farce was too old-fashioned and "shoddily contrived" for Spectator. "Travers wrote good farce. But when new or when revived, it needs first-rate treatment if the full flavour and the best of the fun are to emerge satisfactorily. At the Garrick, Thark has been given a mediocre production with several of the parts either miscast or else extremely badly played" (Stage). Variety thought that since 1927 "public taste has changed, and vintage farce is no longer the automatic tonic for box-office doldrums." Times said that the (good) cast lacked experience of performing farce.

Comment: Monica Maughan took over Amanda Barrie's role at short notice for the second performance. "The play is an abominable one, though clever" (Spectator). Guardian was bored by this sleek romantic comedy, but the first-night audience gave it a friendly reception. Variety opined this was a good example of the difference in taste between Broadway and the West End; "Possibly the failure could be attributed to the Michael White production, which is short on sparkle, pace and laughs." Times also discussed the differences between American and British comedic tastes.

Comment: The production closed for the week of 16/5/66 for a cast holiday. "An entertaining parable about a techy judge," with a good performance from Andrew Cruickshank, but not the rest of the cast (Spectator). Guardian thought the plot was "flaccid," and there was "no real suspense. However, "the holidays fill up empty theatres with audiences less exacting than usual." "Mildly, oh so mildly, entertaining" (Tribune). "The chance of a tight-knit legal comedy has been sacrificed to routine theatrical development" (Times).

Comment: Berliner Ensemble. Observer discussed Brecht’s conception of Coriolanus at length, especially in comparison with Shakespeare’s. Times disliked “the rigidly perverse treatment [of Shakespeare’s original] that disfigures the finished product.” “No matter what opinions may be aroused by the adaptation, the production can hardly fail to be acclaimed. It is in every way magnificent” (Stage). Illustrated London News noted that “the piece now contains fragments of Antony and Cleopatra, Julius Caesar, and Macbeth, as well as a few of Brecht’s own scenes,” in addition to Brecht’s original “meddling” of Shakespeare’s play.

Comment: Tribune said the “packed house” was kept “in fairly continuous convulsions,” and the play deserved a West End transfer. “Has many of the essential ingredients, in particular dialogue that twists and changes rapidly to reveal an unsuspected humorous angle in even a mundane phrase. The plot, however, is no more than a tenuous link between a series of connected revue-sketches” (Stage). The first New York production (Music Box 24/10/66) ran for 40 performances. Peter Bayliss and Patricia Routledge appeared the New York production.

Comment: The revue was staged while Son of Oblomov was on hiatus. On the production’s censorship difficulties, see Variety 1/9/65, 57, and Steve Nicholson, The Censorship of British Drama 1900-1968: Volume Four: The Sixties (University of Exeter Press, 2015) 173–75. Guardian found the revue uneven, but liked the company’s energy and the absence of “sick humour.” Tribune said the sketches were too drawn out. “Much of the show’s energy goes into a witless exploration of transatlantic relationships” (Times).

Comment: “A typical Mermaid production ... weak direction and mediocre acting, redeemed by the waning goodwill of critics and audiences. The farce, fortunately, survived the treatment pretty well” (Tribune). Variety faulted the heavy-handed production for failing to bring out the “period wit and charm,” a view repeated in Guardian. “Too much of the present playing is in exclamatory italics” in a misguided attempt to indicate and generate humour (Illustrated London News). For Times the production underestimated “Pinero’s skill in creating farcical situations without resorting to knockabout ‘business.’”

Comment: English Stage Company. "A sensitive, highly individual work ... The drama of the play comes through the clash of Eastern and Western philosophy and custom, the theme is that of double living, the man himself and how he appears wearing his mask of everyday" (Stage). "What murders [the play] is a lurching uncertainty of tone" (Observer 29/8). Tribune discerned the "makings of a satirical comedy on 'clash of cultures' lines," but that evaporated because of the "leaden dialogue." Illustrated London News found the play uneven, but praised Barbara Couper for "acting of a redoubtable authority that no one else in the cast can match, though we get some very sound performances." Times thought it was the best Australian play since The Summer of the Seventeenth Doll.

3/9/65, 11. Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. A faulty play by a talented and ambitious dramatist (Tribune). "The dialogue is good, the feeling of period well-established, and the play genuinely, though a little naively, theatrical" (Stage). Times was disappointed that Hastings had not developed his technique in the nine years since his previous play; Vanessa Redgrave gave a fine performance.

65.235 Appointment with Death (P, 3a) Agatha Christie (find on her novel, 1938). WIMBLEDON 30/8/65. 1st perfd King's, Glasgow, 29/1/45. Comment: International Theatre Club. Tribune disliked the play's staginess and hollow characters. The play had "nothing fresh to say on the humanistic angle of mankind's self-inflicted disease [war]" (Stage). "I am still wondering both why George Buchanan was moved to write the piece, and why, having begun it, he developed it in dialogue so stylised and untheatrical" (Illustrated London News).

65.240 Green Julia (C, 2a) Paul Ableman. ARTS 2/9/65. 1st perfd Traverse, Edinburgh, 3/8/65. Cast: Stage 9/9/65, 13; Variety 22/9/65, 70; WWT/14. Robert "Bradshaw" Lacey Jonathan Lynn; Jacob "Carruthers" Perew Phillip Manikum. Pres Racolin-Haynes Productions; Dir George Reviews: Illustrated London News 18/9/65, 36; New Statesman 10/9/65, 368, 370; Observer 5/9/65, 25; Spectator 10/9/65, 324; Stage 9/9/65, 13; Times 3/9/65, 14; Tribune 10/9/65, 15; Variety 22/9/65, 70. Comment: Traverse Theatre Club, Edinburgh. "Virtuoso play-writing, controlled, funny and penetratingly incisive," well acted (Spectator). Tribune analyzed the play at length, including its indebtedness to other works, and thought it was really a padded out one-acter; nevertheless, the "work of a lively mind addressing itself to intelligent adults." Times thought Ableman successfully managed the role-playing element. The first New York production (Sheridan Square 16/11/72) ran for 147 performances.

65.241 Antony and Cleopatra (T) William Shakespeare. OLD VIC 6/9/65. Cast: Times 7/9/65, 11. Antony John Nightingale; Octavius Caesar Timothy Meats; Enobarbus Clive Emsley; Cleopatra Helen Mirren. Dir Michael Crofts; Dec Christopher Lawrence; Mus Antony Hopkins; Light Geoffrey Reeves, Brian Croft. Reviews: Guardian 7/9/65, 7; Illustrated London News 18/9/65, 36; New Statesman 17/9/65, 410; Observer 12/9/65, 25; Spectator 17/9/65, 352; Stage 9/9/65, 13; Times 7/9/65, 11; Tribune 17/9/65, 15. Comment: National Youth Theatre. Guardian provided some defense of the choice of play since the company numbered 137; however, the youth of the cast was an obvious disadvantage: "no one believes John Nightingale and Helen Mirren when Antony and Cleopatra talk about grey hairs." But Tribune declared the two actors "triumphantly create" their characters. Spectator found much to praise in Mirren's performance. In addition to Mirren and Nightingale, Illustrated London News praised the performances of Clive Emsley and Timothy Meats. Times was generally complimentary about most aspects of the production.

65.242 The Coburn Affair (Thriller) Rex Howard Arundel. INTIMATE 6/9/65. 1st perfd Repertory, Tynemouth, 15/6/64.

65.243 The Four Seasons (D, 2a) Arnold Wesker. HIPPODROME, GOLDERS GREEN, 6/9/65. 1st perfd Belgrade, Coventry, 24/8/65. Comment: This touring production only made it into the West End (65.264) when the Saville suddenly became available because of the failure of The Overdog (65.246); see Coventry Evening Telegraph 17/9/65, 8.

65.244 Hindle Wakes (Lancashire P, 3a) Stanley Houghton. WIMBLEDON 6/9/65. Fanny Hawthorn Helen Cotterill; Arthur Lane, Jasmine Dee. Plot:

Demastes/1, Fletcher, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Sobel.
