This item was presented at each performance accompanied by other varying items. The piece was "supposed to trace the history of mankind from prehistoric times to the present, but all Jiri Srnec is saying is that things haven't changed much" (Guardian).

Comment: National Youth Theatre. "Both provides a sympathetic, unpatronizing portrait of juvenile problems and gives the company a chance to display a remarkable ensemble vitality and precision" (Times). "Acted with enormous zest and fluency by a huge, joyous cast" (Observer). Spectator faulted the keen, but "immature amateurs." Variety said the piece, the result of improvisations, was too thin to sustain three hours of playing time. Daily Mirror complained the company was "letting itself down, devaluing its standards by performing plays like" this ... just "an extension of the rehearsal room. A crude exhibition of high spirits which goes on for nearly three hours." The first New York production was at the Brooklyn Opera House 27/3/79.

Comment: Guardian called the piece a mixture of Brian Rix farce, “Jules Feiffer satire, and Arthur Miller family drama,” and the result was a mess. Observer commented on the overload of Jewish jokes and their intention. Variety described it as a black comedy which “at times [is] a sick assault on materialist society,” but lacking in style and originality; the acting was uneven. “For every really funny joke there are ten like ‘Me—commit suicide? I’d rather kill myself first’” (Daily Mirror). Gelbart’s piece covered conventional ideas and the characters were one dimensional (Times).

Comment: Theatre Royal (York) Company. Guardian commended all aspects of the piece and the production. “An endearing chamber musical” (Spectator). “A pallid little off-Broadway musical that, in its winsome pretence at satire, makes Julian Slade look like Voltaire” (Times). However, Times also noted that, after the curtain call, the highlight of the evening was a performance of four numbers by The Zeitgeist, the production’s band. The New York production ran for 485 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. "Mild, romping stuff, received with high good nature" (Guardian). Spectator thought Terry Hand's attempt to render the play more relevant was not successful since the piece was very much of its own period—a view shared by Tribune. Illustrated London News praised the direction and performances, but opined the play's "wit" was "faint." "A nifty cosmetic job ... The language is Restoration, but the rest of the production is mod" (Variety). "The fine feathers and sequins do not disguise the play's lack of wit. It really is a tedious old thing" (Daily Mirror). Times praised the production and acting for the elimination of the Restoration style and for realizing the play's "human content."

Comment: Traverse Theatre. New Statesman noted the play's comic, yet bitter tone, and Matura's attack on pretension. "Good, sharp things to say about patronising English attitudes to colour" (Observer). Times thought "the work is addressed equally to immigrants and whites."

Comment: This humdrum office farce needed good performers to make it work which is what Jimmy Edwards and Eric Sykes do (Guardian). "This hilarious show for the domestic market should run as long as the comedians continue playing it" (Variety). Times was rather unhappy that Edwards and Sykes were using the comedy gratuitously as a vehicle for their own improvisations, a sentiment shared by Illustrated London News.

71.303 The Laughing Cavalier (P, 1a) Stanley Eveling. KING'S HEAD 14/9/71 (Ln). 1st perfd Stables, Manchester, 10/70. Comment: The play involved a couple spending the night together in adherence to the woman's husband's deathbed instructions. "Eveling's writing is vivid and expressive, the slight touch of exaggeration in the dialogue pointing the situation's nuances with a clarity which adds dimension to the acting of Neil Seiler and Patricia Doyle" (Stage).

Comment: MPS 320. New Statesman said the play was "disconcertingly repetitious" in making its point about "fashionable hypocrisy." "The only full-scale characterisation is Joe Melia's Phil" (Observer). Times said Frayn had "lumbered himself with a notoriously unworkable structure."

Comment: MPS 280, 5504. Dolphin Theatre Company. The play centered around a Samaritan counseling desperate people and his two fellow flatmates, all with emotional problems. Observer found the piece mawkish and "too pat." Spectator opined the play needed one more rewrite; excellent performances from Timothy Dalton, Richard Moore, and David Cook. Times, generally impressed by the play, admired Terson's ability "to circumnavigate a situation viewing it from any number of conflicting angles."

Comment: Spectator found the play dated but directed "with an unerring sense of period." However, Variety said the play "remains remarkably fresh. It would be hard to better the performances." Times thought the production augured well for an Odets revival. The New York production ran for 184 performances.

71.316 The Deed (P, 1a) Philip Martin. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 27/9/71 (Ln). Review: Stage 7/10/71, 18. Comment: Quipu. The play was about a family quarreling about the sale of their jointly-owned house.

Comment: MPS 286. Guardian said this "inexplicable entertainment" was mostly music with little plot; it was booed on opening night. "An incredibly corny, banal and charmless show" (Variety). Times hoped for "some satire, keen and critical," as the subsequent plot description might have yielded, but the hope was thwarted completely. "It is quite the most peculiar and fragile musical entertainment to land in the West End for many a year" (Daily Mirror 29/9).

Comment: English Stage Company. The production ran nearly three hours “Perhaps the most pessimistic and terrifying play any English writer has produced within a decade,” but it fails because Bond has not found “his dramatic and emotional method for portraying the general despair he feels” (Guardian 30/9). Observer called Bond a “visionary craftsman,” but noted the play’s episodic nature and some thin characterization. “Magnificent and inspiring in conception,” but faulty in execution (Christian Science Monitor). “In characterization, as in structure, the piece moves in short cut-off episodes; each making its point as tersely and economically as the blow of a knife” (Times). “An obviously bravura effort ... helped by redoubtable playing, but much of it is obscurely rendered and the play resultantly is overdrawn” (Variety).

Comment: MPS 268. “A grubby little thriller ... fearfully badly acted” (Observer). “One of the most accomplished thrillers to hit London for a long time ... excellent escapist entertainment” (Tribune). “Should satisfy popular taste with this glossy, ingeniously contrived thriller ... involves a jet set exec who murders his millionairess wife” (Variety). Times regarded Durbridge as a master of the thriller: “The pleasure of the writing is akin to that of a good farce. Every detail is there for a purpose. Small talk is mined with apparent banalities which subsequently rise to the surface and explode.”

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. A revival of Harold Pinter's production staged originally at the Mermaid, with some recasting (70.351). T. P. McKenna was less successful as Robert Hand played previously by Timothy West (Guardian). Apart from the casting of Vivien Merchant as Bertha, Times regarded the production, with the new cast members, as a "masterpiece." "It is easy to see why Harold Pinter has chosen to direct this play—the four main characters are Pinter people. Their silences and pauses convey more than their words" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Le Théâtre du Soleil. Performed in the round, the "idea is to get back to the street theater of the Middle Ages, with bold, simplistic imagery, big, elemental notions, and vigorous sketches" (Christian Science Monitor). Times thought the production was "more thrilling" than the Parisian original because the audience became an integral part of the production.

"An unsentimental, particularised, study of revolution with a relevance to any number of twentieth-century situations" (Guardian). "A fascinating piece, totally free from the intellectual poverty and good-guy emotions that usually beset British political drama" (Times). "A subtle political conflict, matched by Buzz Goodbody's direction," with good performances from Ben Kingsley and Patrick Stewart (Observer). "Superlatively acted" (Spectator). The production remained in repertory until 7/12/71.

71.341 Talking about Yeats (Ent) Micheál MacLiammóir. DUKE OF YORK'S 13/10/71. 1st perfd Dublin Theatre Festival 1965. Cast: Variety 3/11/71, 52; WWT/16. Comment: MPS 326. “Poor James and even worse musical comedy” (Guardian). For Times the production demonstrated the “full fatuity” of the musical genre. Variety found pleasure in listening to Howard Keel, but the musical was “overlong, overslow.” “Present with all the crudity of a seaside comic postcard” (Christian Science Monitor). Spectator did not object to the adaptation and declared the piece offered “a generally pleasing evening with agreeable performances.” “A fairly painless, moderately pleasant but unexciting musical ... It’s the sort of event in which the lowering of a chandelier into place gets almost as much applause as the music” (Daily Mirror). Observer said the “audience [was] bent on applauding as every piece of carpentry was trundled across the stage.” The first New York production (Lunt-Fontanne 19/11/72) ran for 19 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Observer declared the piece was a "genuinely imaginative original." "A succession of snappily interlocked episodes and occasional outbreaks of song, adding up to as much of a tragedy as an age of sick humour can sustain" (Tribune). Spectator objected to Robert Montgomery's approach and methodology: it "will lead to a lot of silk purses being made into sows' ears." Times said the adaptation coarsened the original, but praised performances from Sara Kestelman and Ben Kingsley; moreover, a "straight adaptation performed by the same company would be a good idea. The production remained in repertory until 11/12/71. The New York production ran for 127 performances.

Comment: Times disliked this "slap-dash" show particularly because Grillo sneered at his own characters. "An amusing half-hour, smoothly directed by John Burgess and given polished performances by David King and Lisa Hughes as the hosts, with Donna Reading as the most adorable of sex-kittens" (Stage).

71.355 Miss Julie (P, 1a) August Strindberg (trans Michael Meyer of Fröken Julie, 1889). THE PLACE 27/10/71. 15 perf. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Thoroughly naturalistic direction by Robin Phillips which lacks a nightmarish quality in the play; "sharply-etched performances" from Helen Mirren and Heather Canning (Guardian). Observer said the production lacked sexual tension. Times averred this was the "chamber production played outside the proscenium convention" that Strindberg wanted. Christian Science Monitor praised the production. The production remained in repertory until 9/12/71.

Reviews: Guardian 1/11/71, 10; Stage 4/11/71, 16. Comment: The play, about lesbians going to a gay party in Hampstead, "is written with a commendably light touch and, with its wealth of epigrammatical wit—most of which is highly original—it is genuinely funny" (Stage). "A real collector's item" (Guardian).

Comment: MPS 323. The play examined "a celebrated 18th century paternity suit which took seven years to resolve," and part of Home's family history; presented "imaginatively," but of doubtful interest to a wide audience (Variety). Christian Science Monitor said Home had “hit upon a fascinating theatrical device” of having the case retried at a twentieth-century dinner party. “Decently entertaining” (Spectator). Times thought a play with a courtroom scene and written by Home would have been a winner, but this piece was not.

Comment: Performed “with the additional act that Shaw interpolated ... in 1945” (Spectator). A “very dry cracker, with crumbs of characters shuffled about to prove that man, as a political animal, is a failure” (Observer). A good production of “this over-facile satire ... [which] was wrong at the time, and remains wrong today” (Tribune). “As drama it is not much; but as a larkish conversation piece for characteristic Shavian puppets it is generally stimulating” (Spectator). “In turn witty and repugnant, stimulating and soporific ... a lucid, well-paced production from Philip Grout ... very capably acted” (Guardian). Times said the play was a sad indication of “the extent to which Shaw’s mind and feelings had closed up in his last years.” The first New York production (Henry Miller’s 30/1/40) ran for 15 performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. “The strength of the play lies not only in its realism but in its artistry, its craftsmanlike devotion to form, detail and the use of colour” (Observer 14/11). For Tribune the play was so indistinguishable from real life that it could be seen only once; Spectator shared a similar perspective. “A very Northern play but not Storey’s best. As a documentary it abounds in authentic touches but lacks human drama. It is probably too true to be interesting” (Daily Mirror). Christian Science Monitor lauded the play and Lindsay Anderson’s direction, and concluded; “It is extraordinary that from so rough and uncouth a game as Northern football Mr. Storey should distill so delicate an atmosphere of Wordsworthian gravity. He is perhaps the most poetic spirit of contemporary British dramatists.” Variety said Storey managed to encapsulate “a clear picture of each character and beyond that, of the area, the nation, the civilization in which they live and play out their game of life.” Times (10/11) described the play in detail without drawing a critical conclusion and thereby demonstrated the power of the play itself. There were 108 performances at the Globe. The first New York production (Morosco 6/3/73) ran for 192 performances.

Comment: The play explored the relationship between an older and a younger man who paint water pipes underground. “Beautifully played by Sam Kelly ... [and] Seymour Matthews” (Christian Science Monitor). The play made its point “by being funny about people rather than being portentous about Man” (Times).

Comment: MPS 325. Apparently there were previews from 10/11/71 onwards, with 15/11 as press night. Times reported Vanessa Redgrave had taken over the production from Peter Gill and had cut the play down from four hours to two-and-a-half; as a result Times found it difficult to discern Robert Shaw's intentions in the play. "The play loses itself. Neither in writing nor in direction is it shaped to a spire of meaning," although it was better in the second part (Illustrated London News) Observer commended Robert Shaw's handling of fact and fiction, but thought the play lacked "the poetry and clarity of epic writing." Variety said the play was "too talky and slack of pace," but praised Vanessa Redgrave's performance.

An excerpt of the piece had been given at the American Education Theatre Conference in Philadelphia 1/70. "Deliberately bad acting in deliberately bad taste" (Observer). "The most extreme example of New York camp yet seen in London ... The style is cod melodrama exaggerated to the point of atomic fission" (Times).

Comment: MPS 317. A charity performance was given 30/5/72 at 11:30 pm in aid of the Covent Garden Community Association. "A genuinely engaging little musical, which only occasionally slips over into faux naïf charm" (Observer). Guardian took a more cynical stance on the piece, but noted the audience leapt “ecstatically to their feet at the end.” “Rocky candy” for the masses, a substitute for pantomime; David Essex as Jesus possessed an “amiable earnestness ... and beatific grins, which can’t be easy to do in a red-nose make-up” (Spectator). Times noted the musical’s Broadway roots: “another piece of free-form group theatre for a buoyant young cast who supply most of the plots and rhythms with their own bodies,” and it was generally successful. The production ran for 1,128 performances at Wyndham’s. The first New York production ran for 2,124 performances.

Comment: “An interweaving of [Gorky’s] biography with extracts from his work,” impressively directed by Walter Donohue, and a memorable Gorky from Stephen Moore (Times). “Brenton squanders his talent by treating Gorky vaguely and with little depth” (Guardian).

Comment: Bulatovi “converts Beckett’s characters into socially conditioned mechanisms who fail to respond when a real human being, in the shape of Godot, arrives among them”; however, the production was dreadful and sabotaged the play’s effect (Times). “A feeble variation on the Beckett theme” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian praised Terry Hand's "brilliant version" for emphasizing "Genet's delight in the formal ritual of the Mass," and that "sex, power and religion become inextricably intertwined." Tribune called it "visually decorative and verbally sloppy." Times reported, to its surprise, that this was the first public production of the play in London (earlier ones, at the Arts, being confined to club membership).

71.398a Cop-Out (C, 1a) John Guare. TOWER, CANONBURY, 26/11/71. 1st perfd Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theater, Waterford, Connecticut, 7/68; 1st British perf. Cast: TTC. Plot: Bordman/4, 432, MacNicholas, Vinson, Walford. Review: Stage 2/12/71, 17. Comment: Guare's "skill does not prevent his satirical presentation of police mentality from being as cliché-ridden as the work of most of his contemporaries" (Stage). The first New York production (Cort 7/4/69) ran for 8 performances.

71.398b Muzeeka (P, 1a) John Guare. TOWER, CANONBURY, 26/11/71. Cast: TTC. Plot: Hochman, MacNicholas, Walford.

Comment: MPS 329. The third part of the trilogy which also included Rattle of a Simple Man and Staircase. Guardian thought the piece was verbose and the plot thin. "Most certainly a strange, all-in-the-mind play, but never a morbid one, because Dyer writes powerful and amusing dialogue" (Daily Mirror). Variety commended the performances of Roy Dotrice and Beatrix Lehmann.

71.403 Plastic Birthday (P, 1a) John Kane. KING'S HEAD 30/11/71 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 9/12/71, 13. Illona Linthwaite, Peter Dennis, Ian Gelder, Chubby Oates. Dir Paul Alexander. Reviews: Guardian 1/12/71, 8; Observer 5/12/71, 30; Stage 9/12/71, 13; Times 4/12/71, 9. Comment: Soho Theatre. The play "treats of a girl's murder of her illegitimate baby in exuberant vaudeville terms" (Guardian). Like Guardian, Observer noted an indebtedness to Peter Nichols so far as the theme was concerned, but was untroubled by the vaudeville technique. Times pointed to faults in the play, such as the comic routines existing solely for their own sake.

71.404 The Love Songs of Martha Canary (Trilogy) Iain Blair. KING'S HEAD 1/12/71.* Cast: Stage 9/12/71, 13. Boyd MacKenzie, Heather Sears, Maev Alexander. Dir Robert Gillespie. Reviews: Guardian 2/12/71, 10; Stage 9/12/71, 13; Times 2/12/71, 12. Comment: Three one-act plays “concerned with married couples at close quarters, battling for supremacy, loving, detesting, dividing, uniting” (Stage). Times wondered whether the quality of the triplet would be changed if they were played in reserve order.

71.405 Ouch! (F) Edmund Warwick. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 1/12/71.* Cast: Stage 2/12/71, 19. Meriel Fairbairn, Svlvia Carson, Irvin Lycette, Lee Martel, David Beaumont, Wendy Bailey. Pres Jean Pritchard Management Ltd.; Dir Edmund Warwick.

Plot: Bordman/4, 423, Demastes/2, Fletcher, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, Patterson, Salem, Vinson, Weintraub. Reviews: Guardian 3/12/71, 10; Stage 9/12/71, 14; Times 3/12/71, 13. Comment: This revival became “much more painful” (Guardian). For Times the revival worked better than the original production, but was unimpressed by Nichols as a director.

Comment: An attempt to make the play contemporary (Guardian). “Very much in the pop style of Frank Dunlop,” but directed by Peter James (Tribune). A boisterous pop theatre style production in which significant elements get obscured (Times).

71.408 Return the Rain (P) Robin McGee. YOUNG VIC STUDIO 4/12/71. Review: Stage 9/12/71. Comment: Theatre Concern.

Comment: New Statesman did not like Tom Courtenay’s performance, “looking more like Old Mother Riley than a Brazilian grande-dame.” “A rather crude production” (Observer). “A bit rough at the edges and gets off to a slow start. Biggest fault is that too many of the male characters overact like mad” (Daily Mirror). Christian Science Monitor noted “a vein of obstinate melancholy” in Courtenay’s performance and added “the production has a gentleness about it which is very welcome.” Times reported the production met with a “muted response” from the audience.

Comment: The company for this double bill comprised David Champion, Lisa Hughes, Malcolm Ingram, David Leland, Petra Markham, Stephen Turner, Constance Wake. Pres Theatre 84; Dir Doreen Cannon. Amalrik was a Soviet writer serving in a labor camp, his works banned in Russia. "The bland display of so much emotional treachery and political desolation, with Moscow still the far away city, gives the sense of a rare voice finding a rare style" (Guardian).

71.411b The Story of the Little White Bull (P, 1a) Andrei Amalrik (trans Daniel Weissbort). THEATRE 84 7/12/71.* Cast: Stage 16/12/71, 18. Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 9/12/71; apparently there were no previews. Both the direction and the acting were uneven in style (New Statesman). Bill Fraser and Jim Dale performed with "gusto and muscle" (Observer). The production "sagged, I think, because so few of its players seemed to trust their author. A glorious exception was Bill Fraser's massive Croaker" (Illustrated London News). Christian Science Monitor provided evidence John Dexter lacked confidence in the play itself, a view further supported by Spectator. The production remained in repertory until 16/3/72.

Comment: The play was a series of “phantasmagoric images” that revealed the various aspects of the natures of the four children (Guardian). Times thought the surrealistic style worked. “No doubt it is right that visually it should compel. This is not enough, however, when there is so much to listen to, and of this such a large proportion is tedious” (Stage).

71.424 Hello There, What's New (Revue) Barrie Stacey. MERCURY 16/12/71 (Lt).* The Funny Affair, James Chinn, Adam Daye, Kay Barwick, Doreen Barlett, Adrian Wells. Review: Stage 22/12/71, 15. Comment: Grapefruit Productions, Aurora Productions. The revue was “more of a showcase for some of the artists represented by Barrie Stacey, who devised the production” (Stage).

London News 1/2/72, 55; New Statesman 24/12/71, 904; Stage 22/12/71, 13; Times 17/12/71, 9. Comment: “A black panto, a sexual fantasy, outrageous farce,” and much more that’s difficult to pin down (Daily Mirror). Guardian said the characters and plot had an Orton-esque flavor as “apparently normal conventional people take each other’s deviations and dishonesties in their stride.” Charles Lewsen, critic for Times for this production, had (unhappily) directed Orton’s Loot, and made numerous comparisons between this play and Orton; he also commended the “gifted cast.”

Comment: Guardian confessed its dislike of “children’s theatre,” but said this piece was “pleasant enough of its kind.” “The show is generally perfunctory, listless” (Times).

71.427 The Extraordinary Case of the Kipper and the Café (P for children) Gregory Marshall. ARTS 18/12/71 (m).* Cast: Stage 13/1/72, 15. Reviews: Stage 13/1/72, 14–15; Times 24/12/71, 5. Comment: MPS 319. Unicorn Theatre. The piece dealt, “if only superficially, with events in a country run by Generals threatened by student revolutionaries” (Times).

Comment: Observer (19/12) described the plot as the “eternal triangle with a chimpanzee as hypotenuse.” “An evening for wallowing with Sandy and his simply darling cast ... all good fun ... the mockery lovely and thick” (Guardian). A “piece of camp nostalgia ... some pruning wouldn’t hurt” (Variety). Stage generally approved of the piece but thought up to thirty minutes could be cut.

Comment: Observer declared the script was appalling, but that did not matter because of all the other elements of the production. Times listed all the big names to head the production which followed on more or less traditional lines. “Cinderella receives a £110,000 face-lift ... It’s the most expensive pantomime ever produced. And it looks like it. Ronnie Corbett is the perfect Buttons winsome, cuddlesome and, at times, very funny ... On the debit list the sound amplification system needs an overhaul” (Daily Mirror).

Comment: National Theatre. The production ran nearly four hours with one interval. “This Tyrone [Olivier], never out of key, never out of character, is the creation of a great artist; acted from within, not simply superimposed; consistent in detail; astonishing in sudden flash-and-outbreak when the voice seems to be clawing desperately at space. It is the vocal command that so distinguishes Olivier” (Illustrated London News). “A superlative, spine-tingling performance by Olivier,” well supported by Ronald Pickup, Constance Cummings, and Denis Quilley (Guardian). “A triumph ... Michael Blakemore’s penetrating direction and the superb playing, with generally good American accents” (Variety). Spectator praised every aspect of the production extensively, as did Christian Science Monitor. Times said the high standard of the production reconfirmed this as America’s greatest play. The production remained in repertory until 8/9/73. The first New York production of this Pulitzer Prize winning play (Helen Hayes 7/11/56) ran for 390 performances.

Comment: Apparently the first usage of "Iris Glow" in place of the traditional "Jenny Wren" for Tinkerbell. A thoroughly restaged production, "delightfully directed by Robert Helpmann ... Tutin is the consummate Peter Pan" (Guardian). Times had hoped Robert Helpmann would inject new life into the play but had failed to do so.

72.1 The Yeomen of the Guard; or, The Merryman and His Maid (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 3/1/72. Plot: Ayre, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

72.2 Alice in Wonderland (P) Anon (adpt of Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, 1865). COCKPIT 4/1/72 (m). Reviews: Guardian 5/1/72, 8; New Statesman 14/1/72, 58; Observer 9/1/72, 30; Times 5/1/72, 6. Comment: Pip Simmons Theatre Group. Guardian called the piece a "pointless rampage through the book violating its narrative enchantment without putting anything in its place." "A disappointing cropper" (Observer).

72.3 Genesis (C) Roy Kift. COCKPIT 4/1/72.* Cast: Stage 9/12/71, 17. Neil Johnston, Paola Dionisotti. Dir Nancy Meckler. Reviews: Guardian 5/1/72, 8; New Statesman 14/1/72, 58; Observer 9/1/72, 30; Stage 13/1/72, 11; Times 5/1/72, 6. Comment: Freehold Company. "Takes three of the most potent biblical myths—Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel and Noah's Ark—and attempts to distill that essence through a combination of words, music and movement" (Guardian). Observer noted the performers "use words almost as an appendage to the choreography, to point out flaws in communication and stumbling blocks to expression." Times noted an unacknowledged indebtedness to Jean-Claude van Italie's The Serpent.

72.4 The Trial (P, 1a) Steven Berkoff (adpt of Franz Kafka's novel, 1925). LAMDA 4/1/72. K Bill Stewart; Steven Berkoff, Boyd C. Mackenzie, Jeannie James, Steven Williams. Dir Steven Berkoff. Plot: French/2. Review: Times 5/1/72, 6. Comment: London Theatre Group. "Facetiousness dominates" (Times).

72.5a Cox and Box (Oa, 1a) [J.] Maddison Morton (lib)

and F. C. Burnand (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 6/1/72. Michael Rayner, Ralph Mason, John Ayldon. Plot: Ayre, Gänzl. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 15. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

72.5b The Pirates of Penzance; or, The Slave of Duty (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 6/1/72. Major-General Stanley Howard Williamson; Frederic Colin Wright; Mabel Julia Goss; Pirate King John Ayldon; Ruth Lyndsie Holland; Sergeant of Police Arthur Jackson. Plot: Ayre, Bordman, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 15. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. An uneven performance and with some lighting difficulties in the second act (Stage).

72.6a Johnny Royal (P) Bob Graham. KINDRED CENTRE 7/1/72. 1st perf? Harry Ditson, Teresa d'Abreau, Karin Dominic, Bernard Boston, Mark Russel. Dir Kate Quinlan. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 17. Comment: Performed under the collective title Two for the Angel. "A free-ranging study of an American draftee and his death in battle, examining with ruthless energy the truth behind the clichés of public and private behaviour under various forms of stress" (Stage).

72.6b Orders from the 14th Dictator (C) Richard Browner. KINDRED CENTRE 7/1/72. 1st perf? Stan Donal Cox; Pearl Karin Dominic. Dir Bob Graham. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 17. Comment: Performed under the collective title Two for the Angel. "A comedy with a Jewish flavour, showing in past, present and future technique the development and destruction of a love affair between the pleasant, easy-going Stan and his Pearl, the 32 year-old baby of a matriarch-dominated family of thirteen children" (Stage).

72.7 Pins and Needles (Mus) Harold Rome (mus, lyr)

and Bernard Sarron (bk). UNITY 7/1/72. 1st perfd Labor Stage, New York, 14/6/36; 1st British perf? Ulysses Windon St. John, Perry Kaye, Vanessa Harris, Jacqueline Blackmore, Lou Raynes, Andy Pantelidou, Maggie Bowman, Bob Bowman. Dir Bernard Sarron; Ch Ulysses Windon St. John. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/5, 506–07, Shipley, Wilmeth. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 17. Comment: “More important, perhaps, as a piece of trades union history than a contribution to the American musical theatre ... nevertheless an engaging show” (Stage).

72.8a Harlequinade (C) Terence Rattigan. HAYMARKET 10/1/72. 1 midnight perf. 1st perfd Royal Court, Liverpool, 26/7/48. Plot: Bordman/4, 284, Demastes/1, Hischak, Loney, 258, Rusinko, 69–70, Walford. Comment: In honor of Terence Rattigan, and in aid of the Combined Theatrical Charities.

72.8b Separate Tables: Table Number Seven (P, 1a) Terence Rattigan. HAYMARKET 10/1/72. 1 midnight perf. 1st perfd Royal Court, Liverpool, 23/8/54. Plot: Best/56, 77, Bordman/4, 339, Demastes/1, Fletcher, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Rusinko, 87–90, Salem, Shank, Vinson, Walford. Comment: In honor of Terence Rattigan, and in aid of the Combined Theatrical Charities.

72.9a HMS Pinafore; or, The Lass That Loved a Sailor (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER’S WELLS 10/1/72. Sir Joseph Porter John Reed; Josephine Linda Anne Hutchison; Rackstraw Ralph Mason; Captain Corcoran Michael Rayner; Boat-swain Jon Ellison; Hebe Pauline Wales; Little Buttercup Lyndsie Holland. Cond Royston Nash. Plot: Ayre, Bordman, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 15. Comment: D’Oyly Carte Opera Company. The production introduced “some splendidly new comic business which fitted into the traditional lampoon like the proverbial hand into glove” (Stage).

72.9b Trial by Jury (CO) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER’S WELLS 10/1/72. Judge John Reed; Plaintiff Linda Anne Hutchison. Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Shipley, Sobel. Review: Stage 20/1/72, 15. Comment: D’Oyly Carte Opera Company.

72.10 Sinclair (P, 1a) John McGahern. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 10/1/72 (Ln). 1st perfd BBC Radio-3 16/11/71; 1st stage perf. Gillespie Maurice Brookes; Boles Bill Mitchell. Dir Jonathan Burn; Dgn Barbara Painter. Reviews: Stage 20/1/72, 17; Times 12/1/72, 7. Comment: Quipu. A “benighted bogland duologue,” atrociously performed (Times).

72.11a Deathwatch (D, 1a) Jean Genet (trans Bernard Frechtman of Haute surveillance, 1949). TOWER, CANONBURY, 14/1/72. Cast: TTC. Plot: French/2, Gunn, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Walford.

72.11b The Maids (P, 1a) Jean Genet (trans Bernard Frechtman of Les bonnes, 1947). TOWER, CANONBURY, 14/1/72. Cast: TTC. Plot: French/2, Gassner, Hochman, Kabatchnik/2, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Walford.

72.12 The Gondoliers; or, The King of Barataria (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER’S WELLS 17/1/72. Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D’Oyly Carte Opera Company.

72.13 Company (MC, 2a) Stephen Sondheim (mus, lyr) and George Furth (bk). HER MAJESTY’S 18/1/72. 344 perf. 1st perfd Shubert, Boston, 24/3/70; 1st British perf. Cast: Theatricalia; Variety 9/2/72, 72; WWT/16. Robert Larry Kert; Sarah Marti Stevens; Harry Kenneth Kimmins/Robert Colman; Susan Joy Franz/Connie Booth; Peter J. T. D. Ryan; Light Robert Ormbo; Sound David Collision; Mus arr Jonathan Tunick, Wally Harper; Mus dir Gareth Davies; Mus consultant Harold Hastings. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/5, 669, Fletcher, Gänzl, Kennedy, Loney, OTF, Wilmeth. Reviews: Birmingham Post 21/1/72, 2; Christian Science Monitor 26/1/72, 4; Guardian 19/1/72, 8; Illustrated London News 1/3/72, 58; Observer 23/1/72, 27; Spectator 29/1/72, 165; Stage 27/1/72, 13, 27/4/72, 11; Times 19/1/72, 10, 21/4/72, 9; Tribune 4/2/72, 11; Variety 9/2/72, 72. Comment: MPS 337. “Superlatively good, not least because it puts the American musical back in touch with real life”; “A group achievement” (Guardian). “The first night’s applause for every song was prodigious” (Christian Science Monitor). Spectator qualified its rapture for the piece, and noted its theme would not appeal to the coach party crowds. Variety echoed the same point: “a deliberate pitch to the West End elite rather than the out-of-towners trade.” The first New York production (Alvin 26/4/70) ran for 705 performances.

72.14 Sweet Mr. Shakespeare (Anthology) Richard Digby Day. YOUNG VIC 19/1/72. 1st perfd Playhouse, Nottingham, 2/64. Comment: "The production involves all the members of the company. The entertainment is about Shakespeare but not a word of his work is used. It deals with the rise and fall and rise again of the Shakespeare myth, in the words, actions and productions of friends and enemies of the last 400 years" (Stage 30/12/71, 1).

72.15 Byron (One-man P) Nicholas Petrides. ARTS 20/1/72.* 40 perf. John Stuart Anderson. Review: Stage 27/1/72, 14.

72.16 The Strange Case of Martin Richter (P, 2a) Stanley Eveling. QUESTORS 22/1/72. Cast: QTA. Plot: Vinson. Reviews: Acton Gazette 3/2/72, 6; Middlesex County Times 28/1/72, 11.

72.17a From the First Day Out (P) Chris Bailey. ALMOST FREE 24/1/72 (Ln).* Jim Hiley. Dir Jim Hiley.

72.18 The Island of Slaves (C) Pierre de Marivaux (adpt Michael Hucks of La colonie, ou l'homme sans souci, 1729). LAMB AND FLAG 24/1/72 (Ln). 1st London perf this adpt. Cast: Stage 20/1/72, 10. Robert Gary, Sally Knyvette, Vivian Mackerrell, Paul Neuizie, Barrie Shore. Dir Michael Hucks; Dgn Claire Lyth. Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 3/2/72, 17. Comment: Recreation Ground. "Stylish performances, notably by Robert Gary, Barrie Shore and Sally Knyvette, made this an entertaining trifle" (Stage).

72.19 Mutatis Mutandis (C of menace) David Campton. ORANGE TREE 24/1/72 (Ln). 1st perfd Municipal Hall, Newcastle-under-Lyme, 30/1/60. Glyn Worsnip, Carol Nimmons, Diana Payan. Dir Caroline Smith. Plot: Vinson. Review: Stage 3/2/72, 17. Comment: Richmond Fringe. "Caroline Smith's direction revealed her awareness of the strangely poetic flavour of the dialogue and reflected it in controlled changes of pace" (Stage).

72.20 Ride a Cock Horse (P) David Mercer. HAMPSTEAD 24/1/72. Cast: WWT/16. Peter John Hurt; Nan Barbara Laurenson; Myra Sylvia Kay; Ingrid Sarah Leyton; Fanny Angela Richards. Dir Brian Murray; Dec John Hallé; Light Howard Eldridge. Plot: Hirschak/2, 144, Hochman, Weintraub. Reviews: Birmingham Post 25/1/72, 2; Observer 30/1/72, 30; Stage 3/2/72, 19; Times 25/1/72, 11; Tribune 4/2/72, 11. Comment: Tribune

mused it was ironic that the so-called sexual revolution "should spawn only a theatre of misogyny." While the play had faults, it was poorly directed by Brian Murray, and John Hurt had yet to settle into his role (Times).

72.21 The Thompson Report (P) Peter Ransley. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 24/1/72 (Ln).* Chairman André Van Gyseghem; Q. C. Hugh Manning; Jeremy Child, Alan Cullen. Dir Richard Wilson. Review: Stage 3/2/72, 17. Comment: Quipu. The play concerned "the summing-up stage of an investigation into allegations of cruelty to terrorists under interrogation" (Stage).

72.22 John Gould (One-man ent) Jonathan Lynn (deviser) and Alan Bennett and John Betjeman and J. B. Boothroyd and John Gould and Bill Oddie and Michael Palin and David Wood. GREENWICH 25/1/72. Cast: WWT/16. John Gould. Pres WSG Productions; Dir Jonathan Lynn; Dec Susie Caulcutt.

72.23 Jumpers (C, 2a) Tom Stoppard. OLD VIC 25/1/72.* 132 perf. Cast: NTA; Stage 10/2/72, 13; Theatricalia; Variety 23/2/72, 66; WWT/16. Dottie Diana Rigg; Secretary Anna Carteret; Crouch Paul Curran; George Michael Horden; Bones David Ryall; Archie Graham Crowden; Scott Desmond McNamara; Clegthorpe David Howey; Jumpers Ray Callaghan, Tom Dickinson, Michael Edgar, Tom Georgeson, Lionel Guyett, Brian Jameson, Desmond McNamara, Riggs O'Hara, Howard Southern, Harry Waters. Dir Peter Wood; Dec Patrick Robertson; Cost dgn Rosemary Vercoe; Mus Marc Wilkinson; Light Robert Bryan. Plot: Best/73, 257, Demastes/2, Fletcher, Hirschak, Hirschak/2, 73-74, Hochman, Law, Loney, Patterson, Salem, Vinson, Weintraub. Reviews: Birmingham Post 3/2/72, 2; Christian Science Monitor 11/2/72, 4; Daily Mirror 3/2/72, 16; Guardian 3/2/72, 10; Illustrated London News 1/4/72, 57; New Statesman 11/2/72, 185-86; Observer 6/2/72, 31; Spectator 12/2/72, 245; Stage 10/2/72, 13; Times 3/2/72, 13; Tribune 18/2/72, 11; Variety 23/2/72, 66. Comment: MPS 408. National Theatre. Press night was 2/2/72. Guardian listed numerous sources that had influenced Stoppard's "dazzling ... heady brew ... a comedy with brains." Observer had reservations about the occasionally "over-literary" writing and some thin characterizations, but enjoyed the extravaganza. "The wit of the play is sparking; its speed and unexpectedness of thought are exceptionally stimulating" (Christian Science Monitor). New Statesman noted how densely packed the text was and that it required really careful listening to make full sense of it all. "This philosophical farce may do well with elite audiences and perhaps the young, but may worry the in-between 'average' theatre-goers" (Variety). "More good lines a minute than any other modern comedy now on show" (Times). See also Lloyd Evans, 185–87. The production remained in repertory until 5/7/73. The first New York production (Billy Rose 22/4/74) ran for 48 performances.

72.24 Offending the Audience (D, 1a) Peter Handke (anon trans of Publikumsbeschimpfung, 1966). ALMOST FREE 25/1/72. 1st London perf. Plot: Griffiths, Hochman, Patterson. Reviews: Birmingham Post 27/1/72, 2; Christian Science Monitor 7/2/72, 4; Guardian 25/1/72, 15, 26/1/72, 8; Observer 30/1/72, 30; Times 26/1/72, 10. Comment: Inter-Action/TOC. The point of the piece was to upset conventional ideas of what constitutes theatre, but it was "riddled with self-defeating paradoxes," and did not really offend the audience (Guardian 26/1). Christian Science Monitor agreed. Times did not understand the purpose of endlessly repeated words and phrases, but still called the production "necessary viewing for anyone interested in theatrical new directions."

72.25 Alpha Beta (P, 3a) E. A. Whitehead. COURT 26/1/72; trfd to APOLLO 16/3/72.* 120 perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 3/2/72, 15; Theatricalia; Variety 9/2/72, 72; WWT/16. Mr. Elliot Albert Finney; Mrs. Elliot Rachel Roberts. Dir Anthony Page; Dgn Alan Tagg; Light Andy Phillips; Assist dir Alan Lewis Jones; Dsm Stuart Scott; Asm John Walford; Cost supervisor Lucinda Alliston; Sc bld E. Babbage and Co.; Sc John Campbell Designs Ltd. Plot: Bull/3, Vinson. Reviews: Birmingham Post 27/1/72, 2; Christian Science Monitor 7/2/72, 4; Daily Mirror 27/1/72, 16; Guardian 27/1/72, 8; Illustrated London News 1/3/72, 58; Observer 30/1/72, 30, 20/3/72, 35; New Statesman 4/2/72, 152–53; Spectator 5/2/72, 206; Stage 3/2/72, 15; Times 27/1/72, 11; Tribune 4/2/72, 11; Variety 9/2/72, 72. Comment: English Stage Company. Albert Finney and Rachel Roberts gave "superb performances" (Christian Science Monitor). Guardian thought the play's real theme concerned the Catholic stranglehold over working-class morality. New Statesman commended the play's "wit, intelligence, linguistic verve," but said it should be seen mainly for the performances of Finney and Roberts. Times found a lack of thoroughgoing characterization as seen in the lack of "character-defining speech patterns." "An obvious candidate for a West End move-over" (Variety). "Whitehead leaves us without word of comfort, or suggestion that all may be well ... The husband in Alpha Beta calls marriage one of the few surviving forms of ritual slaughter" (Illustrated London News). The first New York production was at the Eastside Playhouse 3/5/73.

72.26 Handy for the Heath (Revue) Rogers and Starr. HAMPSTEAD 26/1/72, 1/3/72 (Lt).* Roy Starr, Michael Rogers, Antonia Ellis. Plot: OTF/2. Reviews: Guardian

31/1/72, 10; Spectator 11/3/72, 406; Stage 3/2/72, 15, 9/3/72, 17. Comment: Unlike most drag shows, Rogers and Starr "pay as much attention to the material they perform as the sort they wear. Their present show might claim to be the dirtiest in town; but it is also one of the funniest" (Guardian).

72.27 In the Jungle of the Cities (D, 11 sc) Bertolt Brecht (trans Gerhard Nellhaus of Im Dickicht der Städte, 1923) and Kurt Weill (mus). HALF MOON 27/1/72. Cast: SHM. Shlink Peter Gordon; George Garga Michael Irving; John Garga Maurice Colbourne; Mae Garga Mary Sheen; Mary Garga Sue Lefton; Jane Larry Alison King; Skinny Will Knightley; Collie Couch John Plume; J. Finney David Stockton; Pat Manky Drewe Henley; Salvation Army Preacher Alex Leppard; Barman John Hornsby; C. Maynes John Taylor; Gentleman Jeffrey Hooper. Dir Guy Sprung; Dgn Claire Sorrell; Light Marshal Goodhew; Sound David Dormand. Plot: French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Patterson. Review: Times 14/2/72, 15. Comment: The opening production of the new theatre in Alie Street. In an uneven production Times found merit in "Claire Sorrell's splendid set," and the performances of Michael Irving and Peter Gordon.

72.28 The Price of Justice (D, 2a) Albert Camus (trans Robert Baldick of Les justes, 1949). MERMAID 27/1/72. 1st London perf this trans. Cast: Stage 3/2/72, 18; Variety 9/2/72, 72; WWT/16. Dora Dulebov Kate Coleridge; Boris Annenkov John Harwood; Stepan Fedorov Gary Raymond; Alexis Voinov Colin Baker; Ivan Kaliayev Leigh Lawson; Guard William-Huw Thomas; Foka James Berwick; Skouratov Michael Burrell; Grand-Duchess Josephine Wilson. Dir Bernard Miles; Assist dir Alan Strachan; Dgn Bernard Culshaw; Light David Adams. Plot: Matlaw. Reviews: Birmingham Post 28/1/72, 2; Christian Science Monitor 7/2/72, 4; Guardian 28/1/72, 8; New Statesman 4/2/72, 153; Observer 30/1/72, 30; Stage 3/2/72, 18; Tribune 11/2/72, 11; Variety 9/2/72, 72. Comment: Christian Science Monitor said the play's theme was not developed enough and the play was really "like an old-fashioned melodrama." New Statesman agreed, and said the production was "strained, dogged."

72.29 Ruddigore; or, The Witch's Curse (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 27/1/72. Plot: Ayre, Gänzl, Hochman, Shipley. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

72.30 Juno and the Paycock (P, 3a) Sean O'Casey. TOWER, CANONBURY, 28/1/72. Cast: TTC. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Schrank, Scrimgeour, 73–86, Shank, Shipley, Sobel.

72.31 All Over (D, 2a) Edward Albee. ALDWYCH 31/1/72. 26 perf. 1st perfd Martin Beck, New York, 27/3/71; 1st British perf. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian discussed various themes in the play but said Albee's weakness was "his refusal to let the characters ever take over"; the production was "immaculately calculated." "Much of it seems awfully remote from real life" (New Statesman). Observer and Variety admired Peter Hall's direction and the performances of Peggy Ashcroft and Angela Lansbury. Spectator found the play cold and deadly, unlikely to appeal to the average playgoer; the direction was "carefully portentous." The New York production ran for 40 performances.

72.32 Iolanthe; or, The Peer and the Peri (Fairy O, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 31/1/72. Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

72.33 Never the Twain (Ent) John Willett (compiler) and Duncan Druce (mus). GREENWICH 31/1/72; trfd to MERMAID 16/2/72. 1st perfd Gardner Centre, Brighton, 5/70. Cast: WWT/16. Comment: A compilation of songs and verse by Rudyard Kipling and Bertolt Brecht. "Altogether a rich idea, splendidly realized" (Times).

72.34a Death in Instalments (P, 1a) Janusz Krasinski (trans Edward Rothert). THEATRE 84 1/2/72. 1st British perf BBC Radio-3 23/6/68; 1st British stage perf. Cast: Stage 27/1/72, 8. Richardson Morgan, Donald Sumpter. Dir Philip Allen-Morgan. Review: Stage 17/2/72, 18.

Comment: "About two murderers who confess to another murder each time they are about to be executed and thus receive a stay of execution, is both entertaining and illustrative of the strong desire one has to live regardless of circumstance" (Stage).

72.34b The Witnesses (P, 1a) Tadeusz Rozewicz (anon trans of wiadkowie albo nasza mala stabilizacja, 1962). THEATRE 84 1/2/72. 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 27/1/72, 8. Donald Sumpter, Malcolm Ingram. Dir Philip Allen-Morgan. Review: Stage 17/2/72, 18. Comment: "The message of passive acceptance and non-involvement is obvious. But the play itself is an over-long conglomeration of meaningless symbolic words and expressions. It seemed very much an exercise without point" (Stage).

Comment: About the Moors Murders committed by Ian Brady and Myra Hindley. A preview performance was given at the University of London Union on 24/1/72 (see Guardian 26/1/72, 8, 3/2/72, 10). Some of the scenes "relate details in the personal lives of Ian Brady and Myra Hindley; others aim to show them as products of a whole social malaise" (Times).

Comment: Dolphin Theatre Company. Tribune said the production was "workmanlike, unambiguous," but lamented the large gap between such productions and the prestigious ones at the Old Vic and Aldwych which only the wealthy or dedicated attended. "Very stodgy" (Observer). A "plain, honest bred and butter" production somewhat lacking in lyricism and imagination (Birmingham Post).

"Rather muddled socially and sometimes falls over itself in crude slapstick" (Observer). However, Times found the direction too genial at times. "Wendy Toye has allowed [Goldsmith] to speak without distortion, and he is honoured by the mercurial mischief of Denise Coffey's Kate, the authority of Nicky Henson's Young Marlow, and the old-tankard gloss of Richard Pearson's Hardcastle" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Stage observed the play "has a slightly old-fashioned air; this is not simply because it takes place among the blitz rubble of an elegant town house and the people are the shadows, ghosts if you like, of the family who died as the bombs rained down and their house guests."

72.43 A Murder Has Been Arranged (Ghost Story, 3a) Emlyn Williams. RICHMOND 7/2/72. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Kabatchnik/2, Salem. Comment: The production replaced a canceled production of Stalag 17. A two week engagement.

Press night was 14/2/72. New Statesman provided an account of the plot about "a hick company from Yorkshire" playing Feydeau in the Amazonian jungle. "None of it is earnest enough to gather the momentum of real farce" (Observer). Disparagingly Times described the piece as "a great big romp in which nobody wants anything very much and nothing need make sense." Illustrated London News viewed the piece favorably.

Comment: Griffiths "writes dazzlingly and specifically about working-class life but hazily and conventionally about the middle-classes" (Guardian). New Statesman described it as "an uneasy comedy," with some funny writing, but derivative in places. Christian Science Monitor said the theme was handled with "resilience and inventiveness," and the play was "cleverly directed." Times found aspects of the production to admire, but lamented Griffiths was not fulfilling his earlier promise of becoming "a genuinely public dramatist."

Comment: Guardian (11/2) liked the "fairground and merry-go-round" set by Patrick Robertson, said the revival had "plenty of talent," but found the translation awkward. "Like seeing a newly minted masterpiece. It makes most musicals trundled into London over the past few years look as gauche and soppy as pantomimes in rhyming couplets" (Observer 13/2). Times lauded the piece itself which was given "a smart, slick, punchy production of the kind which invites applause as each star appears," but still had some reservations.

Comment: MPS 335. Guardian described the play as “almost unbearably snobbish, vulgar and sentimental,” the only pleasure being the performances of Margaret Leighton, Michael Aldridge, and Charles Lloyd Pack. Observer was more tolerant of the play’s snobbery. Variety noted the play was an anachronism, and the main appeal of the production was the cast. Times described it as a typical Tennent management production: “a comfortable message for middle-aged spectators and an infatuated respect for the nobility.” “All a little bit dated? Well, yes, it is in parts and, the rather stodgy first act gives no hint of the splendid fooling to be seen in the second act” (Daily Mirror). “Deserves its resurrection and its public, though no doubt Robert Sherwood’s style and craft may puzzle deprived young playgoers new to them” (Illustrated London News). The first New York production (Martin Beck 16/11/31) ran for 264 performances.

Comment: The piece was set in African Barotseland. New Statesman thought some of the transposition and updating worked but questioned why the tragedy needed updating at all. "Sacrificed the verse which is what matters, above all things—to often shouting melodrama" (Illustrated London News). Guardian (24/2) opined Peter Coe should have transformed Shakespeare's work completely. Spectator agreed: "The validity of putting Macbeth into an African tribal setting is everywhere apparent, but the possibilities are only superficially realised." "A bright idea," but nothing more (Times).

Comment: MPS 350. Christian Science Monitor declared it was absurd this "ridiculous melodrama" was staged at all. Observer pointed out that Muschamp was pronounced "Moo-shong," and offered its condolences to the cast for appearing in the piece. "A preposterous play which falls into every trap lying in the path of the boulevard-politico and digs a few new ones of its own" (Times).

72.70 Edgar Allan Poe (Lecture, 2a) Tony Parkin. PINDAR OF WAKEFIELD 27/2/72.*

Comment: Some funny jokes, "intermittently snappy dialogue ... even thinner than" Hare's "overrated" Slag (New Statesman). Guardian noted Hare described his play as "a parody of all Court-type plays"; however, it was "too full of echoes of other men's work" expressed rancorously. "The plot ... [is] no more than a foolish device to accommodate the witty author's acerbity" (Spectator). "Perfectly exemplifies Martin Walser's comment that most of what passes for political drama amounts to an internal bourgeois monologue" (Times).

Doreen Mantle gave “the most shattering performance to be seen in London” (Guardian). Christian Science Monitor declared the play was “a veritable masterpiece.” Times praised the play for Trevor’s “literate perception,” and its “considerable resonance.” Times said the troupe was good at providing graphic images but “thinness of content” was its weakness.

72.76 Mary Mary (P) Roy Kift. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 1/3/72.* Cast: Findlater; WWT/16. Marty Cruickshank, Paola Dionisotti, Mike Harley, Neil Johnston, Wolf Kahler, Christopher Ravenscroft, Jennie Stoller, Ruth Tansey. Dir Nancy Meckler; Light Nick Hepple. Reviews: Observer 5/3/72, 31; Stage 9/3/72, 20; Times 2/3/72, 11. Comment: Freehold Company. The piece was “a collage of confusion in the mind of a juvenile murderer” which avoided potential pitfalls (Observer). Mary is “a pretty nasty little bitch whose suffering, though attributed to all the usual social scapegoats, seems to be more in the nature of demonic possession” (Stage).

Comment: Daily Mirror noted the play was treated in “broadly comic style”: “Laughter? Gales of it. What about the brooding Pinter menace, the sense of unease, the pregnant pauses? Not evident in this production. This revised version could pack the customers in at the Palladium.” Observer commended the cast’s performances. Irish Times praised Christopher Morahan’s direction and the cast. “Everything works in this excellent revival” (Variety). Times compared this production in detail with the original by Peter Hall.

72.78 The Deformed Transformed (P) George Gordon Byron. ROUND HOUSE 2/3/72 (Lt).* Paul O’Connor, Bronson Shaw, Nigel Watson, Teresa D’Abrua. Dir Steven Rumbelow. Review: Stage 9/3/72, 19. Comment: Triple Action Theatre Group. “It is a sort of Faustian bastard, with a hunchback making a deal with the devil amid the horrors of the sixteenth century wars of religion, and Steven Rumbelow ... has added a scene of redemption at death culled from the last part of Manfred” (Stage).

72.79 Kataki (D, 2a) Shimon Wincelberg. DARK AND LIGHT 2/3/72. 1st perfd Walnut Street, Philadelphia, 30/3/59; 1st British perf? Reviews: Stage 9/3/72, 20; Times 4/3/72, 9. Comment: The play “concerns an American and a Japanese soldier who are marooned on an island and have to learn to live together” (Stage 2/3/72, 19). Comment: The first New York production (Ambassador 9/4/59) ran for 20 performances.

72.80 The Performing Husband (C, 2a) Donald Churchill. GREENWICH 2/3/72.* Cast: WWT/16. The play “takes us, unrewardingly, into a suburban world of commuter trains, golf, female matter and constant marital infidelity” (New Statesman). Times was “repelled by the drabness of the characters.”

72.81 Jibes. KINDRED CENTRE 3/3/72. Comment: Three plays by Michael Almaz, Kate Quillan, Frank Wyman, possibly Almaz, Paper Tiger, Quillan, Scream, and Wyman, A Game for Three Players.

72.85 The Damnation of Faust (P) Steven Rumbelow (based on Christopher Marlowe and Johann Wolfgang von Goethe). MERCURY c. 6/3/72. Faustus Bronson Shaw; Mephistopheles Nigel Watson. Review: Stage 16/3/72, 14. Comment: Triple Action Theatre Group. "Played as a two-hander, it suits the tiny Mercury well enough, and the words shine through the gloom on stage rather less fettered by gymnastics than in other of Steven Rumbelow's concoctions" (Stage).

72.86 Impromptus for Leisure (P) René de Obaldia (trans Donald Watson of Sept impromptus à loisir, 1957). THEATRE 84 6/3/72. 1st British perf? Cast: Stage 24/2/72, 19. Davilia David, Lisa Hughes, Selina Lucas, George Bazeley, David Robson, Jonathan Turner. Dir Doreen Cannon, Philip Allen-Morgan. Review: Stage 16/3/72, 14. "Pleasantly diverting and amusing, though it's doubtful if it's anything more. Some people might find significance in these three short plays, in the twists of nonsense sentences and in the exaggerated actions, but, basically, they come across as intellection-alised goon-pieces" (Stage).

72.87 The Last of the Feinsteins (P) Tony Connor. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 6/3/72 (Ln). 1st perf? Bridget Turner, Jack Shepherd. Dir Richard Wilson. Reviews: Guardian 7/3/72, 10; Stage 16/3/72, 14. Comment: Quipu. The play was about a prisoner and a female guard from an extermination camp meeting years later. Stage found the piece potentially interesting but ultimately boring.

72.88a High in Vietnam, Hot Damn (P) Bernard Pomerance. ALMOST FREE 7/3/72 (Ln). Cast: Stage 9/3/72, 16. Review: Stage 16/3/72, 14. Comment: Inter-Action Productions. The company for all three plays comprised Glenn Beck, Tran Cong Danh, Susan Drury, Mildred Mayne, Bill Nagy, Richard Pendrey, Mark Russell, Corinne Skinner, Eric Young. Dir Roland Rees. "Powerful writing and strong performances, notably from Richard Pendrey, Glenn Beck, Bill Nagy, Mildred Mayne and Susan Drury, give this trio of plays a significance out of proportion to their length, and offering an honest comment on some of the causes of the gradual collapse of our civilisation" (Stage).

Pickets* John Tordoff; Mrs. Nugget, Dr. Langton Carole Boyd; Chou Chin Mao Bob McDonald; Reporter Vicky Ireland. Dir Frederick Proud; Dgn Deborah Mitchell, Dermot Hayes; Sm Paolo Lurati. Reviews: Guardian 10/3/72, 10; Observer 12/3/72, 29; Stage 23/3/72, 7; Times 9/3/72, 13. Comment: Soho Poly Theatre was formerly the Soho Theatre. It had moved to new premises at 16 Riding House St., W1 (Polytechnic of Central London). The plot concerned a man on trial for the murder of his wife when she dies as a result of his penis turning into a dragon. Guardian pointed out the play's concerns with prim society's behavior, attitudes, fixations; Nigel Hawthorne gave a good performance. "To make a political point, Mr. Spencer stretches his material to snapping point" (Times).

Comment: "An evening of ineffable annoyance" caused by Grillo's lack of talent in attempting to write "some sort of satirical fantasy" (Spectator). Observer was slightly more impressed by the first half of the piece which "goes along in quite a jolly seaside way.” Times also said the play was jolly, but did not know what Grillo “was driving at.”

72.92 Veterans (C, 2a) Charles Wood. COURT 9/3/72. 1st perfd Royal Lyceum, Edinburgh, 1/2/72. Comment: English Stage Company. “An affectionate, frequently hilarious parody of the behaviour of respected actors on film locations. Wood knows his subject” (Daily Mirror). “Confirms that [Wood] handles words with rigorous poetic precision and that he has a superb mastery of atmosphere” (Guardian). Gielgud was marvelous as Sir Geoffrey Kendle, a role based on himself, “no one else could mimic this much-mimicked actor half so well” (Observer). Variety thought “much of the humor depends on inside-the-profession references,” an opinion seconded by Christian Science Monitor. Times declared the piece was not “a coterie entertainment.” Tribune, noting that the Court seemed to be losing its way, said the play was “a rambling anecdote” that could have opened just as well in a main West End theatre.

Comment: Oxford and Cambridge Shakespeare Company. Observer objected to the contemporary “desperate search for novelty” when staging Shakespeare. “Cerebral and slow, a top-level debate ... that occurs, oddly, inside what appears to be a surreal, timeless dream” (New Statesman). “An Antony cannot really play the Forum scene to a line of masked zombies” (Illustrated London News). “A bore” (Tribune). After noting Caesar was dressed “in a white frock-coat and topper, while the underlings make do with leotards and ballet shoes,” Spectator concluded, “It is stylised and passionless, and roughly as stimulating as a few grains of nembutal.”

Comment: MPS 358. "In this pompous and pretentious piece [Marcus] is completely off form" (Christian Science Monitor). Guardian commended performances by Julia Foster and Nigel Davenport. Variety said the play was uneven, "often intelligently amusing," with skillful acting. Times said the dialogue was cliché-ridden, and Robin Phillips's production did not make clear what were real events and what fantasy. "Deserves a long career. We rarely get a comedy so poised, so warmly perceptive; it has, moreover, the bounties of Irene Worth as dramatist-in-charge and Julia Foster and Nigel Davenport as the characters in whom instinct must defeat conscious manipulation" (Illustrated London News).

72.109 The Centaur (P) Jonathan Hales. COURT 26/3/72.* 1 perf. 30/3/72, 15. Comment: A "glance at the seamier side of the entertainment industry" (Stage).

72.111 Dial "M" for Murder (Thriller, 3a) Frederick Knott. WIMBLEDON 27/3/72. Tony Wendice David Davenport; Sheila Wendice Patricia Temple; Chief Inspector Hubbard Bill Shine; Peter Russell, Allen Weston. Plot: Best/52, 90, Bord-man/4, 309, Fletcher, French, Hischak, Loney, 277, Salem.

72.112a Doctor Galley (P) Conrad Bromberg. SOHO POLY 27/3/72 (Ln). Dr. Galley Henry Woolf. Dir Henry Woolf, Frederick Proud. Review: Stage 6/4/72, 10. Comment: Stage (9/3/72, 18) indicates this production was the British premiere. "A one-man tour de force in which Henry Woolf displayed his versatility as a deputy lecturer in psychotherapy giving the benefit of his experience to a class of psychology students" (Stage 6/4).

72.112b The Rooming House (P) Conrad Bromberg. SOHO POLY 27/3/72 (Ln). 1st British perf. Liza Ross. Dir Joe Fairclough. Review: Stage 6/4/72, 10. Comment: "A tautly constructed analysis of a woman living apart from her husband" (Stage).

72.113 Hitler Dances (P) Howard Brenton. YOUNG VIC 27/3/72. 1st perfd Traverse, Edinburgh, 20/1/72. Plot: Hochman, Vinson. Review: Times 28/3/72, 11. Comment: Edinburgh Traverse Theatre Workshop. Times said Brenton had fallen "into the common trap of being engulfed in the myths he is trying to manipulate." (See also Sheeba V. Rajan, "Hitler Dances Ensemble: Fragments of a Devised Theatre," International Journal of English Language, Literature and Translation Studies, 7:3 [2020], 285–88).

Comment: "Cheerful vulgarity ... is stamped all over [this plotless piece]. The jokes are awful and the cast amble through their script as if at first rehearsal. And yet, with all its faults, the show has an earthy charm" (Daily Mirror). Guardian welcomed the return of Joan Littlewood and the show's "hymn to ... easy communal friendship." "The art of Joan Littlewood lies precisely in her ability thus to mythologise the mores of the demolished streets of Stratford East" (Tribune). Joan Littlewood did "a superb job" in organizing the multifarious material (Times).

72.115 Lord Arthur Savile's Crime (C, 3a) Constance Cox (adpt of Oscar Wilde's story, 1891). SADLER'S WELLS 27/3/72. Cast: WWT/16. Lord Arthur Savile Peter Greene; Dean of Paddington Jack Hulbert; Lady Windermere Daphne Anderson; Lady Clementina Beauchamp Elsie Randolph; Baines Mervyn Johns; Mr. Podgers McDonald Hobley; Herr Winkelkopf Bill Kerr; Sybil Merton Kate O'Mara; Lady Julia Merton Rose Hill; Nellie Diane Raynor. Dir John Downing; Light Neville Currier. Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 29/3/72. Variety said the production concentrated on "the lyrical qualities of the text" and utilized "a single spare revolving set and symbolic backdrops"; Ronald Pickup and the cast performed "exceptionally well." "Pickup's Richard has a true thoroughbred intelligence and sensitivity"; however, the "gimmick-free [production] never gets beyond the silhouette of the play to its tragic heart and entrails" (Guardian). Of Pickup's performance New Statesman said it was "hard at times to reconcile with the Richard Shakespeare created." Pickup was better in the earlier scenes, while Denis Quilley was an exceptional Bolingbroke (Times). The production remained in repertory until 30/9/72.

72.118 Gottle (P for children) John Boland. ARTS 1/4/72.* Review: Stage 20/4/72, 14. Comment: MPS 354. Unicorn Theatre. The play was "set in the winter quarters of a travelling circus" (Stage 23/3/72, 6).

Plot: Best/46, 29, Bordman, Bordman/4, 264, Bronner, Bryer, Fletcher, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, 252, MacNicholas, Matlaw, Salem, Shank, Wilmeth. Reviews: Illustrated London News 1/6/72, 56; Stage 20/4/72, 14; Times 12/4/72, 14. Comment: London Theatre Company. Neither the direction nor the performances brought the play to life (Times). Illustrated London News praised Linda Gardner for "making desperately true the emotions of a girl beset on all sides."

72.137 Bakerloo Line (P, 1a) Mustapha Matura. ALMOST FREE 10/4/72 (Ln). Salami Coker, Stefan Kalipha, Ann Lynn; Dir Roland Rees. Reviews: Stage 20/4/72, 13; Times 13/4/72, 13. Comment: The play, about a white woman and a black man meeting at a party, attempted to strike a balance in its presentation of racial issues; however, "it is far fairer towards the man; the girl emerges as a patronizing phoney." Moreover, Times added, the piece was "rather slapdash" coming from a dramatist as experienced as Matura.

72.138a Deathwatch (D, 1a) Jean Genet (trans [Bernard Frechtman] of Haute surveillance, 1949). YOUNG VIC 10/4/72. Cast: Stage 6/4/72, 1; Theatricalia. Green Eyes Nicky Henson; Guard Paul Brooke; Lefranc Richard Kane; Maurice Andrew Robertson. Dir Frank Dunlop; Assist dir Misha Williams; Dgn Carl Toms; Assist dgn Brenda Hartill Moores; Light Derek J. ford. Reviews: Stage 20/4/72, 13; Times 14/4/72, 11. Comment: This double bill was designed to demonstrate that, as Sartre had claimed, the two plays were essentially the same; thus, three male actors played the roles in both pieces (Times).

72.138b The Maids (P, 1a) Jean Genet (anon trans of Les bonnes, 1947). YOUNG VIC 10/4/72. Cast: Stage 6/4/72, 1; Theatricalia. Claire Andrew Robertson; Madame Richard Kane; Solange Nicky Henson. Dir, Assist dir, Dgn, Assist dgn, Light, Sm, Asm as for 72.138a. Plot: French/2, Gassner, Hochman, Kabatchnik/2, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Walford. Reviews: Illustrated London News 1/6/72, 56; Stage 20/4/72, 13; Times 14/4/72, 11. Comment: Illustrated London News said Richard Kane's Madame offered "as complete a female impersonation as I remember."

Comment: A "heavy-footed," "animated comic-strip" satire on American conformist society that even Frances de la Tour could not enliven (Spectator). Times detected there was a Jewish family farce lurking somewhere in this "murky chaos"; the cast was excellent.

72.141 Lying Figures (P) Francis Warner. JEANNETTA COCHRANE 10/4/72. 36 perf. 1st perfd Playhouse, Oxford, 21/6/71. Dryden. Comment: "A highly entertaining 'SEND UP' of the ever-popular weekly magazines for WOMEN" (theatre advert).

72.143 Who Killed Who in Timbuktu (P) Terence Lewis. LAMB AND FLAG 10/4/72 (Ln).* Michael Edgar, David Allister, Michael Jeffries, Susan Glanville. Dir Frances Rifkin. Review: Stage 27/4/72, 11. Comment: "Ostensibly a satirical farce about people's inability to recognise the unsuspected ways in which they are manipulated and exploited by forces apparently greater than themselves" (Stage).

72.144 John Brown of Kansas (P, 3a) Charles Taylor. LAMDA 11/4/72.* Cast: Stage 27/4/72, 12. John Brown J. M. Reviews: Globe and Mail (Toronto) 24/3/72, 14, 15/4/72, 32, 27/4/72, 14; Stage 27/4/72, 12. Comment: Globe (15/4) provides an interesting account of Taylor's experiences in staging his play at LAMDA. The piece was about the nineteenth-century American John Brown who tried to organize a slave revolt. "The emphasis on political violence in its relevance to now results in a work which is ponderous rather than dramatic" (Stage).

72.145a I Had the Craziest Dream (P, 1a) Barrie Stacey. BUSH 12/4/72 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 13/4/72, 1. Review: Stage 27/4/72, 12. Comment: Performed under the collective title The Dressing Room. The company for all three pieces comprised Pat Brackenbury, Ian Kellgram, Jo Beadle, Neil Williams, Joe Cook. Dir James Jordan. The triple bill was "about the grittier side of show-business" (Stage).

Plot: Vinson. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 6/5/72, 12; Guardian 13/4/72, 12; Irish Times 19/4/72, 12; Observer 23/4/72, 31; Stage 27/4/72, 12; Times 13/4/72, 13. Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian praised this first-hand account of what it's like to be imprisoned in a Belfast housing estate during a national crisis." Christian Science Monitor called it a powerful presentation. Irish Times reported "attendances have been excellent" and provided an interview with Haire. Times found several weaknesses in the play but still described it as "a patently honest and deeply felt piece of work."

72.148 Canned Humans (P) Rodney Cardiff. MERCURY 13/4/72. * Michael V. O'Brien, Brian Davey, Caryl Ziegler, Robert T. Collins, Diana Milstein. Dir Rodney Cardiff. Review: Stage 27/4/72, 12. Comment: The play was concerned with people being completely trapped and dominated by motor vehicles and a messiah figure who fails to liberate the masses.

72.149a Emblems (P, 1a) Francis Warner. JEANNETTA COCHRANE 14/4/72. 1st perfd Playhouse, Oxford, 27/7/70. Cast: WWT/16. Bride One Nova Llewellyn; Groom Jeremy Treglown; Bride Two Jenny Earl. Dir Francis Warner; Light Neil Schofield. Comment: Performed under the collective title Maquettes. Oxford Samuel Beckett Theatre Appeal Company. Warner was a Fellow of St. Peter's College, Oxford. "All three plays are bedevilled by those curses which beset so much of the writing of academics, pretentiousness, ideological constipation and chronic verbal flatulence. Each play, in turn, again like so much University-inspired writing flagrantly proclaims the author's inability to use and, indeed seeming contempt for, the medium for which he had chosen to write" (Stage 6/8/70, 14).

Comment: Nuria Espert Company (Spain). World Theatre Season. This "stunning version" of Yerma convinced Guardian (18/4) that Victor Garcia was "one of the most exciting directors in modern theatre." Tribune said the production was "so auto-destructive" but could not detract from Nuria Espert's performance. Christian Science Monitor was gripped by the intense passion of the production. A "breath-taking piece of work ... I have never seen a performance [Nuria Espert] of more intense eroticism" (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. The play was about the violence surrounding some homeless boys wandering around during a war. Christian Science Monitor said the actors were unconvincing as children, a criticism repeated generally. Disappointing and “stubbornly undramatic” (Guardian). Some critics, for example Observer and New Statesman, found the piece very uncomfortable, as did some audiences members who left during the performance (New Statesman). Variety thought the play “curiously old-fashioned ... [a] distended exercise in stage naturalism.” “A searing piece,” well acted (Times).

72.153 Hopp Scotch (P) Brad Ho Riley. KINDRED CENTRE 18/4/72. 1st perf? Review: Stage 27/4/72, 31. Comment: Stage was mystified as to the play’s meaning: “Perhaps there are qualities in the play, but the presentation, in the form of over-indulgency in improvisatory exercises, swamped them and emerged as interminable padding.”

72.154 The Grand Ceremonial (P) Fernando Arrabal (anon trans of Le grand cérémonial, 1966). THEATRE 84 20/4/72. 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 20/4/72, 8. Cavanosa Donald Sumpter; Sheila Scott-Wilkinson, Patricia Grant, Alain Coutney, Ricardo Pias. Dir Doreen Cannon, Philip Allen-Morgan; Cost dgn Davila David. Plot: Matlaw, 41. Reviews: Stage 27/4/72, 31; Times 21/4/72, 9. Comment: “Doreen Cannon has directed the play wittily, as a piece of high camp grand guignol, and it works well as a combination of comment, thrills and giggles. The evening is dominated by the playing of Donald Sumpter as the twisted hunchback” (Stage).

72.155 A Studio Hamlet (Theatrical essay) Martyn Corbett (arr of William Shakespeare). TOWER, CANONBURY, 21/4/72. Cast: TTC.

72.156 Hamlet (P) Charles Marowitz (adpt of William Shakespeare). OPEN SPACE 22/4/72. Reviews: Guardian 22/4/72, 8; Tribune 28/4/72, 15. Comment: This “80-minute collage” was essentially a “critical essay” on the play; “this latest version ... seems to lay less stress on the oedipal overtones than earlier ones” (Tribune). Guardian singled out Candida Fawsitt’s Ophelia for praise, but found “David Schofield’s Hamlet imposes too much feyness upon his character while design and lighting are neutral ingredients.”

72.157 The City (P, 1a) Loula Anagnostaki (trans George Angell of Polé, 1965). SOHO POLY 24/4/72 (Ln). Simon David Munro; Elizabeth Pauline Munro; Photographer Robert Lloyd. Dir Janet Henfrey. Review: Stage 11/5/72, 16. Comment: A good revival (Stage).

Cast: Stage 27/4/72, 11. John Ordning, Alison Groves, Richard Ireson, Philip Jackson, John Price. Dir John Price; Songs Alun Armstrong. Review: Stage 11/5/72, 20. Comment: Armstrong “added songs and moulded the characters into modern working men. The three torturers who crucify Christ and Christ, all work in overalls, jeans or boiler suits, and Mary is dressed in a rain coat and head scarf” (Stage).

72.159 Don Juan (C, 5a) Molière (trans John Chapman of Molière’s play, 1665). SHAW 24/4/72. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Hochman, Sobel. Review: Times 25/4/72, 8. Comment: Cambridge University Theatre Group. An arrant “piece of directorial self-promotion ... an evening of small talent and crashing vulgarity” (Times).

Comment: Performed under the collective title Oresteia. Greek National Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. Guardian liked the Chorus's "remarkable group dynamism." Observer found greater excitement in reading the plays than in these performances. Because the production individualized the characters New Statesman said their mythic status was lost. Times described members of the Chorus as being "individualized like solo instruments."

Comment: Performed under the collective title Oresteia. Greek National Theatre Company. World Theatre Season. Guardian found these second two parts "visually rather unexciting." Of the complete three-play production Times said "for sheer blank tedium, nothing in the World Theatre Season's record approaches this production." Times also reported how the Company was obliged to sign loyalty oaths to the Greek government.

Comment: "If you want to know what musical comedy used to be like here's the chance" (Guardian). Times pointed out the addition of songs from other musicals and some pieces of modernization. "All the piece has today is a certain rather grisly, period fascination" (New Statesman). "Refined torture I would not inflict on my worst enemies" (Daily Mirror). "It has a certain dirty charm ... a great many unforgettable, indeed unforgettotten, tunes" (Christian Science Monitor).

72.172 The Blitz Show (Montage) Frank Hatherley. BUBBLE POLYHEDRAL 2/5/72.* Cast: Pauline Kelly, Graham Gluck, Raymond Skipp, Paul Blake, Maggie Wilkinson, Shane Connaughton. Plot: Griffiths. Reviews: Guardian 2/5/72, 10; Stage 18/5/72, 18. Comment: Bubble Theatre Company; an itinerant company that performed in a tent in various outdoor locations. This production was at Clapton Square Gardens, Hackney, E5. Guardian faulted the piece for not going beyond the sense of nostalgia surrounding World War II it creates.

72.173 Burlesque (Vaude) Raymond Cross (deviser). UNITY 2/5/72. 1st perf? Marilyn Marco, John Sankovich. Review: Stage 18/5/72, 18. Comment: "An American version of old time music hall" (Stage).

Comment: OTF provides details of an earlier, much longer Japanese version, Scarlett, on which this version was based. This production ran nearly four hours. Guardian said this "spectacular melodrama" relied too much on memories of either the book or the movie. "It is too fragmentary and overlong, musically too busy and lacking any sock [i.e. successful] production numbers" (Variety). Spectator thought the piece encapsulated fifty years of musicals staged at Drury Lane. "A product of sound craftsmanship and devotion to the story" (Times). "A tremendous triumph for June Ritchie as Scarlett O'Hara" and better than Vivien Leigh in the movie (Daily Mirror).

72.177 Cross Road (P) Ailsa Hamilton and Juliet Boobbyer and Ronald Mann. WESTMINSTER 4/5/72. 92 perf. Narrator Garard Green; Frank Buchman Paul Campbell. Review: Stage 11/5/72, 16. Comment: "A documentary biography of Frank Buchman, the founder of Moral Re-Armament. To say that it is a cross between a lantern lecture and a concert would, while being perfectly accurate, give a totally wrong impression of this polished and tasteful programme with its dissolving projections of beautiful scenery, old Buchman family photographs, splendid drawings and cartoons interspersed and sometimes mingled with a group of talented multi-racial singers, actors and musicians" (Stage).

In addition to the play, Guardian praised De Filippo's performance as the father. "De Filippo is an actor of genius" (Observer). Times provided a history of the company and the play, praised De Filippo, and concluded “the production offers as lovingly detailed a collection of city types as can have appeared on any stage since the old days of the Abbey.”

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 11/5/72. Jonathan Miller “reclaims Sheridan for reality ... allowing the play ... to emerge more clearly” (New Statesman). Observer acknowledged this “homespun version” made the plot and text clearer; “but overall, Miller appears slightly ill at ease handling and casting comedy.”

Guardian welcomed Miller placing the comedy “in the rough, tangy, eighteenth-century world of Hogarth, Smollett and Fielding.” “Eschews the usual minuet production and instead has juiced up the comedy with imaginative farcicality ... The ensemble playing is generally excellent” (Variety). Times said the point of the production was to reveal the characters in a new light because they were presented as “rather hard-up and obscure.” The production remained in repertory until 5/12/72.

Comment: MPS 372. New Statesman could commend only the subject and the set, but not the remainder of the musical. Observer raised objections to the book, but found Peter Coe's direction “energetic,” and commended “the little boys [who] sing and act with a charm and skill worthy of better adult collaborators.” Times agreed about Coe and the boys. “The show lacks style and dramatic impact, and simply plods along even when the stage teems with energetic action” (Variety).

Comment: "So while admiring the technical skill of the actors, to say nothing of their laboriously prepared make-up, it must be confessed that the various episodes take an inordinately long time in the telling. In this case something more helpful than the translation system is needed to guide the Westerner through the tales of gods, demons and heroes" (Stage). "It brings also the infinite subtleties of the 'mudras,' finger-and-hand movements of which an expert player can perform 500 in a dramatic sign language. There could be some explanatory talk before the night begins. The programme is helpful, but we want to know more about this complex, flickering grammar" (Birmingham Post).

Comment: Times said the play was not as good as Dutchman because it lacked coherence. "Frank Cousins as this wordy non-idealist at times makes the long monologues difficult to follow, and there is a curious dichotomy in his portrait of a gunman" (Stage).

"A lamentably-directed, crudely-acted, abominably-set production ... that would discredit many a school hall," with a matching performance from Vanessa Redgrave (Guardian); Tribune offered a slightly more charitable, though still negative view. Redgrave "removes Viola's poetry and substitutes a kind of hysterical fussiness. Why shout at Olivia in the willow cabin speech? Vocally, she has some intonations unexpectedly slack" (Illustrated London News). "A brightly engaging if uneven" production with Redgrave giving "a fetching performance" (Variety). Spectator dismissed this "miserable business," but commended Redgrave's "imaginative Viola." Times shared the negative opinions. Daily Mirror commended the production.

Comment: 69 Theatre Company. Illustrated London News reported that "the narrative of a few March days before the German offensive of 1918 brought the Mermaid Theatre to the deepest hush I remember in years: no need to say more." "Strangely enough, the play has not dated. It still exerts a tremendous grip. The Twenties dialogue may sometimes sound quaint, but the characters are utterly believable. It is splendidly acted by James Maxwell, Harry Landis, Christopher Good, and Peter Egan" (Daily Mirror). Guardian (13/5) praised the production itself, but felt the play never crossed the divide between pathos and tragedy. New Statesman had no reservations about the play being good and explained in detail. Spectator found it somewhat quaint and romanticized. Times (19/5) praised this "fine work" as "this magnificent revival" revealed. The first New York production (Henry Miller's 22/3/29) ran for 485 performances.

World Theatre Season. Times had some difficulty in understanding the production because it was largely improvised. "Visually, there are some noble moments in this first Kathakali play in a sequence from another vast Hindu epic. One passage is the opening when the resplendent figures stand like a wall mosaic in gold and colours, with only their eyes moving. The second is at the night's end, after the stress is over, when Krishna blesses the audience"; however, explanatory notes would have been helpful (Birmingham Post).

"Funny but ultimately overlong ... some excellent performances ... imaginatively staged by Peter Gill" (Variety). Spectator was somewhat pleased John Antrobus had written an amusing play, even if it did need some pruning. Tribune commended the mixture of Goonery, realism, and "an unobtrusive little didactic drama." A "strange blend of music hall cross talk, insane logic chopping, and seaside postcard vulgarity ... [but] only spasmodically funny" (Guardian 25/5). "At worst, it is an insult to the intelligence of a five-year-old; at best, it will delight a keen fan of the Goons" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Michael Denison was "a somewhat declamatory Prospero" (New Statesman). Times was puzzled by Richard Digby Day's intentions as the production lacked a clear statement: "What emerges is something of a fancy dress show."

"About the relationship between Frank, a young Negro homosexual and his white flatmate Gordon, in New York" (Stage 25/5/72, 1). Variety criticized the play's "dated theatrical conventionality. It makes the crudity, the pop sociology, etc., conspicuous and embarrassing." "Despite its fashionable subject ... as sweet and digestible as old fashioned American apple pie" (Times).

Comment: Prospect Theatre Company. The play had been updated, with, for example, the "gallants disguised, not merely as 'Muscovies', but as Russian spacemen, complete with theme music from the BBC Space Studio" (New Statesman). Guardian disliked the astronauts but said this pop art production, "restlessly over-inventive," "still has that quality of festive exuberant gaiety." Times objected to the whole pop approach (played merely for fun) because it failed to recognize that the play "is stylistically an elitist comedy written from an anti-elite point of view."

Comment: New Statesman noted there were numerous non-Shakespearean interpolations and that Marowitz's play was "a sardonic comedy, seeking to alienate rather than involve our sympathies." Spectator said it was impossible to relate Shakespeare's work to "either the Old South or contemporary urban America" as Marowitz attempts to do. Times (9/6) opined Marowitz should have gone much further and "treated the text with even less respect."

Comment: New Statesman noted Frank Dunlop had updated the play with contemporary references. "The main trouble with the production is its lack of enthusiasm for Jonson's language which, as in the speeches for Sir Epicure Mammon, is not solely functional. Jonson loved a phrase, and we are too rarely conscious of this in a revival where speed must govern" (Illustrated London News). "A funny show superbly played and imaginatively staged for its arena presentation" (Variety). Times found the plot seemed muddled by the mode of presentation.

Comment: “Bright, frothy and quite funny until it runs out of steam fifteen minutes from the end ... stars Julia Lockwood in panties and bra and Aimi Macdonald also stripped right down to the bare essentials” (Daily Mirror). “A typical West End sex-comedy: ... it combines maximum titillation with minimum offence” (Guardian). “Follows the old rules of delaying any sexual transaction until the last curtain” (Times).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian was disappointed with this revival which was “subdued,” “dismally undercast,” and lacking discernable direction. Spectator observed this transfer from Stratford lacked the original scenery which contributed a great deal to the effectiveness of the production. New Statesman echoed that view, but commended the performances of Emrys James and Susan Fleetwood. “A curiously lackadaisical production” (Tribune). “We waited for our pound of flesh and were fobbed off with four ounces of licquorice allsorts. Humour is not a strong point in this Shakespeare play, nor is frivolity. Yet the production lays stress on both these qualities. The setting is supposed to be 16th Century Venice, but some of the scenes have an atmosphere of Henley on Thames in the 1920’s” (Daily Mirror). Times described Terry Hands’s production as “tactful and romantic.”

The collective title was “obscure, not to say irrelevant, for the image conjured up by this title has no discernible connection with the plays ... Lifeline was the more readily accessible, being a conventionally presented brief exposure of human loneliness and man’s basic need of a lifeline to help him through his difficult existence” (Stage).

Comment: MPS 360, 377. Times reported a partisan audience overreacted to "Julian Slade's colourless music and contrived lyrics," while the acting was indifferent. Stage described the piece was "authentic Pinero transformed with sympathy, tact and taste into a rousing, touching, colourful show," but it needed trimming.

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian said Osborne's translation possessed "a hammer-blow pugency," and his Hedda "was born bored." New Statesman thought Anthony Page had allowed the production to be controlled by Osborne's personal opinion of Hedda (quoted in the review). However, for Christian Science Monitor this was "the most riveting" production of the play, and was "amazed by Osborne's faithfulness to Ibsen and the great authority he derived from this faithfulness."

Variety observed Jill Bennett's Hedda "discloses little of the bored woman's complexity," and this accorded with Osborne's view. "A wonderfully ironical evening" (Observer). Times was left feeling the production had thoroughly explored the characters's past.

It would also have solved some of the audience's transport home problems" (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. The production lasted over three hours. Guardian noted this successful production avoided sentimentalizing Gorky's characters; Timothy O'Brien's set was "superlative." Observer also praised the set for this "respectable account" of the play. Spectator thought David Jones had not applied the same perception to The Lower Depths as he had to Enemies (71.247). Tribune commended the production and said it was much better than the RSC's previous production (62.154). Times wondered whether the play could ever be performed satisfactorily by British actors, though there were some fine individual performances here.

Comment: Sheffield Crucible Theatre. The production included "musical interventions" and had "a uniform style of grotesque pantomime joviality" that failed to delineate differences in social classes in the play (Guardian). The production was so bad that Spectator left at the interval. Times described what the theatre was really like which was nothing like what "Bankside Globe" conjured up; the performances were "generalized and automatic."

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 6/7/72. A late-night charity performance was given on 13/3/73 in aid of the widow and daughter of David Bauer who had played Sheriff Hartman. Variety praised the "outstanding performances" of the all-British cast, but not their accents. Guardian agreed, and singled out Denis Quilley, Alan MacNaughton, Benjamin Whitrow, and Maureen Lipman. Observer commended Michael Blakemore's direction for its "affection and a strong sense of fun." Christian Science Monitor noted one striking stage effect—a window breaking and shattering splinters over the audience. New Statesman thought the production lacked "speed and energy," but some of the acting was good. Times praised Blakemore's direction, and the glorious play. The production remained in repertory until 31/1/74. The first New York production (Times Square 14/8/28) ran for 276 performances.

Comment: The play was also known as Lady Boothroyd of the By-Pass. "It's one of those cushy, beautifully set and acted items that poke affectionate, sophisticated fun at upper-crusters"; a winner (Variety). Christian Science Monitor called it "a very moving study of how human beings can hurt each other," as acted by Peggy Ashcroft and Ralph Richardson. Spectator said the piece was puzzling and unsatisfying, but acted subtly. Times also commended Ashcroft and Richardson, but the play itself did not add up to very much.

Comment: Guardian commended the production for respecting O'Casey's eloquence even if the Irish accents were variable, a view shared by Spectator and Stage. "With Peter McEnery as the 'poltroon and poet,' it comes over excitingly in its humours and its tragic irony. One should take it for itself, not for any possible bearing on the current Irish scene" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: "All very innocent and tuneful, it will be thought pier-end concert party codswallop by the unfeeling"; John Hanson sang "from the heart," aided by numerous microphones (Guardian). Times was unimpressed by Hanson's "offhand manner," but did find plenty of romance in his music. "Criticising wholesome John Hanson is like racing an old lady to the last empty seat in a bus—you just hate yourself afterward" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: English Stage Company. Press night was 7/7/72. Guardian (8/7) indicated the play's elements did not blend and seemed contrived. A surrealist comedy "about the way society needs those in need," and very funny (Observer). Times thought "the relentless good humour of [Simpson's] whimsy robs the piece of any satiric intent."

72.282 Animals under Canvas (P) Jackie Skarvellis. PLAY ROOM 7/7/72 (Ln).* Review: Stage 13/7/72, 20. Comment: Stage cited this production as an example of a growing problem with lunchtime performances: "inadequate plays with inadequate performances."

72.283 Googlies (P, 1a) Matthew Walters. ORANGE TREE

Comment: The entertainment featured the words and music of Noël Coward, who attended opening night. Guardian (11/7) reported that after the interval "the whole Mermaid audience stood and roared its approval." "Beautifully staged by Wendy Toye the show is a matter of pure enjoyment" (Observer). "Starts slowly, runs overlong, but otherwise offers sparkling and convincing proof of Coward's vast and eclectic talent" (Variety).

"Utterly professional, expertly staged, and it left me completely cold" (Tribune). Christian Science Monitor noted David Warner captured Claudius' physical handicaps "with almost alarming virtuosity." Spectator was not invigorated by the play. Tony Richardson provided "imaginative, splendidly visual staging," that included, among other things "giant-sized puppets" (Variety). "The real disaster is Richardson's direction, which has all Brook's eccentricity without any of his sensitivity" (New Statesman). For Daily Mirror the play was "a 5-star bore, made worse by a lot of 'arty' directorial gimmicks." Times indicated the piece did not overcome the difficulties of adaptation or staging. "A civilized dramatist's attempt to get too much Roman history into a brief space, with little sense of danger or of the passage of time" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Stage printed a letter from Ronald Millar on the nature of the play's authorship, and renouncing it as his. Christian Science Monitor said the play provided it with a "more favorable view of progressive education," and reported Edward Candy was in fact a woman. "There are more plots here than in a municipal cemetery" (Guardian). Observer faulted the direction, the writing, and the acting. Variety said the piece was too diffused, only "sporadically interesting, with uneven performances.

Times thought the play was "inconsequential" because Millar had perverted Candy's intentions in the novel.

Comment: 69 Theatre Company. New Statesman reported Mia Farrow gave "an attractive performance in this dirge to human decay." Variety opined the play was "a curiously anachronistic" piece to chose for revival, and even more so as a vehicle for Mia Farrow. "The theatre's potential for eerie atmospherics is strangely under-exploited, making even this middling mystery the spookier for its sheer unexpectedness" (Tribune). The first New York production (Empire 22/12/20) ran for 127 performances.

Comment: Observer disliked virtually every aspect of the play and production. "Told in a strange jargon based on contemporary mores difficult to understand, or even hear" (Christian Science Monitor). New Statesman (4/8) agreed "the language is bizarre, abandoned and entirely idiosyncratic," but urged readers to see the play. "A compelling occasion," although its meaning isn't clear (Tribune). "The play is about the use of style as a weapon," and the point is reinforced by the aggression of the music (Times). The first American production was at the McCarter, Princeton, 11/11/72; the first New York production was at Performing Garage 7/3/73.

Comment: MPS 382. Guardian said the concept could have been hilarious if carried out thoroughly, with good music, and direction. Times thought the problem with the musical was that too many people were involved with its creation and they all had different aims. "It all adds up to some well-staged fun ... but the show would need more integration of text and music if it were ever decided to transfer this Ranch up West" (Stage).

"Brewster Mason, a rather sonorous, unpassionate moor, and Emrys James a tiny, grinning fistula of malice" (New Statesman). Tribune said John Barton's "nineteenth-century" production was solid. Times could find no particular connection between the Crimean setting and the play.

Comment: A vehicle for the Young Generation, "the prospects seem dim for this corny, old-hat musical about life and love in a Christmas cracker factor" (Variety). "The enthusiastic cracker makers are played by TV's gyrating Young Generation. It is their first live stage appearance. Far from being nervous, the way things were shaping last night they could put in a takeover bid for the whole show" (Daily Mirror). Times said this "silly show" was a pantomime of both "innocuous vacuity" and "smutty innuendo."

A shortened version of the play, produced without stage effects, and relying on the audience's imagination; "strangely touching" (Christian Science Monitor). Guardian thought the cast was too young for the roles and tended to speak too quickly. Stage found it yawn inducing.

72.311 Can Anyone Smell Gas? (One-woman show) Andrew Davies and Tony Hatch (mus). ORANGE TREE 21/7/72 (Ln).* Review: Stage 3/8/72, 18. Comment: Performed by Linda Polan, the piece was about various and sundry worries afflicting a woman. Later the title was changed to Can You Smell Gas?

Comment: Theatre Workshop. Guardian, humorously, pointed out the many defects in the play. For Tribune the piece worked best and visually as farce. “Mildly berserk farce ... and any number of funny, inventive lines” (New Statesman). Times criticized Livings for trying to weld together two disparate elements, a Plautus comedy and a “ribald ditty”; nevertheless, there were funny moments.

72.324 The Beggar’s Opera (Ballad O) John Gay. 11/8/72, 203–04; Observer 23/7/72, 26; Times 3/8/72, 13. Comment: National Theatre mobile production, seen earlier in the provinces. Produced without decor. An “unpretentious and capable production” (New Statesman). The production’s virtue was “the vigorous clarity of its story-telling,” with a memorable performance of Vasques by Gawn Grainger (Times).

Comment: Ticket prices ranged from 50 pence to £150. The production closed after two performances because the hotel did not have a theatre licence. It transferred to Hampstead on 10/8/72 as Symphony U. S. A. The revue included plays ranging “from Jean-Claude van Itallie’s fantasy The Hunter and the Bird through John Guare’s bitter The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year to three pieces by Terrence McNally, all sour and funny at the same time and obsessed with the war in Vietnam” (Stage).

discussed extensively the deliberate lack of a plot, and viewed this dramaturgical evolution “with guarded excitement.” Christian Science Monitor declared it was “merely a play with a very poor story: so poor in fact that it is totally boring.” While acknowledging the play’s faults, Variety called it “an endearing work which deserves to be seen ... beautifully played.” Times noted Wesker was on familiar ground in writing again about a family of London Jews, except that now the characters were old: “Heaven knows how autobiographical it may be, but it marks no development in Wesker’s powers of selection.”

384. A “combination of shrill hysteria with tinselly showbiz vulgarity” (Guardian). In addition to other aspects, Illustrated London News complained about the “outrageous amplification.” New Statesman agreed, finding numerous faults with the work though some worthy moments as well; it concluded “at the Palace, surely, Mammon reigns supreme,” and expected there would be customers “until the Second Coming.” Variety said the production, less flamboyant than the New York version, was generally successful and exciting. Tribune noted “it really is a rock opera, telling the whole story in song, rather than a ballad play pretending to be a musical.” “The Second Coming itself could not have aroused more tumult than broke out last night among the £2.50 stalls patrons” (Times). Coincidentally, or perhaps deliberately, the Daily Mirror shared its review with an (unrelated) large photograph of a female performer clad only in underwear; the review noted the enthusiastic reception, adding “the show is a sincere attempt to tell its story simply and clearly in a musical manner today’s youth understands.” The New York production ran for 711 performances.

Comment: Previews 8/8–9/8. Performed in modern dress that suggested a European police state. Guardian said the result was “a brisk, superficial, noisily effective melodrama,” with a dynamic Hamlet, and an effective Polonius. Spectator agreed, adding the production eschewed “loftier pretensions.” New Statesman said Peter Coe’s production was indebted to Jan Kott’s views on Shakespeare. Times said it was really a “fancy dress” rather than modern dress production, which was ironic given the purported aims of the Bankside; moreover, the physical limitations of the theatre needed to be addressed.

They are given this by Howard Panter, whose direction persuades one that it is actually plays which are being performed and not just a recital of words off the printed page” (Stage). Guardian commented that twentieth-century American dramatists, including Shepard, “are often obsessed and ruined by words.”

Comment: It is unclear whether the initial performances (beginning 16/8) were previews, when all seats were 40 pence. Press night was 22/8/72. The production was set in the 1930s. In this production “the tragedy has neither personal nor political stature” (Times). Guardian agreed: “The lack of definition shows through in the central performances.”

Comment: MPS 289, 381. Guardian was disappointed with the play because it “never quite works either as a detailed character-study or a laugh-packed comedy.” Observer commended the performances of Tom Courtenay and Michael Robbins. New Statesman was delighted by the play’s “wit, humour, intelligence, point, roundness of plot, sharpness of characterisation.” Illustrated London News thought well of both the play and Courtenay’s performance. “A good audience show” that “figures to have a healthy West End run” (Variety). “Ayckbourn—who is clever at getting his characters to talk at cross-purposes—has written a witty, perceptive comedy. I found it highly entertaining” (Daily Mirror). “Ayckbourn has extended the limits of what a popular audience is prepared to laugh at” (Times).

Comment: The play involved the “flimsy adventures of a young man who hires one amateur and one professional actress to act out his last night with his alleged wife Karen”; Stage declared “the idea of people acting out their sex fantasies, once a novelty, has by repetition become something of a bore.” A two-week engagement.

Comment: On the short run see a letter to the editor of the Stage 26/10/72, 2, which cited poor advertising and expensive seat prices. Guardian said this musical version captured the spirit of its Travers original. "A charmingly inventive score, clever lyrics and sharp performances ... limited chi-chi appeal" (Variety). "The art of farce is good timing and in Popkiss a good time was had by all. The wonder is that the music moved in time too. It was a finely syncopated slamming of doors. And catchy with it." (Daily Mirror). Spectator said the piece missed the mark of whatever it was trying to do. "An exercise in nostalgia," said Times, which also noted that in the audience Robertson Hare "joyfully applauded the efforts of Dudley Jones in the role created by Mr. Hare 46 years ago."

"Steven Rumbelow, the adaptor and director, sees [the play] quite clearly and simply as an exercise in black magic, in which the usurper Alonso is destroyed by the same powers of darkness which deal Prospero a fatal blow" (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. "The most memorable scene—and very clever it is too—shows the four murderers stepping forward in time eight hundred years to the present day to justify their bloody deed. Richard Pasco is excellent as the turbulent priest Becket" (Daily Mirror). Spectator praised Pasco but found the play generally tedious. Observer was not entirely convinced by Terry Hands' argument for the play being a modern classic. New Statesman said Hands' view of the play as a prayer was "the kernel of directorial misconception." Times also thought the direction was confusing. Variety said it was "an impressive revival," but noted the play was "short on action and long on talk." The first New York production (Manhattan 20/3/36) ran for 38 performances.

Comment: "A purely literary confection" peopled by artificial characters (Guardian). Spectator wondered what the intent of the play was and found the use of "Onward Christian Soldiers" as a theme tune misleading. Observer was convinced by the play which "shimmers with moral ambiguities" held together "with a web of imagery."

Review: Birmingham Post 7/9/72, 2; Stage 14/9/72, 17; Tribune 15/9/72, 7. Comment: National Youth Theatre. “A straightforward production by Paul Hill. Though well done and acted with immense capability, it comes across largely as a fairly simple narrative” (Stage). “This is among the best things I recall the National Youth Theatre doing—simply because the players drive into the play from the first speeches, keep it moving, and never let the difficult narrative lose itself” (Birmingham Post).

72.375 Banana Follies (Ent) Kevin Ayers. HAMPSTEAD 6/9/72 (Lt).* Review: Stage 14/9/72, 17. Comment: “An hour-long entertainment that sends up rotten popular music from 1930 to 1973 and sent me home with a splitting headache” (Stage).

Comment: English Stage Company. Variety said that in this largely plotless piece (unfinished at Behan's death) many of Behan's Irish targets were now dated. Spectator described it as a "sort of anarchic ragbag, in which one incident is related to the next arbitrarily, accidentally or not at all." "A rough blend of Irish ditties, earthy anecdotes with just a touch of folksy philosophy. There is no coherent story; it is simply an entertainment involving many sketches which have some very funny jokes about religion Protestant and Catholic—and much fun is poked at other sundry Irish troubles" (Daily Mirror). New Statesman provided several examples of the jokes in the piece and examples of Behan's targets, but also noted "disorderly verbiage" eventually smothered the work. "A shapeless mass of pub nihilism and republican fervour" (Times).

29/9/72, 444; Stage 28/9/72, 17; Times 21/9/72, 10; Tribune 29/9/72, 9. Comment: A charity performance was given on 19/9/72 in aid of the Variety Club of Great Britain's Heart Fund and the Round House Trust Building Fund. Guardian panned this anti-pollution piece, as did New Statesman which noted it was being revised. "Perhaps Mother Earth had something to say in West Coast America, but in its present form it is as debased a youth energy show as I have seen" (Times). Daily Mirror noted the acting was crude and timing hopeless, and the piece needed revising severely. The first New York production (Belasco 19/10/72) ran for 12 performances.

Comment: Daily Mirror noted Coward was in the first-night audience. An "immaculate revival" by John Gielgud and "a vintage comic performance from Maggie Smith" (Guardian); Tribune and Variety agreed. Christian Science Monitor said that, after Olivier, Maggie Smith was probably "the greatest draw on the English stage today."

72.401 You Paralyse Me (P) Peter King LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 25/9/72 (Ln). 1st perf? Review: Stage 5/10/72, 15. Comment: Quipu. The cast included Michael McClain. "A neat little melodrama with one or two good ideas which have not been worked at sufficiently to make the play into the black comedy it seems to want to be. It deals with a triangular situation between a doctor, his wife and her lover" (Stage).

Comment: Christian Science Monitor said this play, about private detectives interrogating an adulterous couple at breakfast, was a wild verbal "phantasmagoria ... [the] dialogue is controlled by linguistic associations that lead to ever more bizarre flights of imagination." Guardian noted various influences from the field of modern drama. Times described the play as "desperately laborious ... [a] melange of inflated poeticism and arbitrary word game."

72.403 Survivors (P) Jackie Skarvellis. PLAY ROOM

27/9/72 (Ln). 1st perf? Review: Stage 5/10/72, 15. Comment: "A weak SF piece accompanied by trendy space noises, its characters are the last two survivors of a nuclear holocaust, two males (though one is played by a girl with silver paper genitals) who discover that procreation is impossible without a womb" (Stage).

72.404 Cross Road (P) Ailsa Hamilton and Juliet Boobbyer and Ronald Mann. WESTMINSTER 28/9/72. Comment: "The multi-media production which presents the life of Frank Buchman, founder of Moral Re-Armament, returns to the Westminster on September 28 following a Continental tour. The production has been revised and is now under the direction of Gordon Marsh" (Stage 21/9/72, 18).

72.405 The Relief of Martha King (C, 2a) David Parker. BUSH 28/9/72.* Martha King Jenny Runacre; Maid Godfrey Jackman. Reviews: Stage 12/10/72, 16; Times 29/9/72, 11. Comment: Daily Mirror reported: "The Bush Theatre ... has taken legal advice and deleted all references to April Ashley ... about transsexualism. A couple of years ago Miss Ashley was party to a court action in which a judge ruled that a sex change operation had left her still, legally, a man. However, they should not have worried. 'I [April] certainly have not asked for any changes ... I know the producer and I am sure the subject is being dealt with seriously'" (20/9/72, 13). Times said the piece fell into "the category of unresisting imbecility on which it would be wonton cruelty to heap abuse."

Comment: Portable Theatre Company. Guardian described the piece as “total theatre” which exposed the audience to “the extremities of Ulster’s bitter experience.” Christian Science Monitor noted the play was not entirely neutral in its presentation of the Irish situation, a point discussed at length by New Statesman. Times was unsure what position the play took on the political situation; however, it contained “some good athletic writing and ingenious scenic techniques.”

Comment: Dolphin Theatre Company. Hywell Bennett’s “genial talents” were no match for the role of Bakke (Spectator). Gay News said Bennett’s performance was perfect. Peter James’s production emphasized Bakke’s barbarity (Christian Science Monitor). Times said Bennett lacked the “tonal range ... to convey Bakke’s volatile deviousness.”

Comment: The play was “concerned with the everyday stresses of London life in an immigrant family ... It is, in fact, a rather old-fashioned problem play, Dear Octopus with a Jamaican accent” (Stage).

72.413 The Day After the Fair (D, 2a) Frank Harvey (based on Thomas Hardy, “On the Western Circuit,” 1891). LYRIC 4/10/72. 245 perf. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Brighton, 11/9/72. Comment: MPS 420. Times thought Hardy’s story should not have been adapted: it “is too dedicate a masterpiece to be served up as a West End package.” “A cluttered Victorian setting, an even more cluttered story,” which the cast, apart from Deborah Kerr, did not believe (Observer). Half of the play was “superfluous, the other half unbelievable” (Christian Science Monitor). Deborah Kerr’s performance was disconnected from her character (New Statesman). “Defiantly well-made and developed, the piece is acted with the fullest understanding by Julia Foster, Deborah Kerr and their associates” (Illustrated London News). Tribune reported the play “seemed to be giving a lot of quiet, middle-class enjoyment to a lot of rather elderly people.”

Comment: Guardian thought Frank Norman’s script presented an outdated view of package holidays. “A subject unimportant enough for [Littlewood’s] present fey, frolicsome mood” (New Statesman). “A raucous gallimaufry ... unpretentiously billed as ‘a candy floss entertainment’” (Spectator). Observer said the production was designed for its East London audience. Times thought little of the play but was grateful Joan Littlewood had found a show that so fitted her talents.

72.430 One's Company (One-man show) John Law. OVAL HOUSE 14/10/72.  Comment: Performed by John Law. "As well as a murder story, a poem or two, some music-hall and some serious drama, the programme includes a send-up of TV's Face the Music and the first stage revival of The Specialist since the author, Chic Sale, performed it in the USA. Mary Hill is at the piano" (Stage 12/10/72, 10).

Plot: Gänzl, Kennedy. Comment: Along with Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat began as a twenty minute pop music cantata, Colet School, London, 1/3/68.

72.432 Overruled (P) Bernard Shaw. SOHO POLY 16/10/72 (Ln).  Cast: Stage 12/10/72, 10. Mrs. Lunn Illona Linthwaite; Mrs. Juno Jenny McCracken; Paul Alexander, Nigel Anthony. Dir Philip Allen Morgan; Dgn Demetra Maraslis. Plot: French/2, Hochman, Mander/3, Matlaw, Purdom. Review: Stage 26/10/72, 16. Comment: Stage commended the cast and "Demetra Marasli's neatly simple design and Philip Allen Morgan's smoothly paced direction."

72.433 The Owl and the Pussycat (C, 3a) Bill Manhoff and Mark Lawrence (mus) and Norman Paris (mus arr). RICHMOND 16/10/72.  Pussycat Barbara Windsor; Owl Simon Oates. Plot: Bronner, Fletcher, Loney, Salem. Comment: A two-week engagement.

72.434 Rejection (P) Niall Quinn. ACT INN 16/10/72 (Ln). * Cast: Stage 19/10/72, 8. John Boswall, Lawrence Douglas. Dir Amos Mokadi. Reviews: Irish Times 27/10/72, 6; Stage 26/10/72, 16. Comment: The play was concerned with "the conflict which emerges when a young Jesuit novice decides to leave the seminary, and his religious adviser asks him to remain" (Irish Times). Stage said the play was "somewhat shapeless, but the quality of writing and the understanding of the complexities of the novice's problems redeem it."

72.435 Triangle (Monol for three characters) James Saunders. LAMB AND FLAG 16/10/72 (Ln). 1st perfd Close, Glasgow, 9/65. Review: Stage 26/10/72, 16. Comment: Recreation Ground. Brian Poyser was "the actor searching for a play and an identity, as well as some kind of freedom, in a performance skilfully judged in its apparent spontaneity" (Stage).

72.436 Look Forth with Love (P) Harcourt Nicholls. DARK AND LIGHT 18/10/72. Cast: Stage 12/10/72, 10. Ed Kerry Francis; Jim Mark Heath; Patricia Perry, Corinne Skinner, Major Wiley, Phyl Ryan, Don Weinstein. Dir George Eugeniou. Review: Stage 26/10/72, 15. Comment: Greek Art Theatre, and Theatre 3 plus 1. There "is nothing very positive about either the writing, the direction or the acting. It is decorated with songs and twanging guitars, but, even when something approaching drama occurs on-stage, it is wrapped up in too much pretentiousness to matter" (Stage).

72.437 A Touch of Purple (Thriller, 2a) Elleston Trevor. GLOBE 18/10/72. Cast: Stage 26/10/72, 15; WWT/16. Comment: "It lacks suspense and is tedious going," and "not a bet for West End longevity" (Variety). Guardian praised Peter Dews's direction and the "splendid performance by Peter Barkworth." "The writing seems embalmed ... essentially ... a royal soap opera" (Observer). "Very capably written ... the closest thing I have seen on the British stage to Russian socialist realism" (Times). Illustrated London News thought Ryton was unwise to speculate on the events portrayed; even so, the piece was essentially "harmless." The first New York production (Helen Hayes 2/10/73) ran for 79 performances.

72.439 The Pedagogue (Monol, 1a) James Saunders. ORANGE TREE 20/10/72 (Ln). Cast: Stage 19/10/72, 8. Plot: Vinson. Review: Stage 26/10/72, 16. Comment: Stage said "Vernon Joyner is stunningly good as the pedagogue ... tautly directed by Michael Richmond."

72.440a The Lesson (P, 1a) Eugène Ionesco (anon trans of La leçon, 1951). BUSH 23/10/72. Sue Lane, Lizzie McKenzie, Shaun Curry. Dir Kenneth Chubb. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Mplots, Patterson, Walford. Review: Stage 26/10/72, 15. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company. "Shaun Curry's performance as a sort of Professor Higgins played by Rex Harrison gone wild which earns and deserves the evening's biggest ovation" (Stage).

72.440b Mr. Me (Dialogue with a Brilliant Partner) (P) Jean Tardieu (anon trans of Monsieur moi, 1969). BUSH 23/10/72. John Heawood, Diana Bishop. Review: Stage 26/10/72, 15. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company.

Comment: Pointing to the existence of Gay's and Brecht's works, New Statesman said this piece "successfully spoils an idea which was redundant in the first place," an opinion shared by Observer. "A feeble imitation of The Beggar's Opera ... concentrates on roguish wordplay linking theft with sex" (Times). Daily Mirror criticized most aspects of the production but commended the performances of Anna Dawson and Elizabeth Mansfield.

72.444 Let's Murder Vivaldi (P) David Mercer. KING'S HEAD 25/10/72. 1st perfd BBC-1 TV 10/4/68; 1st British stage perf. Comment: The Problem (P, 1a) by A. R. Gurney was added as a curtain raiser during the run (Reviews: Stage 30/11/72, 17; Times 23/11/72, 13). New Statesman called this play, about "intersexual violence," "a witty melancholy TV play" that worked well on the pub's stage. "Cogently performed" (Observer). The play transferred well to the stage and was "admirably played" by Kevin Stoney, Diana Fairfax, Diane Mercer, and Tom Conti (Guardian). "A minor masterpiece in the class of Pinter's The Lover," "beautifully cast" (Times). The play had also been performed in Paris in January 1971 as Massacrons Vivaldi.

72.445 Alias Normal Man (Mus ext) Neil Innes. JEANNETTA COCHRANE 26/10/72. 1st perf? John Coleman, Malcolm Thompson, Jenny Mclaud, Lee St. John, Janice Tredwell. Review: Stage 2/11/72, 9. Comment: "It could be called a 1972-73 version of the pierrot show, or an ecological revue, or a pantomimic exercise in rhyming alexandrines. The theme is institutionalised man, caught in a web of machine and social patter that he himself has created, however much he rebels against it" (Stage).

72.446a After Liverpool (P) James Saunders. ORANGE TREE 27/10/72 (Ln ?). Cast: Stage 19/10/72, 8. Plot: French/2, Vinson. Richmond Fringe. The cast for the double-bill comprised Rod Beacham, Gordon Reid, Ann Curthoys, Gabrielle Lloyd, Auriol Smith, Oliver Ford Davies.

72.446b Games (P) James Saunders. ORANGE TREE 27/10/72 (Ln?). Cast: Stage 19/10/72, 8. Plot: French/2, Vinson, Weintraub. Richmond Fringe.

Comment: The revue tried to offer something to everyone but there wasn't enough of it (Guardian). Observer was puzzled by the crude humour finding a place on the legitimate stage. "A fun evening tinged with blue humour, but nothing to really offend anybody" (Gay News).

72.451 A Doll's House (P) Henrik Ibsen (trans James W. McFarlane of Et dukkehjem, 1879). Comment: English Stage Company. "Miss O'Brien's story tells of a childhood recalled. The place is one of those boggy villages in Ireland wrapped in superstition, bigotry and booze" (Daily Mirror). Observer said the play was unselective in the autobiographical details O'Brien presented and it needed more form. However, Christian Science Monitor called it the best play in a long time. "A wispy dramatic fragment starved of circumstantial detail, lively characterisation and any sense of personal pressure" (Guardian). "A slim but charming play ... lovingly staged ... impressively played" (Variety). "Fresh and wistful without slithering into the easier sentimentality; and I would nominate as a future star its 16-year-old Dublin actress, Veronica Quilligan" (Illustrated London News).

Reviews: Stage 9/11/72, 19, 23/11/72, 17. Comment: Quipu. Both plays employed Halliwell's multi-viewpoint dramatic technique: "All very well, and there is a depth given to characters on-stage by viewing those characters completely in the round, but unfortunately, both plays ... make their point and then go on, and on, and on" (Stage 23/11).

Comment: Gay News described it as "a pageant with music" because it was "the most talkative musical I've yet come upon." Guardian was unimpressed by the music and generally not amused. Spectator said the piece made the fatal mistake of trying to incorporate too much historical background of Victoria's reign. New Statesman found the visual aspects of John Schlesinger's production attractive. Times said there was plenty of Victoriana but the piece lacked "a good basic idea."

Comment: National Theatre. Guardian (10/11) described the production as "circumspect," Anthony Hopkins and Diana Rigg giving "intelligent performances," but the whole lacked "the thrust and pulse of great tragedy." New Statesman echoed the latter judgment: the production failed "to raise the goose pimples." Similarly, Variety declared it "lacks a strong sense of horrific tragedy and torment," but the reaction of Times was diametrically the opposite. Hopkins's Macbeth "far from murdering sleep, very nearly induced it" (Tribune). Illustrated London News said Hopkins was not really "a Shakespearian." "But in this long drawn out production the spectacle is mainly underplayed. The witches are a dull old lot and Macbeth's final sword fight awful. For all the blood spilling, a strangely anaemic production" (Daily Mirror). The production remained in repertory until 30/6/73.

Comment: MPS 404. Observer said the play was written “in imitation of early Tennessee Williams.” Gay News also remarked on the indebtedness to Williams, and added Sheila Hancock gave the best performance of her career. Christian Science Monitor thought the play was “not much to English tastes.” Times observed the play “supports the generalization that the more autobiographical an American play the more stereotyped its form.” The first New York production of this Pulitzer Prize-winning play (Mercer-O’Casey 7/4/70) ran for 819 performances.

Comment: MPS 446. Lauren Bacall’s London debut, repeating her Broadway role. Guardian said this was a good, but conventional musical that lacked surprise; Bacall was “stunning.” “Another musical with barely a tune or a distinguished song,” said Observer while noting the orchestra swamped Bacall’s voice. “But if Applause is hardly the most melodious show in town. it is high among the best acted; and leading the honours in that department is the star, Lauren Bacall. The actress, never all that brilliant in her Hollywood days, is a revelation in the role of Margo Channing” (Daily Mirror). Bacall “is very much the actress-queen of the old, discredited school. For what it’s worth, the evening belongs to her (New Statesman). Times discussed the movie, the difficulties of converting it into the book, the lack of coherence, and Bacall giving a “winning performance.” The first New York production (Palace 30/3/70) ran for 896 performances.

The play "uses words economically and on a plane between naturalism and theatricality ... relaxed, controlled acting" from the cast (Stage).

Comment: The play dealt with a quarrelsome household, how the occupants live, and how the characters take "turns to become fanatical Christians so as to keep a bit of order"; it needed better plotting and pruning (Times).

Review: Stage 7/12/72, 17. Comment: Play Room. The adaptation "offers nothing new beyond a few references to Maidenform bras and some explicitly mimed sex. Richard Strauss's opera is claimed to be the basis for this version, but if so it is a very much watered-down rendering of Hugo von Hofmannsthal's text and an inordinately long way from the Sophocles original" (Stage).

The play, about the Maid of Kent “executed for treasonable prophecy against Henry VIII,” needed more perspicacity concerning the Maid’s psychology (New Statesman). Times agreed and added it detected echoes of other plays—Heloise and Abelard, Pygmalion, and Saint Joan.

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian described the play as “moving outwards from a purely theatrical satire to an eloquent examination of the world at large,” and reported it received both “bravos and boos,” and Frank Dunlop’s direction was “a marvel of theatrical dexterity.” New Statesman gave a lengthy description of how the play proceeded, followed by an analysis of his intentions, and a conclusion that Osborne was sinking into “a lumpish, pseudo-jocular anti-intellectualism.” Not so much a play “as another of his collages of speeches, interplay, music hall bits, old Tin Pan Ally tunes and film projection, all laced ... with gutter verbiage” (Variety). Tribune took the opportunity to compare Osborne’s work with Arden’s The Island of the Mighty and to place both dramatists among other contemporary dramatists.

The production ran well over three hours. Variety found it difficult to follow this "Homeric folk tale" which was also "often entertaining and charming." "Unwieldy, incoherent and exasperating," with commendable performances from Patrick Allen and Emrys James (Guardian). "The play proved to be an incoherent medley of events which was still muddling on after more than four hours. It all appeared to be regrettably tiresome" (Illustrated London News). "A paralytically tedious, episodic pageant" with poor characterization and no wit (Spectator). Times said "the company seem to be playing from scene to scene, extracting what passing effects they can, rather than working towards any inexorable conclusion," a result of the play's failings. "As an insight into the imaginative excesses of a mind gone mad, the text is informative, but it gains nothing from such an undramatic presentation, for Mr Haigh's objective approach limits his commitment to the subject" (Stage).

"Williams goes through his entire repertoire of camp humour: flared nostrils, arched eyebrows, vinegar lips pursed to deliver the crushing retort" (Daily Mirror). Spectator said the piece deserved production much more than Caryl Churchill's Owners (72.522). "Laurence strikes me as commercial comedy's most promising recruit since Alan Ayckbourn" (Times). "Though Kenneth Williams used every mannerism in his repertoire, and Jennie Linden brought a generous goodwill to the fat girl who, surprisingly, owned a Hampstead bookshop, the play was a thin business" (Illustrated London News). The first New York production (Brooks Atkinson 31/3/74) ran for 288 performances.

Comment: The programme consisted of poetry and songs, with Williamson best in melancholy mode. Guardian lamented the fact Williamson had been absent from the London stage for three-and-a-half years and a one-man show was no substitute for a dramatic performance. Williamson had performed the show for Richard Nixon and guests at the White House, Washington, DC, on 19/3/70 (Variety 25/3/70, 4). This was presumably the show performed at New York's Eastside Playhouse (26/6/73) where it ran for 30 performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. “An old-fashioned melodrama ... awkwardly and episodically told,” and less worthy than Charles Laurence’s My Fat Friend (72.509) (Spectator). New Statesman lamented the play’s short run but said the production was “oddly flat.” “Too full of coincidences” (Christian Science Monitor). The first New York production (Mercer Arts Center (14/5/73) ran for 2 performances.

Comment: Guardian said the piece failed to be a “wisecracking, sentimental Manhattan comedy,” and Eartha Kitt was forced into giving “a wildly exaggerated performance” as a call girl. “Eartha Kitt, once known as a sex kitten, is more like a Cheshire cat ... She grins so much” (Daily Mirror). Kitt’s erstwhile “magic” failed to work for Gay News in this unfunny piece. “A staled contrivance” (Variety). For Times the production appeared as a series of variety sketches, Kitt was not very good in portraying “innocent amorality.”

Comment: MPS 447. The three-hour show possessed "sheer vitality," with Anthony Newley playing "the Devil with an endearing chumminess" (Guardian). "A history of the world in musical comic strip ... a gruesomely witless caper" (Spectator). "A busy and fast-paced show, moderately engaging but ultimately ... insubstantial" (Variety). A shapeless, "inert extravaganza," with Newley a strange combination of “benevolent clown” and the devil (Times). “The invention, more comic than cosmic, is show-business at its most relentless and well-meaning” (Illustrated London News).

Reviews: Stage 11/1/73, 13; Times 27/12/72, 8; Tribune 19/1/73, 7. Comment: Le Grand Magic Circus. “An anarchic happening based, with unusual looseness, on the story of Robinson Crusoe. Scenes from Robinson’s early life are played in booths around the arena, in people’s seats (even to the extent of perhaps getting a naked man thrown into your lap) and occasionally up aloft” (Stage). Savary “is a dramaturgical Don Juan, trifling with the affections of time, sense and form in the most outrageous manner” (Times).

Mills; Dir, Ch Malcolm Goddard; Dec Tod Kingman; Mus dir Bob Probst. Review: Stage 11/1/73, 16. Comment: “Jimmy Tarbuck, playing Jack Trot, provided this season’s opportunity to enjoy a well-known television personality in the flesh” (Stage).

72.550 Pickwick’s Christmas Party. BUSH 26/12/72. Comment: The cast included Brian Barnes.

72.551 The Rose and the Ring (Mus) John Dalby (mus, lyr, bk; adpt of W. M. Thackeray’s story, 1855). GREENWICH 26/12/72. Cast: Stage 11/1/73, 15. King Valoroso, Woodman Michael Spice; Princess Angelica Anna Dawson; Premier, King Padella Michael Malnick; Countess Gruffanuff Thelma Ruby; Hedzoff Teddy Green; Bronwen Williams, Miles Fothergill, Julian Littman, Pamela Cundell, Susan Maudslay, Michael Mackenzie, Billy Boyle, Richard Dennis. Dir Richard Frye; Sc dgn, Cost dgn Rhoda Gray; Ch Roy Riches; Light John Roffey; Mus dir John Dalby; Assist dir Vera Diamond; Sm Joanna Gollins. Reviews: Birmingham Post 28/12/72, 2; Stage 11/1/73, 15. Comment: The production “had a sparkle and company assurance that communicated itself to the audience from their first glimpse of the Paflagonian royal family at breakfast” (Stage).

72.552 The Wizard of Oz (MP) L. Frank Baum (bk) and Harold Arlen (mus, lyr) and E. Y. Harburg (mus, lyr). VICTORIA PALACE 26/12/72. Cast: Stage 11/1/73, 13; WWT/16. Aunt Em, Lady of Oz, Mambi, Old Munchkin Lady Eileen Bell; Joe John Bryony; Uncle Henry, Mayor of the Munchkins, Lord Growlie Roy Desmond; A Butcher, General Osmas, Old Munchkin Lawyer, Tibia Fergie O’Neil; Sorceress of the North, Virago Angela Ryder; Wicked Witch of the West Brian Hewitt-Jones; Scarecrow Frank Marlborough; Tin Man Sam Kelly; Cowardly Lion Geoffrey Hughes; A Private, Coroner George Brady; Gloria Elizabeth Connor; Wizard of Oz Tony Sympson. Pres Paul Elliott, Duncan C. Weldon; Dir Bryan C. Wolfe; Dec Brian Hewitt-Jones; Ch Gerry Tebbutt; Mus dir Bert Hayes. Plot: Bordman, Fletcher, Law, Shipley, Wilmeth. Review: Stage 11/1/73, 13. Comment: Stage said the production “sticks fairly closely to what one can remember of the film script and includes most of the songs. In addition, however, it has its complement of pantomime gimmicks and participatory humour of the ‘Oh yes he is, Oh no he isn’t’ variety.”

72.553 Pilk’s Madhouse (P) Ken Campbell. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 27/12/72.* Cast: Findlater. Reviews: Observer 14/1/73, 32; Stage 18/1/73, 15; Times 29/12/72, 7; Tribune 19/1/73, 7. Comment: English Stage Company. Ken Campbell Road Show. This “effort to translate mental disorder into its theatrical equivalent” was occasionally penetrating (Observer). Tribune found it an interesting approach to conventions of illusion and reality.

72.554 Tales from Whitechapel (P) [written by schoolchildren and Olwen Wymark]. COCKPIT 27/12/72.* Reviews: Stage 4/1/73, 17; Times 28/12/72, 6. Comment: Common Stock Theatre Company. Also performed later at the Half Moon, Curtain, and Arts 3/73 (review: Times 21/3/73, 9). Times thought the production was “a valuable exercise” in allowing the viewpoints of both children and adults.

72.555 About This New Teapot . . . (P) Joseph Delaney ACT INN 28/12/72 (Ln).* Review: Stage 4/1/73, 17. Comment: Suzanne Neild directed. Ran for two weeks.

72.556 Shelter (P, 1a) Alun Owen. OPEN SPACE 28/12/72

(Ln). Cast: Stage 30/11/72, 16. Ann Firbank, Peter Baldwin. Dir Michael Attenborough. Plot: Vinson.

72.557 Bullshot Crummond (P) Ron House and Diz White and Alan Sherman and John Neville Andrews and Derek Cunningham. GREENWICH 29/12/72 (Lt). 1st perfd Close, Edinburgh, 2/10/72? Bullshot Crummond Alan Shearman; Otto von Brunno Ron House; [John Neville-Andrews, Diz White. Dir Derek Cunningham]. Plot: Hischak/2, 78, Salem. Reviews: Guardian 1/1/73, 10; Observer 14/1/73, 32; Stage 4/1/73, 25. Comment: Low Moan Spectacular. “A refreshingly literate and witty parody” (Guardian). The first New York production (Theatre Four 20/10/74) ran for 8 performances.

72.558 Sal’s Meat Market. OVAL HOUSE 29/12/72 (Lt). Review: Stage 18/1/73, 15. Comment: Sal’s Meat Market consisted of Ray Hassett and John Ratzenberger. “A bizarrely-mixed bag of funny material” (Stage).

72.559 Scapino (P) Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale (adpt of Molière, Les fourberies de Scapin, 1671). YOUNG VIC 29/12/72. Cast: Stage 28/12/72, 17. Jim Dale, Peter Bayliss, Ursula Mohan, Ray Davis, Ian Charleson, Barbara Courtney, Jeremy James Taylor, Richard Kane, Mel Martin, Gavin Reed, Andrew Robertson, Ian Taylor. Dir Frank Dunlop; Dgn Carl Toms. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Hochman, Salem. Reviews: Spectator 13/1/73, 48; Stage 11/1/73, 11; Times 1/1/73, 12. Comment: Jim Dale was well cast in the lead, although in some scenes he played with too much charm; Frank Dunlop’s production employed too many dirty jokes (Times). “An engaging little romp” (Spectator).

72.560 The Ticket of Leave Man (D, 4a) Tom Taylor (adpt of Édouard Brisebarre and Eugène Nus, Léonard, 1862). QUESTORS 30/12/72. Plot: Bordman, Disher, Griffiths, Law, Patterson, Shank, Shipley. Reviews: Acton Gazette 11/1/73, 8; Middlesex County Times 5/1/73, 17.

72.561 Enoch and the Gorgonzola (Satirical poem) Charles Lewsen. HAMPSTEAD 31/12/72.* Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 13/1/73, 18; Guardian 2/1/73, 8; Stage 4/1/73, 17. Comment: Performed by Charles Lewsen. Guardian said this poem, “a one-man counterblast to Europe” and written in heroic couplets, tended to run out of steam.

Productions

73.1 The Mikado; or, The Town of Titipu (CO, 2a) W.S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 1/1/73. Mikado of Japan John Ayldon; Nanki-Poo Colin Wright; Ko-Ko John Reed; Pooh-Bah Kenneth Sandford; Pish-Tush Michael Tuckey; Go-To John Broad; Yum-Yum Julia Goss; Pitti-Sing Peggy Ann Jones; Peep-Bo Pauline Wales; Katisha Lyndsie Holland/Beti Lloyd-Jones. Pres Bridget D'Oyly Carte; Mus dir Royston Nash; Pd dir Michael Heyland; Cost dgn Charles Ricketts, Disley Jones. Plot: Ayre, Bordman, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

73.2 The Littlest Clown (MC for children) Christopher Cable (bk, lyr; adpt John Morley) and Lew Kestler (mus). ROUND HOUSE 2/1/73. 1st perfd Playhouse, West Fairmount Park, Philadelphia 30/8/66?; 1st British perf. Sarah Atkinson, Kim Braden, Doreen Keogh, Ted Merwood, David Morton, Nick Nissen, James Smillie, Richard Thornton. Pres Dorset Productions, Doris O'Donnell, Judith Ann Abrams; Dir, Ch Riggs O'Hara. Reviews: Stage 11/1/73, 32; Times 6/1/73, 11. Comment: "The story concerns Tina, the clown, who is fast growing up and must be replaced by a smaller clown, chosen eventually from the audience, with charming results" (Stage). "A dose of showbiz sentiment" (Times).

73.3 Squat Betty (C, 1a) Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall. BLACK HORSE 2/1/73. Elizabeth Mintey Julie Martin; Jonathan Pearce Simon Castle; Stanley Mintey Mark York. Dir Robert E. Kersh. Plot: Walford, Weintraub. Review: Stage 11/1/73, 11. Comment: In-Sight Theatre. Robert E. Kersh's direction and the cast only partially overcame "the continual changes of direction and emphasis in the play" (Stage).

73.4a Better Days, Better Knights (C, 1a) Stanley Eveling. COCKPIT 4/1/73. Review: Stage 18/1/73, 15.

Comment: Bubble Theatre Company.

73.4b In His Own Write (P) John Lennon. COCKPIT 4/1/73. Review: Stage 18/1/73, 15. Comment: Bubble Theatre Company.

73.5 Faust (P) Steven Rumbelow (adpt of Christopher Marlowe, Doctor Faustus). KING'S HEAD 4/1/73 (Ln). 2 perf. Mephistopheles Nigel Watson; Faust Bronson Shaw. Review: Stage 11/1/73, 11. Comment: Triple Action Theatre. "The production itself was less experimental than expected ... Nigel Watson was a persuasive Mephistopheles" (Stage).

73.6 The Follies of '73. OVAL HOUSE 4/1/73.* Review: Stage 18/1/73, 15.

73.7 The Grand Tour or The Postillion Has Been Struck by Lightning (Ent) Jane McCulloch and Donald Fraser (mus). GOLDSMITHS' HALL 4/1/73. Isla Blair, Julian Glover, Derek Jacobi, Timothy West. Dir Toby Robertson. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 11/1/73, 13; Illustrated London News 1/3/73, 57; Times 5/1/73, 10. Comment: Prospect Theatre. "It has a really civilized unity and good humour as visitors and Europeans from the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries examine each other candidly" (Illustrated London News). "A pleasantly civilized little anthology" (Times).

73.8 Twelfth Night; or, What You Will (C) William Shakespeare. OLD VIC 4/1/73. 14 perf. Cast: NTA; Theatricalia; *WWT/16. Singer Lindsay Ingram; Sir Andrew Aguecheek David Bradley; Sir Toby Belch David Bauer; Valentine, Second Officer, Singer Harry Waters; Viola Louise Purnell. Dir Peter James; Dgn Brenda Hartill Moores; Light Leonard Tucker; Mus Michael Lankester. Review: Spectator 13/1/73, 48. Comment: National Theatre Mobile Production. Spectator noted the production had been advertised as part of the "Fanfare for Europe" celebrations "apparently on the grounds that the play was originally performed at the court of Elizabeth I in honour of an Italian count." The production remained in repertory until 31/1/73.

73.9 The Rapist (P, 1a) Philip Martin. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 8/1/73 (Ln). 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 11/1/73, 10. Elayne Sharling, Paul Copley, Keith Benedict. Dir Noel Collins. Review: Stage 18/1/73, 20. Comment: Quipu.

73.10 Tedderella (Political satire) David Edgar and Chris Mitchell (mus). BUSH 8/1/73. 1st perfd Pool, Edinburgh, 12/71. Cast: Stage 11/1/73, 10. Jean Fredericks, Tony Chantal, Carole Hayman, Malcolm Ingram, Jeremy Nicholas, Richard Quick. Dir Michael Wearing. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 13/1/73, 18; New Statesman 19/1/73, 100; Observer 14/1/73, 32; Stage 18/1/73, 15; Times 11/1/73, 11; Tribune 19/1/73, 7. Comment: Title also given as Tederella (see Stage 20/1/72, 16). "A pantomime parody, with [Edward Heath] in the role of Cinderella [the piece is] against the Common Market, but its touch is light and friendly" (Christian Science Monitor). New Statesman noted that only towards the end did the piece become polemical. A "cheerful piece ... cheerfully received" by the audience (Times).

73.11 The Yeomen of the Guard; or, The Merryman and His Maid (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 8/1/73. Sir Richard Cholmondeley John Broad; Colonel Fairfax Colin Wright; Sergeant Meryll John Ayldon; Leonard Meryll Hugh Bishop; Jack Point John Reed; Wilfred Shadbolt Kenneth Sandford; 1st Yeoman Jeffrey Cresswell; 2nd Yeoman Jason Shute; 1st Citizen Howard Williamson; 2nd Citizen Jon Ellison; Elsie Maynard Linda Anne Hutchison; Phoebe Meryll Peggy Ann Jones; Dame Carruthers Lyndsie Holland/Beti Lloyd-Jones; Kate Anne Egglestone. Pres Bridget D'Oyly Carte; Mus dir Royston Nash; Pd dir Michael Heyland. Plot: Ayre, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

73.12 Claude (P) Leo J. Heaps. MERCURY 9/1/73. Review: Stage 18/1/73, 17. Comment: Performed earlier as Little Boy (70.66).

73.13 A Fart for Europe (P) Howard Brenton and David Edgar. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 9/1/73 (Lt).* Cast: Findlater; Stage 11/1/73, 1. Alun Armstrong, Jeremy Child, Louis Haslar, Hugh Hastings. Dir Chris Parr; Dgn Di Seymour. Plot: Vinson. Reviews: New Statesman 19/1/73, 100; Observer 14/1/73, 32; Spectator 13/1/73, 48; Stage 18/1/73, 15; Times 11/1/73, 11. Comment: English Stage Company. New Statesman said the anti-Common Market piece was completely polemical but needed to present its evidence in a more sophisticated fashion. Times reported the piece was performed with "wit and venomous conviction."

73.14 Rule Britannia (P, 1a) Howard Barker. KING'S HEAD 9/1/73.* Review: Guardian 10/1/73, 8. Comment: An Open Space production. This anti-Common Market "political allegory ... [is] not conspicuous for its subtlety"; Neil Cunningham gave "a pleasantly lethal performance ... as the sinister productivity conscious foreigner" (Guardian).

73.15 Lord Mountlady and the Mortal Odours (P) Jim Hiley. ALMOST FREE 10/1/73 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 11/1/73, 10. Terence Brook, Louie Caballero, Henry Goodman, Nick Hughes, Felix Lamb, Ian Marter. Dir Noel Grieg. Review: Stage 18/1/73, 20. Comment: Ambiance Theatre.

73.16 The Angel, the Ark and the Cradle (P) Ralph Shafran (adpt from the Wakefield and Chester mystery cycles). TOWER, CANONBURY, 11/1/73. 1st perf this adpt? Cast: TTC.

73.17 Blackblast (Event) Lindsay Barrett. ICA 11/1/73. Review: Stage 25/1/73, 17. Comment: The event involved tribal rituals, although the words were inaudible; Stage also complained about the late start, the excessively loud music, and the generally unprofessional air of the whole production.

73.18 Patience; or, Bunthorne's Bride (Aesthetic O, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 11/1/73. Sir Richard Cholmondeley John Broad; Colonel Fairfax Colin Wright; Sergeant Meryll John Ayldon; Leonard Meryll Hugh Bishop; Jack Point John Reed; Wilfred Shadbolt Kenneth Sandford; 1st Yeoman Jeffrey Cresswell; 2nd Yeoman Jason Shute; 1st Citizen Howard Williamson; 2nd Citizen Jon Ellison; Elsie Maynard Linda Anne Hutchison; Phoebe Meryll Peggy Ann Jones; Dame Carruthers Lyndsie Holland/Beti Lloyd-Jones; Kate Anne Egglestone. Pres Bridget D'Oyly Carte; Mus dir Royston Nash; Pd dir Michael Heyland Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

Comment: MPS 422. The opening of a new theatre; it was renamed the Gillian Lynne Theatre on 1 May 2018. The play lasted about three hours. Times wondered what sort of “commercial show is going to be suitable for this setting,” but added this “strip cartoon history of mankind at war” worked here better than it had at Chichester. Variety opined this production was better than the New York one, with a “standout” performance by Brian Bedford. “A ponderous anti-war fantasy demonstrating that in every age ... certain patterns of behaviour inexorably recur” (Guardian). Spectator described it as “a trudge through the history of war ... often specious and facetious.” Illustrated London News said the piece needed cutting. “There are some dull patches particularly in the first half and the play could do with a little more pace. Mr. Ustinov, as a succession of holy men spanning 2,000 years, gives himself most of the best lines” (Daily Mirror). New Statesman commended Ustinov’s performance. The New York production ran for 148 performances.

73.20 Iolanthe; or, The Peer and the Peri (Fairy O, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER’S WELLS 15/1/73. Lord Chancellor John Reed; Earl of Mountarat John Ayldon; Earl Tolloller Ralph Mason; Private Willis Kenneth Sandford; Strephon Michael Rayner; Queen of the Fairies Lyndsie Holland/Beti Lloyd-Jones; Iolanthe Peggy Ann Jones; Celia Pamela Field; Leila Pauline Wales; Fleta Kathryn Holding; Phyllis Linda Anne Hutchison. Pres Bridget D’Oyly Carte; Mus dir Royston Nash; Pd dir Michael Heyland. Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D’Oyly Carte Opera Company.

73.21a Krapp’s Last Tape (Monol) Samuel Beckett. COURT 16/1/73. Cast: Findlater; Stage 25/1/73, 17; WWT/16. Krapp Albert Finney. Dir Anthony Page; Dgn Jocelyn Herbert; Light Rory Dempster. Plot: Demastes/2, Fletcher, French, French/2, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Schrank, Vinson, Walford, Weintraub. Reviews: Birmingham Post 17/1/73, 2; Daily Mirror 17/1/73, 20; Illustrated London News 1/3/73, 57; New Statesman 26/1/73, 135–36; Observer 21/1/73, 32; Spectator 13/1/73, 48, 20/1/73, 80; Stage 25/1/73, 17; Times 17/1/73, 11; Tribune 2/2/73, 6–7; Variety 7/2/73, 74. Comment: English Stage Company. Observer found Albert Finney’s Krapp “surprisingly violent.” “Finney proves a bit cavalier with the stage directions” (New Statesman). “Finney’s Krapp is a weary old has-been, awakening memories of pain and joy and rejecting them with words that slobber from a dribbling mouth. A strong performance, without much humour” (Stage). Daily Mirror described sitting through two Beckett plays as “refined torture.”

73.21b Not I (Monodrama, 1a) Samuel Beckett. COURT 16/1/73. 1st perfd Forum, New York, 22/11/72; 1st British perf. Cast: Findlater; Stage 25/1/73, 17; WWT/16. Mouth Billie Whitelaw; Auditor Brian Miller. Dir, Dgn, Light as for 73.21a. Plot: Demastes/2, Griffiths, Hischak/2, 51, Patterson, Schrank, Vinson, Weintraub. Reviews: Birmingham Post 17/1/73, 2; Christian Science Monitor 1/2/73, 16; Daily Mirror 17/1/73, 20; Illustrated London News 1/3/73, 57; New Statesman 26/1/73, 135–36; Observer 21/1/73, 32; Spectator 13/1/73, 48, 20/1/73, 80; Stage 25/1/73, 17; Times 17/1/73, 11; Tribune 2/2/73, 6–7; Variety 7/2/73, 74. Comment: English Stage Company. Spectator (20/1) suggested the piece was “a step backwards” because after Breath Beckett’s “ultimate theatrical experience” should have been a play “on which the curtain would not rise at all.” “A small masterpiece ... carried along with compulsive force by Billie Whitelaw” (Observer). “A performance of sustained intensity, all sweat, clenched muscle and foaming larynx” (New Statesman). Variety found “the minstrel show affinity is an unfortunate distraction. The paradox is that the stark lighting is supposed to force attention on the verbal [torrent] but instead conjures Al [Jolson].”

73.22 Strut and Fret (P) Paddy Fletcher. HOWFF 16/1/73

(Ln). 1st perfd Bush 1972. Paddy Fletcher, Patricia McCulloch, John Grant, Roger Frost, Kurfu Morris. Reviews: Stage 25/1/73, 20; Times 17/1/73, 11. Comment: Incubus Theatre Company; Fletcher was one of founders of the company. Times described the piece as a “potpourri culled from folk song and medieval jest book” which could have been funnier and better performed.

73.23 Willie Rough (P) Bill Bryden. SHAW 17/1/73. 13 perf. 1st perfd Lyceum, Edinburgh, 10/2/72. Comment: Royal Lyceum (Edinburgh) Company. The play ran for about three hours. “The strength of the play is that it umbilically connects the private and public worlds” and proves “the strength of the realistic tradition in dealing with political life” (Guardian). “The writing, while always honest, seems arbitrary and unselective” (Observer). New Statesman admired the realistic detail. Despite some reservations, Spectator commended the play, the direction, and the acting “with a rare and gifted devotion.” “Written in the knotted dialect of Clydeside; and the Scottish company ... did nothing to adapt it to duller Southern ears. . . . Bryden is an author of a fine honesty and passion. His play is too long, and he has a little damped it theatrically by refusing the obvious big scenes” (Illustrated London News). Daily Mirror opined some of the dialogue needed translating into English.

73.24 Man of Destiny (P, 1a) Bernard Shaw. OPEN SPACE 18/1/73. Cast: WWT/16. Napoleon David Schofield; Strange Lady Diana Quick; Lieutenant Malcolm Storry. Dir Jeremy Young. Plot: French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Mander/3, Matlaw, Purdom. Reviews: Guardian 18/1/73, 10; New Statesman 2/2/73, 172; Stage 25/1/73, 17; Times 18/1/73, 14. Comment: The production failed to explore the different levels in the play reducing it to “all burlesque, a juvenile banter” (Guardian). Times called it “a pretty thoroughgoing piece of Sardoodledum.”

73.25 Revival (C) Tom Gallacher. KING’S HEAD 18/1/73. 1st perfd Dublin 13/3/72. Comment: The play was about a retired actor who specialized in Ibsen roles. Times noted affinities with Gallacher’s Mr. Joyce Is Leaving Paris, and called Robert Gillespie’s production “splendid.” “Overflowing with literary conversation, backstage chit-chat, and highfalutin’ verbosity” (Observer). However, New Statesman found the piece witty and worthy of “a wider showing.”

Comment: Company Theatre (founded by Robin Phillips). Christian Science Monitor declared Phillips's “production by itself is almost incomprehensible” and was puzzled by the use of prison bars in the set. For Guardian (25/1) it was a “relentlessly Anglo Saxon production” which, while good, was missing an emotional dimension; nevertheless, some striking performances. Times lauded the new company's intentions but could offer the production only “a tepid welcome.” New Statesman dismissed other reviewers' criticisms and declared the production achieved “a flow and atmosphere that accurately reflect the life-style of people who feel they've long been deprived of life.”

Comment: New Statesman described the production as “chirpy, uneven,” and lambasted Peter Bayliss's “astonishingly misconceived Hobson”: “this is Lear as played by Widow Twankey.” Spectator said Bayliss purveying his typical line of “flabbily blustering comedy [was] disastrously wrong here, twitteringly undermining a realistic piece of characterisation for the sake of a few red-nosed laughs.”

Comment: A reworking of Confessional (1971). Guardian criticized some aspects of the play but praised Frances de la Tour's “superlative performance.” Variety added praised for Elaine Stritch, but noted “the inability of most British actors to effect credible Yank speech patterns,” De la Tour being something of an exception. “A rambling essay without a firm theatrical center” (Observer). “An inessential piece; it leaves one with little more than a sense of hazy benevolence, but while it lasts it is somehow potentially theatrical" (Illustrated London News). Times singled out the performances of Stritch and De la Tour for particular praise. The New York production ran for 200 performances.

Comment: The play was about Bernadette Soubirous who had a vision of the Virgin Mary at Lourdes. "Tremulous show business religiosity" (Observer). Variety said the piece did not rise above "its essential soap operatic narrative." Illustrated London News opined the production had suffered from critical disapproval because it was staged at a West End theatre, not the fringe, and because its theme was religious. Daily Mirror commended the performances of Rita Tushingham and Barbara Jefford.

"A classic retelling of a classic fable, with none of the bogus religiosity which has marred other recent excursions over this territory" (Times 19/2). Times (31/7) reported the first act (Jacob's Journey) had been cut and "what remains is an expanded version of Joseph's journey."

Comment: Guardian praised Charles Marowitz's "hard-edged" direction and David Schofield's "splendidly unsentimental portrait" of Woyzeck. New Statesman was unconvinced Marowitz's approach revealed more than a straightforward production would. Times discussed Marowitz's version in detail, noting the "new scenic order and character transformations," all of which, together with the acting, created a powerful impression at the time, but not in retrospect.

Comment: Claire Bloom had appeared as Nora at the Playhouse, New York (13/1/71, 111 perf) in a production by her husband, Hillard Elkins, directed by Patrick Garland. So she was reprising her performance in that production. Variety said she gave "an adroitly appealing performance." Spectator thought Christopher Hampton's adaptation was fluent and the play was presented in contemporary terms. New Statesman discussed the difficulties in making the play credible by managing to reconcile the "early Nora with the late Nora"; this production did not overcome the problem. Observer thought the production worked. Times said the production reversed Ibsen's situation by making Helmer "warm, amusing, rugged," and Nora "a genteel nonentity."

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 22/2/73. Performed in modern dress and set in 1966 with De Gaulle replacing Louis XIV. Guardian praised the translation and Tanya Moiseiwitsch's designs, but felt the heart of the play was lost. For Spectator the translation was a revelation and the modernization acceptable, a view opposed by Tribune. Illustrated London News admired Harrison's successful use of rhyming couplets. "A honey of a show ... Played with verve and style, with knockout performances by Diana Rigg and Alec McCowen" (Variety). Times praised Harrison's translation extensively "for producing a text which is brilliantly speakable in English without breaking Molière's formal mould ... a version in rhyming couplets which is wholly free from echoes of the Christmas pantomime." The production remained in repertory until 7/7/73.

"The play serves as a demonstration of stifled emotions in conflict with those concealed" (Guardian).

For Mavor’s comments about his play, see Guardian 31/3/73, 13. Alastair Sim played an academic biographer who uncovers a dead general’s indiscretion. Observer said the play worked because of the gifted actors, most notably Sim with his “incomparable brand of comic acting.” Variety thought not even Sim could overcome the play’s weaknesses. Illustrated London News said the play was uninteresting. Christian Science Monitor, after noting Mavor was the son of James Bridie, defended this first play stoutly. Times liked the play’s intellectual qualities, and described it as “Agatha Christie parading as late Ibsen.”

Comment: Company Theatre. The play was about a sixteenth-century horse dealer and his fatal pursuit to recover his stolen property. Tribune said the piece failed in its attempt to apply Brechtian techniques. “Thinner, plainer, more merely political” than Saunders’s Next Time I’ll Sing to You (New Statesman). “A spell-binding dramatic narrative performed with total conviction by Frederick Proud’s cast” (Times).

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian appreciated Friel’s focus on an important aspect of the Irish problem: “the way reality is instantly transformed into myth.” Observer said Albert Finney’s energetic direction was designed to “disguise the mind-boggling dullness of the play.” New Statesman averred Friel had failed to show all “the individual human waste” involved in the current Irish suffering. Agreeing, Spectator had difficulty “in separating the desperate realities of the situation from Friel’s whimsical account of it.” Times entertained a similar perspective. The first New York production (Alvin 17/2/74) ran for 9 performances.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Regardless of the play itself, the production should be seen for Eileen Atkins's truly great performance (Guardian), a view shared by Observer: the play "needs an actress of Eileen Aitkins's sensitivity and controlled intensity." Times echoed the same sentiments. Only Atkins's performance prevented New Statesman from "succumbing to yawning stupefaction." Illustrated London News wondered "how the text might appear without an actress of ability to interpret its agonizings."

Comment: "Treads familiar ground in its portrayal of a man-wife-mother-in-law relationship," but should have a good run (Variety). "A kind of modernised male version of A Doll's House," with good, meaty writing (Guardian). "Entertaining enough in its unpretentious way" (Spectator). Times averred Welland's view was lopsided as evidenced by the dialogue: "the women's parts are shrewishly overwritten and quite untouched by sympathy."

73.138 The Time Step Machine (Dance revue) Barry Grantham. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 1/4/73.* Barry Grantham, Joan Grantham, Susan Bown, Malcolm McNeill, Tom Gilhooly. Review: Stage 5/4/73, 19. Comment: Stage said the revue had its moments but it was under rehearsed and too long.

73.139 Beowulf (P) Liane Aukin (drm of Old English poem). THEATRE UPSTAIRS 2/4/73.* Cast: Findlater; Stage 5/4/73, 17. Beowulf Neil Johnston; Marty Cruickshank, Michael Harley, Doninda Hulton, Wolf Kahler, Christopher Ravenscroft, Dina Stabb, Paddy Swanson, Rowan Wylie. Dir Nancy Meckler. Reviews: Guardian 3/4/73, 12; Stage 12/4/73, 15; Times 4/4/73, 13; Tribune 13/4/73, 7. Comment: The Freehold. "Both the conception and the production are little short of a disaster" (Guardian). The production did nothing to change the Times's opinion that Beowulf was "a hoary old bore."

73.140 Hold Your Wodi, Chaps! (P) Peter King. ALMOST FREE 2/4/73 (Ln).* Simon Rouse, Anton Rodgers. Dir Jim Hiley. Review: Stage 12/4/73, 18. Comment: Ambiance. The piece explored the tensions between two soldiers trapped in a military action in the Middle East in 1963.

73.141 The Proposal (P) Anton Chekhov (anon trans of Predlozheniye, 1890). NOTRE DAME HALL 2/4/73 (Ln). Plot: Fletcher, French, French/2, Hochman, Matlaw, Walford. Natalia Barbara Berkery; Gerald Martin, Jack Niles. Dir Deryck Knott. Review: Stage 12/4/73, 18. Comment: Three's Company. "Altogether an undistinguished presentation, quite unworthy of the standard shown by this company in their opening production" (Stage).

Comment: Nuria Espert Company (Spain). World Theatre Season. A repeat of the previous year's production (72.151). Nuria Espert gave a very powerful, erotic performance (Guardian 3/4). "One of the few profoundly moving theatre experiences of a lifetime" (Tribune). Times provided descriptive details of Espert's "great acting."

73.143 A Chaste Maid in Cheapside (C, 2a) Thomas Middleton (adpt John Grillo). HALF MOON 3/4/73. Cast: SHM. Plot: Hochman. Reviews: Stage 12/4/73, 17; Times 6/4/73, 15. Comment: "Whatever the underlying intentions of the Half Moon show, its main achievement is to conjure up a vanished London and allow spectators to feel at home there" (Times). Stage complained about the programme that listed characters and performers separately, and not indicating who played what role; however, some of the performances were "very good indeed." The production was directed by Maurice Colbourne, designed by David Fielding, and with Terence Docherty as musical director.

73.144 The Owl and the Pussy Cat Went to See . . . (MP for children) Sheila Ruskin (bk) and David Wood (bk, lyr, mus; based on Edward Lear's verse and stories, 1871). Comment: Vienna Burgtheater. World Theatre Season. “After a promising beginning, turns into something of a lead balloon” (Guardian). “A rickety vehicle for [the company’s] reputed talents” (Spectator). Times faulted the performances for consisting of “acting routines being paraded automatically like all-purpose robes from a limited theatrical wardrobe.”

Comment: English Stage Company. Weintraub gives the preview date 6/4/73. “Basically a documentary, an unashamed tract, and as such no great shakes as drama” (Variety). “A fine and moving play, complex in emotion ... Paul Scofield gives a performance of extraordinary insight and emotion” (Christian Science Monitor). “A fine, indignant, insidiously disturbing play,” a more than admirable performance from Scofield and “lucid” direction (Spectator). New Statesman found different aspects of the play “sometimes clumsily direct, sometimes needlessly oblique.” Observer objected to the “monotonous series of flashbacks and conversations,” adding that Hampton’s fierce indignation had “muddled his play.” While acknowledging the play’s flaws, Guardian concluded “If this is propagandist drama, then our ostrich-like theatre could do with a bit more of it.” Times described the play as “written in a white heat of outrage, and far more intent on clarity of statement than on formal neatness.” The first New York production was at the Hudson Guild 24/2/77.

73.160 Captain Oates’ Left Sock (C) John Antrobus. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 16/4/73. Cast: Findlater; Stage 12/4/73, 18. World Theatre Season. An “unpretentious version” played by “authentic star actors” such as Jacques Charon (Guardian). Spectator said the company achieved “an astonishing vivacity, considering they must all by now be bored stiff by the piece.” Times considered the double-bill was “an exercise in style, whose content is as removed from modern life as the actors’ handling of compliments and leg positions.”

Comment: MPS 457. “A Pirandellian farcical comedy” with good performances from John Wood, Glenda Jackson, and Joss Ackland (Guardian 18/4). Observer declared the cast should find better outlets for their talents than this “hopelessly contrived” play, a viewpoint adopted largely by New Statesman and Times. “Disjointed in parts as well as stylistically uneven,” but Glenda Jackson as the draw (Variety). Illustrated London News compared the play unfavorably with Shaw’s Misalliance at the Mermaid (73.169).

Comment: In repertory with Cowardy Custard. The acting was uneven, but Bill Fraser gave a "quite superb" performance (Spectator). Alan Strachan's direction placed "the emphasis on manners" (Guardian). Variety praised both the direction and Fraser. Times discussed what the play was about and concluded it is "a wonderful study of English gamesmanship; the games of mating, playing the gentleman, keeping up appearances." Daily Mirror opined the production "could well turn out to be the liveliest, most modern comedy hit of the year. The first twenty minutes or so of the play is pretty dull. It looks its age. Then it suddenly opens out into a work of sparkling wit and roaring force."

73.170 Spring Bizarre (Ent) Rogers and Starr. HAMPSTEAD 18/4/73 (Lt). Plot: OTF/2. Comment: "The Rogers and Starr Spring Bizarre late-night show at Hampstead was a complete sell-out and will be returning on April 18" (Stage 5/4/73, 1).

Comment: Company Theatre. Tom Stoppard's direction robbed the play of the "speedy, soaring high-definition production" it needed, but Lynn Redgrave possessed "the right goofy, innocent sexiness" (Guardian). Tribune recorded Stoppard introduced "some spectacularly comic non-verbal business," and added Redgrave's "Billie is perfectly conceived." Times generally approved of the production. An "uninspired and mistimed production ... with Lynn Redgrave brutally miscast" (Spectator).

73.172 Man Friday (P) Adrian Mitchell and Mike Westbrook (mus). BUSH 19/4/73. 1st perfd BBC-1 TV 30/10/72; 1st stage perf. Roger Sloman, Ram John Holder. "An attempt to explore the predicament of the artist in society which didn't work" (Tribune). Times said this play, about a social historian Schellenbrack, was Gallacher's third study of "intellectual recluses who have purchased achievement by renouncing human contact," the others being James Joyce and the Ibsen actor in Revival."

73.175 Richard III (T) William Shakespeare (French trans by Jean-Louis Curtis). Comment: Comédie-Française. World Theatre Season. Christian Science Monitor said this was essentially the same production Hands had directed for the Royal Shakespeare company which had been poor; yet here the production succeeded because Richard was played by a brilliant French actor, Robert Hirsch. Guardian (24/4) agreed completely. Times said the production was melodramatic with Hirsch giving "the most romantic reading" of Richard the reviewer had ever seen.

73.176 Towards the End of a Long, Long Voyage (P, 1a) Robin Smyth. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 23/4/73 (Ln). * Will Thompson John Bott; Charlie Harper Paul Ratcliffe. Dir Gregory Dark. Review: Stage 3/5/73, 20. Comment: The play compared the diametrically opposed personalities of two former shipmates.

Comment: New York Shakespeare Festival production. "An obvious click and looks set to run ... for several seasons" (Variety). Observer (6/5) said the piece suffered from the same fault as Godspell: "it will do anything to be likeable." "Proxy panto" (Spectator). Times noted the basics of the original plot were followed, and there were even some Shakespearean lines; altogether the production was "an ode to joy." "A sparkling show full of vibrant and melodic numbers" (Daily Mirror). The Delacorte production transferred to the St. James, New York, on 1/12/71 and ran for 614 performances.

World Theatre Season. The production relied on "physical knockabout, jaunty melody, and romantic absurdity," but possessed "delicacy and high finesse" (Guardian). Christian Science Monitor lamented that bookings for the production were at only 40% of the Aldwych's capacity. Despite the piece's gaiety, the revival was "a rather ghostly occasion" (Times).

73.191 Watch the Woman (Revue) Brian Phelan and Olwen Wymark and Dave Newmergan (mus). COCKPIT 30/4/73.* Review: Times 3/5/73, 7. Comment: Common Stock. Times described the piece as a "polemical revue starting in the Garden of Eden and finishing in a housing estate" that pleaded "the cause of Women's Lib." Also performed at Dark and Light in July (Tribune 20/7/73, 7).

“Like the play, the production has its poor and bad patches; but for the most part it is excellently done” (Stage). “Maxwell Shaw’s production is a rough-and-ready, low-budget affair” (Times). The production was ruined “because the audience insists on being funny—the itch for participation—and fails lamentably. Undeniably it did on the first night” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: MPS 455. Reviewers generally noted connections with Orton's What the Butler Saw. "The revue-sketch format fits perfectly Bennett's technique of writing in 10-minute takes" (Guardian 11/5). Observer provided several examples of Bennett's witty non sequiturs, as did New Statesman. "An obvious bet for West End longevity" (Variety). Theatrically Bennett excels in the single line—"I saw his face only in the fitful light of a post-coital Craven A"—rather than sustained dialogue" (Times). The first New York production (Martin Beck 25/11/75) ran for 95 performances.

Comment: Variety reported there were longeurs between the musical numbers, accents varied needlessly between American and English, and Anna Neagle's voice had “grown tiny.” Spectator averred nostalgia had been the (very poor) reason for the production, and asking Neagle to perform “was a grave imposition upon a lady of her advanced years,” especially as her voice was badly miked. “What should have been the revival of a gay, young flapper turned out to be the embalming of a fragrant old dear” (Daily Mirror). Christian Science Monitor reported the piece opened “to the most devastating reviews received by any show for many years.” Times panned both the piece, the production, and the performances. After providing a history of the piece, Illustrated London News joined the chorus of disapproval.

Comment: MPS 471. New Statesman was paralyzed by the obliqueness of Kilty's “arrangement of the Barrett-Browning love-letters.” Times described it as “a rather starved theatrical experience,” but commended the performances of Keith Michell and Geraldine McEwan. “Beautifully acted and paints a warm, vivid picture of a remarkable, enduring love affair” (Daily Mirror).

Comment: MPS 480. The play was given a rehearsed reading at Hampstead 29/11/70. Variety did not see much of a future in the theatre for the piece. “The play is underpowered, short and should even be shorter ... Chappell can write some amusing dialogue—and in Leonard Rossiter and Frances de la Tour he has two of the best comic performers in the business” (Daily Mirror). Guardian said the play should not have been transferred to a large theatre, but commended Rossiter’s “typically manic performance as Rooksby.” Times also praised Rossiter but faulted the direction for its lack of a firm farcical base. There were 39 performances at the Apollo. The play was adapted later for television as Rising Damp (1974). The first New York production was at the Hudson Guild 19/9/79.

Robin Phillips’s direction was “admirable,” with excellent performances from Joan Plowright and Jeremy Brett (Guardian 18/5). New Statesman said the direction was sensitive and unpretentious, but the acting could have been “a little more adventurous.” Times said the production was good visually, and the performances were superficially “impeccable”; however, there was no exploration of the characters.

Times 22/5/73, 11. Comment: The musical was about the rise of a man named Kingdom. An “odd musical which flounders helplessly in a no-mans-land somewhere between Hair, Jesus Christ Superstar and How to Succeed in Business” (Stage). Times said the piece should have been consigned to the wastepaper basket, and felt sympathy for the performers.

World Theatre Season. A revival of the previous year’s production (72.222). “Elaborately imagined, complex, confused but ultimately stunning—and superbly performed” (Spectator). “As before, the base of the show is the Stavrogin-Peter relationship. Together, Jan Nowicki’s Satanically glamorous Stavrogin and Wojciech Pszoniak’s officiously buzzing Peter form as great a duet as I have seen on this stage” (Times).

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 24/5/73. Guardian (25/5) commended Michael Blakemore’s “scrupulous attention to the text,” “notable individual performances within an ensemble framework.” Times agreed and was fulsome in its praise. Spectator called Blakemore’s direction “a hatchet job.” “This interpretation is largely an exercise in style ... rather anaemic of imagination, starved of emotional matter” (Observer 3/6). The final five minutes, a complete restaging of Firs coming into the nursery, destroyed the remainder of the production for Illustrated London News. The production remained in repertory until 17/1/74.

Comment: Ilario Pedro, Pan African Theatre. The play “traces the ‘progress’ of Shiju and the Professor, from the asylum-cum -marriage bureau in which their mental fatigue has landed them, to the model village where their true natures assert themselves: she is a nymphomaniac; he is one of life’s voyeurs” (Stage).

Comment: English Stage Company. “Bond is plainly trying to say something profound about the meaning of existence. But he ties his messages in the most tightly knotted wrappings” (Daily Mirror). Variety found the play enigmatic but funny; Ian Holm was “fastidiously brilliant,” Coral Browne played with “great style and nuance.” Tribune judged it Bond’s bleakest play so far, particularly worrying in its ambivalent view of the future of society. Christian Science Monitor noted the ambivalence and Coral Browne’s marvelous performance. Times thought the piece “turns a Janus gaze on the goodness of mankind and the evil of human institutions.”

For Times (30/5) the piece and production justified the claim that “the musical [was] America’s gift to world theatre.” Of Dolores Gray’s performance, Times (18/12) said “one can only describe Miss Gray as a jolly good sport for battling through to the end.” The first New York production (Broadway 21/5/59) ran for 702 performances.

Plot: Vinson. Reviews: Guardian 4/6/73, 8; Stage 14/6/73, 17. Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. Guardian commended the authors for their commitment to “exact social detail,” but thought they were too sentimental about traditional values.

73.241 Pilgrim’s Progress (P) Peter Albery (adpt of John Bunyan’s book, 1678). ROUNDHOUSE 3/6/73. Cast: Stage 17/5/73, 21. Comment: Theatre Roundabout. The production began a nationwide tour in early 1973.

73.242 The Ghost Outside the Machine (P) John Taylor. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 4/6/73 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 7/6/73, 11. Barry Grantham, Edmund Dring, Beverley Walding. Dir Barry Grantham. Review: Stage 14/6/73, 16. Comment: Curved Space. “A puzzling fantasy about a husband who gets caged in by bars while reading his newspaper in a park” (Stage).

73.243 The Incredible Vanishing!!! (P for children) Denise Coffey. YOUNG VIC 4/6/73.* Ian Taylor, Jo Maxwell Muller, Andrew Robertson, Gavin Reed, Ian Charleson, Alan Coates, Jeremy James-Taylor, Michael Scholes. Dir Denise Coffey; Dgn John MacFarlane. Review: Stage 14/6/73, 19. Comment: The plot involved the queen of the sub-humans (Her Marshesty, the Monarch of Drains) who kidnaps children. Stage thought the play was a “winner.”

73.244 Life Everlasting (P) Yulisa Amadu Maddy. AFRICA CENTRE c. 4/6/73 (Ln). Cast: Stage 7/6/73, 11. Omid Ansari, Taiwo Ajai, Jimmi Rand, Johnny Tadfor. Comment: Gbakanda Teater.

73.248b You See the Thing Is This (C, 1a) Ken Campbell. BOLTONS 5/6/73 (Ln). 1st perfd ITV 30/5/70. Cast: Stage 31/5/73, 19. Mark Cooper, Holly de Jong, John Foley. Dir Glenn Brancar. Review: Stage 21/6/73, 18. Comment: Moloch Productions. “An essay in one-upmanship, showing a battle between a male cub-leader with a simple directness of manner and his girl partner in a projected tennis tournament” (Stage).

73.249 Marriages (P, 1a) William Trevor. KING'S HEAD 5/6/73 (Ln). 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 31/5/73, 19. William Trevor, Zena Walker, Ann Morrish. Dir Ben Rea; Dgn Paul Staples. Plot: Walford. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 20/7/73, 14; Stage 14/6/73, 16; Tribune

22/6/73, 7. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company and Basement Theatre. “Finely played by Zena Walker and Ann Morrish” (Tribune). For Christian Science Monitor William Trevor was “England’s master of the one-act play.”

73.250 Mother's Day (P) James Dawson. NOTRE DAME HALL 5/6/73 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 7/6/73, 11. Anthony Sherwood. Dir James Dawson. Review: Stage 21/6/73, 18. Comment: Three's Company. In the play a son converses with his mother's ghost.

73.251 The Mutation Show (P). ROUND HOUSE 5/6/73. Raymond Barry, Shami Chaikin, Tom Lillard, Jo Ann Schmidman, Tina Shephard, Paul Zimet. Sound, Mus Ellen Maddow. Comment: Joseph Chaikin's Open Theatre. The piece was a collaborative work dating from October 1970. “A ravishing display of technique,” but otherwise “pretty thin” (Guardian). Observer provided a detailed account of what happened, but concluded “an unmistakably serious and intense evening, yet one that rarely transcends a certain self-satisfaction with its own technique.” “I have rarely seen a talented cast wasted more pretentiously than in this sequence of mimes and gyrations” (Illustrated London News). “Not to be missed for their visual and oral imagery,” but the piece lacked an author's controlling hand (Times).

73.252 The Heroes of the Iceberg Hotel (C with mus) Andy Smith. HALF MOON 6/6/73.* Cast: SHM. Police-man, Chairman Maurice Colbourne; Loretta Yvonne Gilan; Narrator Michael Irving; Turpin and others Philip McGough; Chief of Police, Detective Dr. Uric Skatol Ken Morley; Female Advisor Examiner Jenny Moss; Clarissa and others Mary Sheen; Pianist, Yesman Andy Smith; Policeman Guy Sprung; Charlie David Stockton; Harry Robin Summers. Dir Michael Irving; Mus dir Andy Smith; Dgn Caroline Irving; Light Richard Naylor. Review: Stage 14/6/73, 17. Comment: “As the cartoon-book backcloth turns its pages, we follow a satire on gangsterism, fascism, and the current craze for glorifying both at one remove” (Stage).

73.253 Off the Bus (Revue) James Saunders and Jim Hiley and Henry Livings and David Halliwell. ALMOST FREE 6/6/73 (Ln). Prunella Scales, Paul Brooke, Kevin Costello, Jim Hiley. Dir Noel Greig. Reviews: Stage 14/6/73, 16; Tribune 22/6/73, 7. Comment: Ed Berman's Fun Art Bus. “Side-splittingly funny” (Tribune). Stage said the revue was “fast-paced [but] rather a lightweight

73.254 Beckett Plays. YOUNG VIC 7/6/73. Cast: Stage 7/6/73, 11. Reviews: Illustrated London News 1/8/73, 67; Observer 24/6/73, 30; Stage 28/6/73, 15. Comment: The plays included Play, Come and Go, Krapp's Last Tape, Act without Words One and Two. Performers included Andrew Robertson, Denise Coffey, Mel Martin, Ian Taylor, Alun Lewis, Michael Scholes, Jeremy James-Taylor. Directors included Adrian Brine and David Toguri. “A programme mixed in quality, Andrew Robertson, now a Scottish protagonist of an episode that wears thin in revival, Krapp's Last Tape, was permitted to see himself, when young, in a television set. It came off better than an insufficiently precise production of the eerie, life-after-death piece, Play” (Illustrated London News “).

73.255 Nightwalk (Collage) Jean Claude Van Itallie and Sam Shepard and Megan Terry and Wallace Stevens and Ted Hughes and Bob Dylan. ROUND HOUSE 7/6/73. 1st perf? Plot: MacNicholas. Comment: Joseph Chaikin's Open Theatre. Guardian said there was “a sizable gulf between the company's physical skill and the banality of the ideas they are expressing ... a bird's-eye-view of urban humanity as it goes about the business of eating, drinking, talking and copulating.” New Statesman opined the company had lost its sense of purpose. The first New York performance was at St. Clement's Church 8/9/73.

73.256 Mr. Thomas Cook's Extraordinary Excursionial Temperance Touring Show (Ent). MAY FAIR 8/6/73 (Ln). Cast: Stage 7/6/73, 11. Simon Coady, Andrew Manley, Julia McLean, Alison Skilbeck, Allan Zipson, Emma Hilton. Dir Mick Rodgers. Review: Stage 21/6/73, 18. Comment: Emma Theatre Group. “An hour-long documentary revue about the great Victorian travel expert, Thomas Cook” (Stage).

73.257 Oh What a Lovely War! (Mus ent, 2a) Charles Chilton et. al. TOWER, CANONBURY, 8/6/73. Cast: TTC. Plot: Bordman/5, 638, Dorney, Fletcher, Law, Loney, OTF, Patterson, Weintraub.

73.259 Umewaka Noh Troupe. ALDWYCH 9/6/73. Comment: World Theatre Season. The pieces performed were Sumida-Gawa by Motomasa; Oba-Ga-Sake—a Kyogen play.

73.260 Pilk's Madhouse (P) Ken Campbell. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 10/6/73. Comment: Ken Campbell Road Show.

73.261 Watch on the Works (P, 3a) Pierre Roudy (adpt Pierre Roudy and Cyril Buhler). QUESTORS 10/6/73. Cast: QTA. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 15/6/73, 11; Stage 21/6/73, 18. Comment: This surreal piece “concerns a lonely old man, deserted by his wife, who personalises and falls in love with the gasometer he is hired to watch” (Stage).

73.262 Butley (D, 2a) Simon Gray. RICHMOND 11/6/73. Ben Butley James Bolam; Joseph Keyston Richard Morant; Edna Shaft Mary Allen; Reg Nuttall Terry Wright; Anne Butley Jennifer Claire; Miss Heasman Anita Cary; Mr. Gardner Eric Carte. Pres Cameron Mackintosh; Dir Pauline Gaunt. Plot: Demastes/2, Dorney, Fletcher, Griffiths, Gunn, Hischak, Hischak/2, 50, Loney, Patterson, Salem, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: A one-week engagement.

73.263 The Malcontent (C) John Marston. BANKSIDE GLOBE 11/6/73. Duke Pietro Giacomo Arthur Cox; Duke Giovanni Altofronto Derek Godfrey; Mendoza Michael Johnson; Macquerelle Hazel Hughes; Duchess Maria Meg Davies. Dir Jonathan Miller; Sc dgn Patrick Robertson; Cost dgn Rosemary Vercoe. Plot: Gassner, Hochman, Holzknicht, Law. Reviews: Birmingham Post 14/6/73, 2; Illustrated London News 1/8/73, 67; Irish Times 29/6/73, 6; Observer 17/6/73, 30; Spectator 23/6/73, 790; Stage 14/6/73, 19. Comment: Nottingham Playhouse Company. Observer reported Jonathan Miller had directed the play as “a satiric farce ... the treatment is sometimes too insistence.” “A clotted play but here done with enthusiasm, and once, amusingly, carried into near-burlesque. I may remember this less than the aspect of the stage; the make-up of its people reminded me of a group of animated tomb-monuments” (Illustrated London News).

73.264 Marlene Dietrich (One-woman show). WIMBLEDON 11/6/73. Marlene Dietrich. Mgr dir Merton Civic Theatre Trust; Mgr, Lic Frank Tomsett; Pres Robert Patterson; Mus arr Burt Bacharach; Mus dir William Blezard; Light Joe Davis.

73.265 Terminal (Collage) Susan Yankowitz. ROUND HOUSE 11/6/73. 1st perfd 1969. Plot: Hischak/2, 17.

Reviews: Guardian 8/6/73, 12, 12/6/73, 12; Tribune 22/6/73, 7. Comment: Joseph Chaikin's Open Theatre. Unlike the Open Theatre's other production, Terminal achieves a "seamless blend of style and content," here about death (Guardian 12/6). The first New York production was at Washington Square Methodist Church 26/5/70.

73.266 Umewaka Noh Troupe. ALDWYCH 11/6/73. Reviews: Birmingham Post 12/6/73, 2; Stage 14/6/73, 15; Times 12/6/73, 10. Comment: World Theatre Season. The pieces performed were Sotowa Komachi by Kan'ami; Bo-Shibari—a Kyogen play; Funa-Benkei by Kojiro. Performers included Manzaburo Umewaka, Masayoshi Shigeyama, Masahaura Umewaka.

73.267 Edward G.—Like the Film Star (P) John Harvey Flint. KING'S HEAD 12/6/73. 1st perfd St. Mary's Street Hall, Edinburgh, 19/8/72. Edward Robin Bailey; Maureen Pryor, Edna Dort, Michael Deacon, Terence Davies. Dir Peter Stevenson. Reviews: Birmingham Post 13/6/73, 2; Christian Science Monitor 12/7/73, 16; Daily Mirror 12/6/73, 18 (TV show); Stage 21/6/73, 17; Tribune 22/6/73, 7. Comment: Also performed BBC-1 TV 11/6/73 (with different cast). "The basic ingredients for a play designed to tug at the heart strings are always the same: misunderstandings, ineffectual people, sick children, and childhood stories" (Daily Mirror). Directed with "unbearable ponderousness" (Tribune); however, Stage averred the "direction allows the play to unfold at a pace that might seem disastrously slow in a normal theatre. At the King's Head it is exactly right." Christian Science Monitor lamented the fact that this "fine and moving" play had been ignored by the critics.

73.268 Good Times (P) Roy Minton. BUSH 12/6/73 (Lt).* Cast: Stage 7/6/73, 7. Moira Redmond, John Junkin. Dir Marty Feldman; Dgn Joan Wadge. Review: Stage 21/6/73, 23. Comment: "Our dear corny old friend for a two-hander, the prostitute and her client" (Stage).

73.269 Stiff and Silent (P) John St. Clair. BUSH 12/6/73.* Dennis Tom McKenzie; Jules Mannheim, Geoff M. Pocock, David Kandaker, Jim Reville. Review: Stage 21/6/73, 23. Comment: Stage was disgusted by this piece about "a moronic and sadistic bunch of hospital porters."

73.270 The Houseboy (P) Irving Wardle. OPEN SPACE 13/6/73.* Cast: Stage 24/5/73, 1; WWT/16. George Timothy West; Eric Nicholas Selby; John Philip Donaghy; Woman Thelma Holt. Dir Charles Marowitz; Dec Di Seymour. Stage 21/6/73, 17; Times 14/6/73, 9; Tribune 22/6/73, 7. Comment: Wardle was theatre critic for Times; his colleague Charles Lewsen (himself a dramatist) reviewed the production and offered minor criticisms. "An honest, well-shaped, slightly old-fashioned autobiographical slice-of-life" with "strong performances from Timothy West and Nicholas Selby" as two ageing homosexuals (Guardian). Spectator disliked it. New Statesman said it was a "very accomplished" first play, although it did lack "a certain lack of moral definition and shape."

73.271 The Provok'd Wife (C) John Vanbrugh. GREENWICH 14/6/73. Cast: Theatricalia; WWT/16. Belinda Linda Thorson; *Col. Plot: Fletcher, Hochman, Law, Patterson, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: Birmingham Post 15/6/73, 2; Illustrated London News 1/8/73, 67; Observer 24/6/73, 30; Stage 21/6/73, 17; Times 15/6/73, 9. Comment: Company Theatre. "A leaden revival" (Observer). Frederick Proud's production was "intelligent and very well cast," but it lacked "comic momentum" (Times).

73.272 The Nutters (P) J. P. Cotterell. SWISS TAVERN 15/6/73 (Ln).* Old Harry Richard Howard; Stephen Williams, David Bradley, Jacqueline da Costa. Review: Stage 28/6/73, 16. Comment: The play concerned the inmates of the occupational therapy room of a home for the mentally disturbed (Stage).

73.273 Tom Barker of Camden—and the World (P) Arnold Hinchcliffe. UNITY 16/6/73.* Charles Turner, Ossie Lewis, Harry Persey, Laurence Davies, Raymond Cross. Dir Cliff Fenn; Dgn Graham Binmore. Reviews: Stage 21/6/73, 23; Tribune 6/7/73, 9. Comment: A documentary play about "the life of a revolutionary dedicated to the cause of the 'Wobblies,' the Industrial Workers of the World" (Tribune).

73.274 Night without Sleep (C thriller) Sheila Hodgson. WIMBLEDON 18/6/73. 1st perfd BBC Radio Home 6/6/59; 1st stage perf? Grant Anderson. Review: Stage 28/6/73, 16. Comment:

A poorly written piece with two story lines that did not mesh; poorly produced (Stage). Stage (21/6) incorrectly listed Mary White instead of Mary Mitchell.

73.275 Someone at Risk (P) Gabriel Marvil. COMMONWEALTH INSTITUTE 18/6/73.* Babs Sue Blenkinsop; Paul Gerald Martin; Mrs. Bunn Molly Veness; Barry Martin, Karen Ford, Lousie Lister. Dir Shaun Macloughlin. Review: Stage 28/6/73, 15. Comment: A “moral tract about abortion, or rather against it, and it manages to be dull, novelettish and completely incredible all the same time” (Stage).

Comment: English Stage Company. The transfer to the Kings Road Theatre marked the opening of a new theatre (the former Essoldo Cinema). A benefit performance was given on 23/1/74 at 11:30pm for an injured board operator (Stage 10/1/74, 12). Guardian (23/6) commended the show for “the rare feat of being witty and erotic at the same time.” “Tremendous invention, energy and glee” (New Statesman). “A wonderfully rowdy, superbly tacky piece of low-camp froth” (Gay News). Variety reported the show at Chelsea was “a sell out,” and Tim Curry was an “emphatic standout.” “Like other examples of its kind [camp], it burns itself out during the performance, giving you little to take away and remember” (Times). The first New York production (Belasco 10/3/75) ran for 45 performances.

Comment: The scheduled opening at the Alexandra, Birmingham, 27/3/73, was postponed because Kenneth More suffered from kidney stone problems. Jeremy Kingston was drama critic for Punch. The plot involved a Times writer becoming an astrologer and was also a standard sex triangle comedy. Guardian said it was an uneven comedy with a “total disregard for reality.” Similarly Spectator remarked on the play’s “implausibility” and descent into the nonsensical. “The dialogue is witty and perceptive, and Mr. More’s casual style of acting fits the main character perfectly” (Daily Mirror). Illustrated London News enjoyed the play’s civilized wit and humour. Variety noted the “automatic marquee attraction” of Kenneth More that should afford longevity.

73.281 Nuts (Ent) Various writers. THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 20/6/73. Reviews: Birmingham Post 21/6/73, 2; Daily Mirror 21/6/73, 16; Guardian 21/6/73, 10; Illustrated London News 1/8/73, 67; New Statesman 29/6/73, 977–78; Observer 24/6/73, 30; Stage 28/6/73, 15; Times 21/6/73, 13; Tribune 6/7/73, 9. Comment: The piece comprised songs, dances, sketches, and local news. “An unholy mess” (Guardian). “The ineptitude of most of the numbers passes belief ... few of the performers are bothering” (Observer). “An entertainment shambles, without beginning, middle or end” (Stage). “A slovenly ‘party’ that needed some stringent rehearsals” (Illustrated London News). Times called it “a pugnacious revue, combining community protest and community fun,” but the material was only “average.” “Crude and unfunny” (Daily Mirror).

73.283 Crinum Crancum (P, 11sc) John Norman. QUESTORS 23/6/73. * Cast: QTA. Review: Stage 5/7/73, 23. Comment: “Its main dramatic fault is that the central story, that of a young doctor who hangs for his oblique involvement in an attempt on the life of George III, is so much the archetypical history of the man in the middle that the whole thing becomes a sort of shadow play and the characters lose their third dimension” (Stage).

73.284 Co-pessimists (P) Barry Grantham. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 25/6/73 (Ln). * Review: Stage 5/7/73, 19. Comment: Curved Space. The piece failed “to exploit the possibilities of treating a seaside Co-optimist show as a comment on the world today” (Stage).

73.285 Toys of God (P) Alexander Ward. Review: Stage 5/7/73, 22. Comment: A far too wordy play about a rich man forcing a couple to perform the Garden of Eden scene for him (Stage).

73.286 The True History of Squire Jonathan (P) John Arden. ALMOST FREE 25/6/73 (Ln).  Cast: Stage 28/6/73, 17. Squire Jonathan Ian Trigger; Jenny Runacre. Dir Ed Berman. Plot: Weintraub. Reviews: Christian Science Monitor 16/7/73, 14; Stage 5/7/73, 19. Comment: Ambiance. A good revival of a play that misfires (Stage).

Comment: Set in the 1920s, the production prevented “the actors from exploring their characters” (New Statesman). “An undergraduate frolic” (Guardian). Times said the Bankside still did not exhibit “signs of any clear aim” so far as policy was concerned and the “shallow open stage seemed more of an embarrassment.”

Comment: Guardian (27/6) enjoyed everything but the nostalgia. Times said the show had succeeded “in pinning its period down,” and the essence of the piece was “concentrated style.” Variety said the show would benefit from the current interest in the 50s, but noted the numerous shows that were also nostalgic and youth-oriented. New Statesman remarked on “a fine performance by Richard Gere” and the thin story-line. “It is a show which assumes everyone in the audience is deaf. If you sit near the stage, you’re liable to need treatment for shell-shock ... Slick, polished and exuberant—I liked it” (Daily Mirror). The first New York production (Eden 14/2/72 and transfers) ran for 3,388 performances.

Comment: Guardian declared this “labyrinthine comedy of adultery” became “too labyrinthine and confusing”; Daily Mirror shared that reaction. Possibly the most intricate (and indescribable) farce in the language” (New Statesman). Variety commended Robert Chetwyn’s “spirited direction,” and the excellent cast, particularly Francis Matthews and Joe Melia. Times described the piece as chess-like but “very good fun.”

Comment: English Stage Company. “A sloppily composed affair about individual terrorism” (Illustrated London News). Variety found the play somewhat confusing and a case of preaching to the converted. “Yet another political play at the trendy Court, full of ‘what about the workers’ philosophy. All very well-intentioned but delivered in such a banal fashion as to make even an ardent socialist sympathise with the plight of a fascist beast” (Daily Mirror). Spectator appeared flummoxed by whatever message Brenton was trying to convey. New Statesman was similarly mystified. “Scene for scene a wonderful piece of theatre,” but overall fragmented and faultily constructed (Times).

Comment: Siobhan McKenna was "as splendid as ever" (Irish Times). Variety said the revival was competent, but, taking over from the recently deceased [11/6/73] Sean Kenny, Siobhan McKenna's direction was "somewhat flat." "A competent mediocrity characterises the evening," including McKenna's Juno (New Statesman). Times noted the production used Sean Kenny's suggestive set, but the suggestions were not followed up in the production.

Tyneside Theatre Company Production. A rewrite of Strindberg's The Dance of Death. "A painfully laboured rewrite" and a waste of the cast's talents (Spectator).

Christian Science Monitor wondered why Dürrenmatt bothered to write this “melodramatic farrago.” The first New York production was at the Forum 3/6/71.

Comment: MPS 370, 462. A completely new cast took over on 1/4/74 (Stage 21/2/74, 1). “Blithely funny ... confirms Mr Ayckbourn’s skill as a gifted farceur” (Guardian). “For sheer delightful idiocy and lunatic fooling the second act ... stands supreme. The laughter is uproarious and never lets up” (Daily Mirror). Variety suggested Ayckbourn was London’s Neil Simon, noting his annual production of a new comedy, with this one also being “a good bet for Broadway.” Christian Science Monitor declared Richard Briers was “becoming one of the best comic actors on the British Stage.” Times found this a “coldly amusing show” because Ayckbourn “does not allow his characters freedom to develop.” The first New York production (Music Box 8/10/74) ran for 592 performances.

(9/8–22/8/73), 15; Stage 26/7/73, 23. Comment: Play Room. “An earnest if obscure play about the desperate criminality and homosexuality which exists ... among a kind of international jet-set of urban beggars” (Stage). Rayner Bourton was also appearing in late night performances of The Rocky Horror Show (73.279).

73.312 Berlin Days (P) Stephen Poliakoff. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 8/7/73. * Julius Tony Maples; Rainer David Haughton. Review: Stage 19/7/73, 20. Comment: Theatre Outside. The play explored the relationship between two strange, apparently incompatible men.

73.313 The Rough Field (Epic poem) John Montague. ROUND HOUSE 8/7/73. 1st London perf. Review: Stage 19/7/73, 17. Comment: This poem on Ulster offered “an explanation of the soil and the air and the overall climate that breeds hate as an alternative to what?” (Stage). The readers were Patrick Magee, John Montague, Seamus Heaney, Benedict Kiely, and Tom McGurk.

Comment: The play was about the Brontës (and not sponsored by Moral Rearmament). Gay News was impressed by Robert Powell's "great charm and sensitivity" as Branwell. The play focused on Branwell's "untidy life-style and fantasies" (Spectator). "Very old-fashioned, replete with 'strong' curtain lines" (Christian Science Monitor). Times noted most scenes depended on foreknowledge for their effect. "This strong, meaty, old-fashioned play with more than a hint of melodrama—is highlighted by some fine acting. Anne Stallybrass is a no-nonsense Charlotte; Robert Powell is the neurotic Branwell, and Angela Down is Emily" (Daily Mirror).

73.318 Time Again (Anthology) Harold Pinter. HOWFF 11/7/73 (Ln). 1st perfd Palace, Watford, 1973? Cast: Stage 5/7/73, 19. Veronica Manussis, Liz Willis, Annie Tyson, Simon Crawford, Colin Cook, Alisdair Ramsay, Jeremy Arnold, Roj Lewis. Dir Jan Sargent. Review: Stage 19/7/73, 19. The production eschewed the play's humour and successfully conveyed Beckett's disgust with life (Christian Science Monitor). Times commended Johanna Bryant's circular set for creating "a better focus for the dramatic action."

73.320 Flibberty and the Penguin (MP for children, 2a) David Wood (mus, bk). COCKPIT 15/7/73. 1st perfd Swan, Worcester, 27/12/71.

73.321 Ian Hinchliffe. SWISS TAVERN 15/7/73. Comment: Matchbox Purveyors. Hinchliffe was a performance artist and founded the Matchbox Purveyors, a group of musicians, performers, poets and visual artists.

73.322 Excuses, Excuses (P) David Edgar. OPEN SPACE 16/7/73. 1st perfd Belgrade, Coventry, 4/5/72. Geoff Hunt Anthony Milner; Gillian Rhind, Sally Sanders, David Quilter, James Warrior. Dir Christopher Parr. Reviews: Guardian 17/7/73, 12; New Statesman 20/7/73, 98; Stage 26/7/73, 19; Times 17/7/73, 10. Comment: The play was also known as Fired. It was both about a young man who protests joblessness by committing arson and a satire on society's "hunt for elaborate explanations for basically simple actions" (Guardian). New Statesman noted the power of Edgar's "concentrated passion." Times pointed out Edgar's own (theatre) world was no different than the world he was mocking.

73.323 Hudson's Amazing Money Making Steam Driven Railway Pantomime (P) Richard Drain. BUSH 16/7/73.* Hudson, Queen Victoria Davey Watson; Chris Shepherd, Katherine Cresswell, Barbara Daling, Steve Pickles. Dir Richard Drain. Review: Stage 16/8/73, 46. Comment: York Shoestring Company. "It is a skit on capitalism, shrouded in that early Victorian spirit of endeavour that made George Stephenson and his successors plough up fields in order to plant train tracks" (Stage).

Directed "brilliantly" by John Dexter, with two "imposing performances" by Alec McCowen and Peter Firth" (Variety). The play's argument is presented "in such bold, clear, vivid theatrical terms," and Alan Strang "is a brilliant study of a man of reason" (Guardian). New Statesman reported the play was "greeted with hoots of approval by the first-nighters," that visually the production was "fine," but the play's argument was "worrying." Tribune discussed the play in terms of R. D. Laing's psychiatry. Christian Science Monitor (10/8) reported that not in at least twenty five years "have I heard applause so prolonged and so insistent as greeted this formidable, this inspiring play." Times, unimpressed by the play itself, declared "not for the first time, [Shaffer] owes whatever numinous results he does achieve to his director, John Dexter." See also Lloyd Evans, 189–91. The production remained in repertory until 8/2/75. The first New York production (Plymouth 24/10/74) ran for 1,209 performances.

Comment: Belgrade Theatre (Coventry) Company. New Statesman described the play as "two hours of relentlessly lumbering irony ... a spectacular act of literary hara-kiri." "A stimulating exercise in allusion-spotting" (Tribune). "Influenced by everyone from Jarry to the Marx Brothers, the play is a splendidly literate joke" (Guardian). Times found the production "grotesquely funny and entirely consistent," and singled out Terry Scott who took "clowning to the frontiers of Grand Guignol." Christian Science Monitor, which thought the play "very awful," recounted meeting Ionesco immediately after the performance. Illustrated London News described it as foolish, cheap, and tiresome.

Comment: English Stage Company. The production lasted ninety minutes. Guardian found this play about violence physically sickening, and faulted the author for not examining the real reasons for physical violence; Variety agreed. New Statesman detected a “raw, bold humour” in the piece that was designed to make the audience condemn itself. Times noted the piece had “misleading affinities with Orton’s Loot”; however, Williamson’s “jokes make the brutality even more painful to watch,” but ultimately “a ferociously exhilarating evening.”

73.331 Feast of Fools (Ent) Bob Flag (mus) and Paddy Fletcher (lyr) and Charles Manson (lyr). OVAL HOUSE 20/7/73.* Review: Stage 2/8/73, 17. Comment: Times opined Rattigan might have been a fine Chekhovian director in the 1930s had he turned his hand to directing rather than play writing. Stage declared "don't miss this production for its marvellous recreation of the spirit of theatre of forty years ago. and for the performances which show the value of team work in comedy." Illustrated London News was pleased this was a straight revival and that Frank Dunlop made no attempt to guy the play. The first New York production (Henry Miller's 28/9/37) ran for 111 performances.

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 2/8/73. Guardian discussed Soyinka's adaptation, and neither it nor the director Roland Joffé were clear on how to treat the tragedy.

Spectator (11/8) agreed, saying Soyinka and Joffé had treated Euripides's ambivalence in "cavalier fashion." A "mangled rewrite" (Times). New Statesman said the production seemed to turn "the play into yet another wholesale attack on the 'fascist mentality,' whatever that is." Christian Science Monitor declared the adaptation was done "very badly ... has altered the significance of the play, by setting the struggle between Order and Ecstasy wholly in favor of Ecstasy." The production remained in repertory until 20/9/74.

Comment: The performance on 27/8/73 had to be abandoned after twenty minutes because of torrential rain (Daily Mirror 28/8/73, 5). Performed in twentieth-century dress. Guardian complained Tony Richardson’s production reduced the play to “nonsense,” and had not been given enough “time, thought and a company.” New Statesman said

Richardson was convinced the audience was "too stupid to see for ourselves that the play has contemporary relevance; and accordingly he forces us to spend the evening wandering up and down the 20th century." Illustrated London News said Richardson had ruined the play with his directorial interference. Of Julian Glover and Vanessa Redgrave Times wondered "how far their anti-heroic playing is deliberate."

Comment:

English Stage Company. Tribune thought the play was “an ideological hodgepodge” and “Storey doesn’t know what to think”; moreover, the characters lack “inner vitality.” Illustrated London News conjectured an audience just needed to let the play work on it, to surrender to its poetic rhythms. Christian Science Monitor noted the play was not about the historical Cromwell; rather, its concern was “with the inspiration and the threat of a Puritan ethic,” a judgment shared by Guardian. Variety remarked on the “number of themes and messages” intertwining throughout the play, and commended the performances of Albert Finney, Jarlath Conroy, and Brian Cox. Times said the performances “suggest immense reserves behind the writing; though as the play proceeds one starts suspecting that they may not be there.”

Comment: Prospect Theatre Company. Derek Jacobi gave a standout performance (Stage). “There was absolutely no call to set the entire action in the brothel, to use near-modern dress, to wreck various parts in either caricature or transvestism, and at times to thrust us towards an eccentric musical. The result was noisy and irritating,” and the fault of the director (Illustrated London News).

Comment: “Pleasing, well acted, intermittently amusing, but doesn’t seem to get across to local viewers”; thirty minutes had been trimmed from the play (Variety). Observer quoted Walter Kerr, Jean Kerr’s husband: “Some plays are so bad you don’t feel like a drink afterwards.” Comparing this piece with Two and Two Make Sex, Times remarked “here the same menopausal comedy returns in the Broadway style, and it redoubles my appreciation for the British product.” “As much of a non-event as we have had in the theatre for some time” (Illustrated London News). The first New York production (Plymouth 8/2/73) ran for 164 performances.

73.391 Operation Iskra (Political thriller) David Edgar. KING’S HEAD 5/9/73. 1st London perf. Dick Taverne, Ian Banforth, Mike Harrigan, Pat Rossiter. Plot: Weintraub. Reviews: Financial Times 7/9/73, 3; Guardian 6/9/73, 10. Comment: Paradise Foundry. “Angry, abrasive and stimulating, the play is very well worth seeing” (Guardian). “While half-developing a debate on revolutionary tactics . . . the play also strays into the realms of political thriller” (Financial Times).

73.392 Twelfth Night; or, What You Will (C) William Shakespeare. 73.406 A Nightingale in Bloomsbury Square (P, 1a) Maureen Duffy. HAMPSTEAD 17/9/73 (Lt).* Cast: Stage 6/9/73, 1. Victoria Sackville-West Eleanor Bron; Virginia Woolf Sian Phillips; Sigmund Freud Richard Wilson. Dir Michael Rudman; Dgn Frances Haggett. Plot: Bull/3, Vinson. Reviews: Birmingham Post 19/9/73, 2; Illustrated London News 1/12/73, 79; Observer 23/9/73, 35; Stage 27/9/73, 19; Times 19/9/73, 11. Comment: The play was “nearly as gauche as its title,” and afforded Sian Phillips little opportunity (Observer). Illustrated London News commended both the work and Phillips’s performance. Times compared the piece unfavorably with Gallacher’s Mr. Joyce Is Leaving Paris particularly for its lack of “dramatic action [and] theatrical dialogue.”

73.407 Richard II (T) William Shakespeare. SHAW 18/9/73. Richard II Francis Matthews; Duke of York Alan Halliday; Northumberland Shaun Austin-Olsen; Duchess of Gloucester Lindy White; Queen Isabel Suzanne Crowley; Gardener Andrew Wilde; Bolingbroke Charlie Macdonald; Timothy McInnerney. Dir Michael Croft; Mus Bryan Kelly; Sc dgn Christopher Lawrence. Reviews: Observer 23/9/73, 35; Stage 27/9/73, 19; Times 19/9/73, 11. Comment: National Youth Theatre. “A woeful job” (Observer). Times thought the play an odd choice in light of the company’s erstwhile policy of “fostering team spirit”; Francis Matthews played Richard “with undoubted flair,” but much of the production was disappointing.

73.408 The Constant Wife (C, 3a) W. Somerset Maugham. ALBERY 19/9/73. 260 perf. Cast: Theatricalia; Variety 3/10/73, 42; WWT/16. Barbara Fawcett Helen Christie; Bentley John Hart Dyke; Bernard Kersal Michael Allinson; Constance Middleton Ingrid Bergman; John Middleton, F.R.C.S. John McCallum; Marie-Louise Durham Barbara Ferris; Martha Culver Pauline Jameson; Mortimer Durham Charles Pemberton; Mrs. Culver Dorothy Reynolds. Chm, Mgr dir Donald Albery; Assist mgr dir Ian B. Plot: Best/26, 118, Bordman/3, 304, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, 142, Mander/5, Matlaw, Rogal, Salem, Shank, Shipley, Sobel. Reviews: Birmingham Post 20/9/73, 2; Gay News 13/12/73, 19; Guardian 20/9/73, 12; Illustrated London News 1/12/73, 79; Observer 23/9/73, 35; Spectator 13/10/73, 489; Stage 27/9/73, 19; Times 20/9/73, 13; Variety 3/10/73, 42. Comment: Observer opined the main attraction of the production for the public was Ingrid Bergman. Variety agreed (“the crowd-luring Ingrid Bergman” who only needed to just walk on stage), and noted the production was “visually and aurally elegant.” Times found the first two acts of “John Gielgud’s production were surprisingly slow,” and it took the third act before “Ingrid Bergman manage[d] to let the lines flow.” Apparently diplomatically, Illustrated London News omitted any reference to Bergman while observing “performances completely true ... are those of Dorothy Reynolds as the mother-in-law and Pauline Jameson as her younger daughter ... Otherwise, a generally confident parade of predictable artifice.”

73.409 Not Drowning But Waving (C, 2a) Leonard Webb. GREENWICH 20/9/73.* Cast: WWT/16. Zoe Geraldine McEwan; Phillip Mike Murray; Chloe Gillian Bailey; Waiter John Rogan; Robin Michael Gambon; Nigel Barry Quin. Dir Robin Phillips; Dec Daphne Dare; Light Howard Eldridge. Comment: Company Theatre. Guardian was tired of seeing plays about “the minor emotional crises of the affluent middle classes,” and thought Geraldine McEwan’s “rigidly stylised” performance didn’t help matters. However, New Statesman defended McEwan as her character was nothing more than an “unwieldy bundle of attempted epigrams.” Times found the piece mystifying and unrealistic, and Robin Phillips’s direction did not help.

English Stage Company. The title was altered later to Sizwe Bansi Is Dead. Guardian lauded the play and the professional debut performances of John Kani and Winston Ntshona. Observer and Tribune were equally enthusiastic. New Statesman reported the audience was “rapt throughout.” “Structurally ingenious ... marvellously performed ... works with commanding strength on a foreign audience” (Times). The first New York production (Edison 13/11/74) ran for 159 performances.

73.411 Blithe Spirit (Improbable F, 3a) Noël Coward. RICHMOND 24/9/73.  Mme Arcati Irene Handl; Elvira Lana Morris; Mary Preston, Terence Logan. Dir John Downing. In the play Agiluk is on strike against her wastrel husband who wants more children. Guardian was impressed by “the scale” of the Factory Theatre Lab (there were 15 actors in the company).

73.413 The Spanish Tragedy (T) Thomas Kyd. MERCURY 24/9/73. 1st perfd 1587. Don Andrea Jeremy Chandler; Revenge Paul Alexander; Isabella Veronica Manussis; Bel-Imperia Jeffra Seberg. Dir Philip Allen-Morgan. Plot: Griffiths, Holzknacht, Law, Patterson, Salem, Shipley. Review: Stage 11/10/73, 22. Comment: Another Theatre Company. “The simple and stylised production by Philip Allen-Morgan works extremely well”; however, inaudibility was a problem (Stage).

73.414 Sex, Cold Cans and a Coffin (P) Chris Johnson. KING’S HEAD 25/9/73 (Ln). * Cast: Stage 27/9/73, 24. Albert Denis Carey; John Douglas Storm; Jenny McCracken, Edna Doré. Dir John Link. Reviews: Stage 4/10/73, 16; Times 26/9/73, 9; Tribune 12/10/73, 7. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company. The play was set in a geriatric hospital and concerned two patients. Times said it was “bizarre” and the acting was an unreconciled mixture of the grotesque and the naturalistic. Tribune criticized every aspect of the play and production.

73.415 Bagdad Saloon (P) George F. Walker. BUSH

26/9/73. 1st perfd Factory Theatre Lab, Toronto, 28/3/73; 1st British perf. Plot: Vinson. Review: Globe and Mail (Toronto) 26/9/73, 11, 4/10/73, 11. Comment: Factory Theatre Lab of Toronto. “It can be seen as an exposé of North America’s unheroic myths, for the gunman is a suicidal coward, the immortal tart is an obsessed mother figure, the literary hero either a tired pornographer or a vain old lesbian” (Globe and Mail 4/10).

73.416 The Farm (P, 2a) David Storey. COURT 26/9/73; trfd to MAY FAIR 1/11/73. * 72 perf. Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian praised the “flawless economy” of Lindsay Anderson’s direction and the performances of Bernard Lee, Frank Grimes, Patricia Healey, and Doreen Mantle. “A warmly compassionate play ... featuring the most effective theatrical lighting in some time” (Variety). It seems the only weakness Observer could find was an inconsistency in the northern accents. New Statesman thought Storey’s main interest in the play was Mr. Slattery, “a self-appointed Lear,” played well by Lee. Times (27/9) said that for Storey “the place and the people are important for their own sake irrespective of any larger issues.” The first New York production (Circle 10/10/76) ran for 42 performances.

73.417a After Lydia (C, 1a) Terence Rattigan. DUCHESS 27/9/73. * 123 perf. Comment: Performed under the collective title In Praise of Love. The double bill struck Times “with the full force of a tentative blancmange.” Observer said that at least the piece had the virtue of insulting “the players with unspeakable puns” as Before Dawn did. “Not altogether convincing or logical, but it is often moving, funny and compassionate” (Variety). Illustrated London News thought the piece could be extended into a full-length play. The first New York production, as In Praise of Love (Morosco 10/12/74), ran for 200 performances.

73.417b Before Dawn (D, 1a) Terence Rattigan. DUCHESS 27/9/73.* 123 perf. Cast: Theatricalia; Variety 10/10/73, 42; *WWT/16. Comment: Performed under the collective title In Praise of Love. “A tawdry and feeble burlesque of La Tosca” (Spectator); Observer agreed. Donald Sinden’s “comic talents” provoked some laughs, Joan Greenwood was miscast (Variety) The first New York production, as In Praise of Love (Morosco 10/12/74), ran for 200 performances.

73.418 Spring Awakening (T, 3a) Frank Wedekind (anon trans of Frühlings Erwachen, 1906). COCKPIT 27/9/72. Plot: French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Gunn, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shipley. Comment: Catharsis.

The play concerned the first day at work of a Glasgow glass-beveller. Observer said it was crammed with incident and given “very fine performances.” Tribune described the production as “quietly truthful,” aided by “designer Deirdre Clancy’s naturalistic replica of the factory.”

73.420 Blithe Spirit (Improbable F, 3a) Noël Coward. TOWER, CANONBURY, 28/9/73. Cast: TTC. Plot: Best/41, 109, Bordman/4, 206–7, Demastes/1, Fletcher,

The company for both pieces comprised Kay Barlow, Ian Lowe, Deborah Davies, Howard Ball, Carolyn Rogers, John Gulliver. Dir Stephen John Mitchell. “The double-bill ... is grounded in Greek Myth; Orpheus and that favourite of the 70s, The Bacchae. In Orpheus we only smell the blood; in The Wound we savour it. The first lasts a quarter of an hour, the second is for ever” (Stage).

Comment: British Rubbish Repertory Company. “This mixture of the art of coarse acting, pantomime effects and bits of the Monty Python show makes no sense whatsoever. It’s about an inventor who takes off into time and space in pursuit of his ideal woman” (Stage).

Comment: A feeble "snob's comedy" about Harold Wilson as Prime Minister (Guardian). New Statesman thought the play's appeal was limited to those interested in the "corridors of power." "Amusingly observant and impartially skittish about Messrs Wilson and Heath" (Spectator). "Trying to write a farce about Ted Heath and Harold Wilson is an almost impossible task because the real-life antics of those political acrobats are much funnier than anything a writer can dream up" (Daily Mirror). Times generally commended the play and particularly the "farical finale [which made] an excellent statement on the Tweedle Dum and Dee relation of our major parties."

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian said the play, about Roger Casement, was attempt to portray the whole man" and "not to see him simply as a political martyr of the British Government," and to accept him as a "jubilant homosexual." "A tediously tendentious study" (Spectator). Christian Science Monitor averred Casement's Irish admirers would reject Rudkin's portrait because of the homosexual element. "The play is indigestible. Relentlessly the players hurl history at us" (Times). The production remained in repertory until 7/12/73.

Patsy Fuller, John Grant, Ross Sharp, Frank Bren. Dir Frank Bren. Review: Stage 18/10/73, 12. Comment: Company One Surrealist Theatre. The show consisted of uninspired "semi-related sketches about doctors, company directors and government ministers," poorly performed (Stage).

73.433 Touch and Go (P, 3a) D. H. Lawrence. QUESTORS 6/10/73.* 1st prof perf Playhouse, Oxford,

5/11/79. Cast: QTA. Reviews: Middlesex County Times 12/10/73, 15; Stage 11/10/73, 22. Comment: The play "lacks construction, unity and any sense of theatre, nor does it give the impression the author thought these techniques were worth attempting. Most of the scenes outlast their interest and the second almost outlasts endurance as well. From the plot point of view the author appears to have been trying to ride several horses at once, giving equal balance towards sexual freedom, female dominance and the wrongs of the miners. In the latter he was particularly unsuccessful, for it is unlikely that his achievement in making the mine owners in every way nicer and more worthwhile folk than the miners was intentional" (Stage).

Comment: Set in a fenced garden, the play concerned a husband and wife apparently oblivious to the world outside. New Statesman described the piece as "observant, witty, but dramatically somewhat slack and uncertain." Tribune's verdict was similar. A "rather arid piece" (Times).

Comment: MPS 538. Royal Shakespeare Company. The plot involved a gay scientist with the formula for a destructive weapon tattooed on his penis, but discernable only when his penis is erect. Guardian (12/10) called it a witty and sharp satire. Observer said the play was scrappy and the cast tended to patronize the American characters they were playing. “I laughed myself silly” Spectator (20/10) declared as a preface to defending it strongly against criticisms raised by other critics. Tribune was similarly amused and thought the plot also parodied James Bond movies, Dr. Strangelove, with influence by Feydeau. Times (12/10) appeared to take the piece more seriously than was intended: “The work of a man with a brilliant idea which he lacks the equipment to carry through” (Times 24/1).

Comment: Company Theatre. Press night was 29/10/73. An "affectionate and sharp-witted comedy" (Times). Observer said the production was "a vehicle for Elisabeth Bergner ... [who played a] suicidally dependent heroine." New Statesman thought "Bergner seems capable of little more than a fragile, plaintive charm."

73.465 The Only Street (P) Tom Gallacher. KING'S HEAD 25/10/73. 1st perfd Eblana, Dublin, 8/10/73. Comment: MPS 478. Gay News opined the piece would be remembered as “the show which Bob Fosse staged.” Christian Science Monitor reported the audience wanted an encore of a song performed by Elisabeth Welch, but was denied; it “is not a very good musical anyway.” Variety commended the production but thought that indifferent reviews would hamper its chance of a long run. Observer described it as “merely loathsome,” and listed numerous defects. Good only for six-year-olds, the piece “offers sensations as a substitute for genuine creative ideas” (Guardian). Daily Mirror viewed the production more favorably. The first New York production (Imperial 23/10/72) ran for 1,944 performances.

Comment: Guardian welcomed how Marowitz's adaptation challenged assumptions about the play. Tribune had liked earlier Marowitz's earlier adaptations but said this one did not work because of its ambiguities. Christian Science Monitor declared it was a triumph by turning the comedy into a tragedy. Times approved this "90-minute cut-up version ... converts the play into a black Artaudian fable virtually identifying marriage with a police state."

73.478 Bye Bye Blues (P) James Saunders. ORANGE TREE 2/11/73 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 25/10/73, 21. Bernard Holley, Robert McBain, Paul Shelley, Patricia Garwood, Pat Hope, Isobal Nisbet. Dir Sam Walters. Review: Stage 8/11/73, 17. Comment: Richmond Fringe. The play involved a couple who are possibly three couples, discussing a car accident.

Comment: Played with Triangle (Monol) by James Saunders at the King's Head (Stage 29/11/73, 15). Guardian (6/11) described it as a "witty and perceptive" piece that confirms "in married life three's company, two's none." The second half of the programme was a cabaret performed by The Moodies.

Comment: MPS 540. Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian said the piece avoided its potentially real "debate between political revolution and personal liberation," but an "astonishing performance" by John Wood. Like Guardian, Observer noted the piece descended into risible melodrama. Times added “pervasive unreality” to melodramatic to describe the play’s attributes. Illustrated London News wondered why the RSC staged it. The production remained in repertory until 4/12/74.

73.489 The Love of Lady Margaret (P) Bill Morrison. Comment: English Stage Company. A benefit performance for Victor Henry (1943–85), who had been severely injured in a car accident, was given on 2/11/73. “A gritty documentary of life and death in a Nottingham mining village of 1910. The hard times are realistically observed”; however, “then, as if Lawrence had suddenly decided ‘Let’s send the audience out laughing,’” he tacked on a farcical, happy ending (Daily Mirror). Variety found the play “a confusing mixture of naturalistic drama and farce” that tested the audience’s patience. However, Times noted approvingly that “the tone of the writing swings between outright farce and the clamped-down intensities of the companion plays.” Tribune admired the world and people created by Lawrence.

New Statesman was exasperated by the play’s unevenness and thought Lawrence should have revised it with a realization of the theatre’s technical capabilities.

Comment: A “bland and featureless” revival (Guardian). Times noted the actors were too hurried in speaking, thus breaking the necessary silences; moreover, Times thought Pinter was indifferent “to the fate of his puppets.”

73.492 A Concert for Saint Ovide (P) Antonio Buero Vallejo (trans Victor Dixon of El concierto de San Ovidio, 1962). Plot: Hochman, Matlaw, 112. Review: Stage 22/11/73, 19. Comment: The play had been performed in Spanish at Manchester University Theatre in 1966. “What we get is an incredibly melodramatic story that is a sort of cross between Anatole France and Baroness Orczy, with dialogue that, thanks either to author, translator or actors, comes over as even more naïf than the audience’s reactions” (Stage).

73.493a Hamble Dog and the Hopping Clogs (P for children) Vivian French. YOUNG VIC STUDIO 9/11/73 (m).* Cast: Stage 15/11/73, 1. Jenny Austen, Alan Coates, Michael Scholes. Dir Jeremy James Taylor, Dgn John McFarlane. Review: Stage 29/11/73, 21. Comment: The play was about “a magic cat that magicks the rather cheeky Hamble Dog into dancing until [his] soles wear through,” with “some wondrous quick costume changes” by the three actors (Stage).

73.493b The Statues in Room 13 (P for children) Reg Stewart. YOUNG VIC STUDIO 9/11/73 (m).* Cast: Stage 15/11/73, 1. Jenny Austen, Ian Charleson, Barry Evans, Jeremy James Taylor, Alison Mullin, Michael Scholes. Dir Ian Taylor; Dgn John McFarlane.

Comment: Variety said the play's subtitle, "Are You Dreaming or Are You Speaking" gave a somewhat better idea of what this "opaque piece" was about, but not much. New Statesman said the play's "seemingly arbitrary quality" was not helped by Michael Rudman's direction. Observer averred "the evening provides a more than respectable quota of haunting moments." Illustrated London News sarcastically said "Someone has explained—it is really quite easy—that Herr Handke has 'moved from a Wittgensteinian distrust of language to a Foucaultian distrust of what our society calls reason.' But of course." There were 55 performances at the May Fair. The first New York performance (Forum, Lincoln Center 13/1/72) ran for 20 performances.

Comment: "A believable historical play" about women enclosed in the hold of a convict ship sailing to Australia (Observer). For Times what made the play successful was the characterization of the women who were "too human to be reduced to any ideological scheme."

Comment: “Pleasurable and undemanding” with good acting from

Vanessa Redgrave, Jeremy Brett, and Peter Bayliss (Variety). Illustrated London News described the piece as a thin, repetitive comedy. Spectator thought Michael Blakemore had been baffled by the play and had not realized that the characters were simply two dimensional. Christian Science Monitor also faulted Blakemore's direction. The first New York production (Ethel Barrymore 24/1/33) ran for 135 performances.

Comment: London Theatre Group. Observer criticized Berkoff's "rigorously disciplined," "square-bashing" direction which subjugated the cast's talents, but not his own. New Statesman, however, said the cast responded well to the direction, and this was "a haunting evening, spoiled only by a certain mimetic excess." Times found the production "more delicate and relaxed" than others by Berkoff and "the element of human personality is not restricted to Mr Berkoff alone."

73.513 True Life (P) Chris Allen. SOHO POLY 22/11/73.* Review: Sunday Times 25/11/73. Comment: The "play revolves around a couple who have let television cameras into their home, unaware that the programme's producers have conspired to arrange a visit from the husband's ex-girlfriend. Mayhem ensues, and is finally brought to an end with director shouting 'cut!'" (Matthew Morrison, "A Critical History of the Soho Theatre: 1968–1975," University of Westminster dissertation, 2014, 167–68).

Comment: English Stage Company. New Statesman pointed to various qualities the play possessed while conceding it was also a mess. Times also called the piece a mess but added "what really vitalizes the writing are the lightning-flashes of theatrical imagination that periodically strike through the ordinary flow of events." Guardian described the piece as "a series of kaleidoscopic images that exemplify [Snoo's] belief that freedom is the only thing that matters and that moderation is the eighth deadly sin."

Comment: MPS 489. Variety did not hold out much hope for this "cornball show" about the relationship between a pregnant "hippie girl and a conventional man." An incredible play with a plot somewhat similar to A Taste of Honey (Guardian). Times agreed, dubbing the piece "as the old Whitehall's answer to A Taste of Honey." Illustrated London News said the play was all too predictable and a waste of the Apollo stage.

Actors' Company. An adaptation by Laing and Martin Esslin was broadcast on BBC Radio-3 27/3/73. This production treated Laing's ideas from a more comedic point of view. "Laing's perplexing and funny truths about human nature (the knots are a kind of private combination of Doublethink and Catch 22) are set in a breezy world of song-and-dance and music-hall patter" (Stage). The first New York production was at the Brooklyn Academy of Music 30/1/74.

Comment: MPS 499. National Theatre. Press night was 20/12/73. "A mixed-media dissertation on revolutionary politics," with trite characters, and with notable performances by Laurence Olivier and Ronald Pickup (Variety). Spectator was unimpressed by the play which lacked a "bold and challenging dramatic statement," but Dexter's direction did what could be done for it. New Statesman provided an lengthy analysis of the play's deficiencies. Times saw Griffiths as being interested only in political arguments, not in characterization or dramatic action. Illustrated London News averred that in Bernard Shaw's hands the political material would have been very lively. The production remained in repertory until 21/4/74.

Comment: Stage reported the panto was "written by June Lewis, who not only also directed and choreographed the show but gives a dashing performance in the title role."

73.567 Dick Whittington and His Cat (Panto) Mike Leigh. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 26/12/73. Cast: Findlater; Stage 20/12/73, 1. Dick Whittington Paul Copley; Tom Cat Tim Stern; Santa Claus Peter Godfrey; Policewoman Roger Sloman; Phillip Jackson, Lavinia Bertram, Julia Copleman. Dir Mike Leigh. Review: Stage 10/1/74, 9. Comment: English Stage Company. An updated, avant-garde, contemporary interpretation of the story with "Dick as an inoffensive if gormless stammerer from a Yorkshire mining village. The sole source of joy in his life is aeronautics—facts, dreams, and Airfix model kits" (Stage).

73.568 Goldilocks and the Three Bears (Panto) [Paul Elliott]. GAUMONT STATE 26/12/73. Cast: Stage 13/12/73, 34. Miss Goldilocks Aimi MacDonald; Silly Billy Lionel Blair; Heinkel Jackie Pallo; Gertie Gemmell George Chisholm; Tony Adams, Lionel Blair Dancers, Barbara Speake Babes, Hassani troupe of acrobats. Pres Paul Elliott, Duncan C. Weldon; Dir Lionel Blair. Review: Stage 10/1/74, 14. Comment: Stage reported that on the third night the theatre was "miserably empty," but the numerous stars still endeavored to give the audience a good performance.

73.569 The Papertown Paperchase (P) David Wood (bk, mus). GREENWICH 26/12/73. 1st perfd Swan, Worcester, 12/72. Cast: Stage 13/12/73, 34. Blotch David Ashley; Postman Charles Collingwood; Carbon Terence Conley; Salamander David Delve; Chief Firefly Malcolm Ranson; Christopher Beeching, Neil Fitzwilliam, Keith Galloway, Judy Gridley, Roy Jones, Anthony Millan, Su Yong. Dir, Ch Gillian Lynne; Dgn Peter Docherty; Assist dir Roy Jones. Review: Stage 17/1/74, 11. Comment: The piece was "about a salamander set to win glory by burning down a community made out of paper. But he falls in love with a delectable box of variegated tissues, and is persuaded to relinquish his mission"; Stage said the production did not belong in the Christmas season and was overly educational in tone.

73.570 Pinocchio (P) Angela Caldati. CAMBRIDGE 26/12/73. Pinocchio Joshua Le Touzel; Blue Fairy Fiona Fullerton; Cricket Ray Callaghan; Michael Blackham, Robert Bond, Albin Pahernik. Dir Richard Dale. Review: Stage 10/1/74, 14. Comment: Stage reported the ten-year-old boy playing Pinocchio had a "tendency to gabble inarticulately on occasion [which] lost him his rapport with the audience.”

73.573 Grabberwitch (P) Vicki Ireland. SOHO POLY 28/12/73.* Cast: Stage 13/12/73, 18. Chris Allen, Stephen Bont, Katie Heyland, Caroline Hunt, Peter Pacey. Dir Chris Parr; Dgn Miki van Zwanenberg. Comment: “The story follows narcoleptic knight Sir Singalot Sleepyawn and his trusted companions, Cook and Squire, as they battle the titular Grabberwitch ‘who grabs everything and everyone’. The play is a high-spirited, if slight, piece ... attended mainly by women and their young children” (Morrison, 169).

73.577 The Project (Fantasy, 1a) Denise Deegan. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 31/12/73 (Ln). Cast: Stage 20/12/73, 11. The King Ray Gatenby; Gabriel Peter Snell; Martin Chambers, Sally Harrison, Jane Langton, Mike Reid. Dir Kendall Johns; Dgn, Light Paul Scruton. Review: Stage 10/1/74, 9. Comment: Forestage. “It waffles along as a heavy-footed fantasy based on the idea that the Virgin Mary was impregnated, not by the Holy Ghost but by a special pre-natal transplantation arranged by the democratically-elected king of a socialistic community on a distinct planet”; the whole thing was incompetent and disastrous. (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety praised Frank Dunlop’s “inventive staging, John Wood’s Sherlock Holmes, and noted some contemporary interpolations such as the incidental music being a variation of the James Bond movie theme. “For all its crudities, [the play] is still a work of unabashed theatrical vigour, splendidly realised in Frank Dunlop’s production and Carl Tom’s sets” (Guardian). Observer seconded these opinions. Spectator was dismissive. Times called it a “sumptuous evening,” and identified the sources of the piece as being the stories, “A Scandal in Bohemia” and “The Final Problem.” The first New York production (Garrick 6/11/1899) ran for 256 performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. Observer lauded John Kani and Winston Ntshona as “the primal double act.” They gave “ruthlessly credible performances” in a play that reminds us “we are members one of another” (Guardian). “It makes its point about apartheid injustice not with embarrassing soapbox rhetoric but instead with dramatic power and humour derived from the human condition under great distress” (Variety). “A play that raises respect for the human race” (Times). Spectator offered a disenchanted view of all three Fugard plays given at the Court in January. The first New York production (Edison 24/11/74) ran for 52 performances.

Comment: MPS 497. The original title was Punch and Judy Stories (73.459). Guardian said the piece was moderately good, but objected to the "mechanical sex-comedy" genre as depressing. Variety thought it would amuse undemanding audiences but found the second act repetitive and mechanical. Times was pleased the production had retained "the splendid casting of the original." Illustrated London News also commended the cast for doing what they could with the piece.

74.5 Flowers—A Pantomime for Jean Genet (Panto) Lindsay Kemp (an interpretation of Jean Genet, Our Lady of the Flowers [Notre-Dame-des-Fleurs], 1942). Comment: Guardian found the piece very effective, but said that purpose and coherence were lacking. "An exercise in making explicit that which our imaginations can strip naked far more effectively. I felt a great deal of rapport with the man sitting beside me who chuckled into his glass of beer at regular intervals; it is so easy to make orgies simply very funny" (Stage). Also performed later at ICA (see Observer review). The first New York production (Biltmore 7/10/74) ran for 24 performances.

Comment: The two-hour long play was performed without an interval. Guardian described the play as “very moving,” but of “unflinching honesty,” and with very good performances from Peter McEnery and Lynn Farleigh. Observer faulted some of the language for being “grossly inflationary,” and noted the characters’ tendency to “soliloquise to excess.” “Relentlessly gynaeological,” “a documentary with its nerve-ends exposed,” and with analogues to Ireland (New Statesman). Times thought this was a play Rudkin was compelled to write, and noted its “physical discomforts” were overshadowed by “its pervading mental anguish.” Comment: The first New York production (Joseph Papp Public/Anspacher 25/1/77) ran for 145 performances.

Comment: Observer thought Jonathan Miller's “enthraling production” set the play free. “The low-keyed playing does heighten the ultimate tragedy. We are unaware of self-consciousness” (Illustrated London News). Like Observer, New Statesman found Robert Stephens's performance to be revelatory, while Irene Worth's Mrs. Alving was both “curious and fascinating.” Times concurred with both of those judgments.

Comment: Guardian noted the play criticized "the Glaswegian liberal set ... with a gleeful, knowing savagery," with good performances from Tom Conti and Patti Love. New Statesman welcomed both the play and the cast's performances wholeheartedly, adding that "for all the genteel Scots accents, it's a play London needs to hear." Times felt detached from the production because of its frenetic pace.

74.19a Certain Humiliations (P) John Antrobus. SOHO POLY 21/1/74 (Ln). 1st perfd Pool, Edinburgh, September? 1973. Cast: Stage 24/1/74, 21. Review: Stage 31/1/74, 15. Comment: Basement Theatre, Wakefield Tricycle Company, Theatre Machine. The company for the double bill comprised Ben Benison, Rick Morgan, Roddy Maude-Roxby, John Muirhead. Dir Kenneth Chubb; Dgn Rudy Stussi. The play was "about a landlady and her three non-paying lodgers who submit to mild humiliations in lieu of rent" (Stage).

Comment: Basement Theatre, Wakefield Tricycle Company, Theatre Machine. The play dealt with "a dedicated museum attendant whose world falls about his ears when the bones of his dinosaur-charge decay and collapse" (Stage).

Comment: English Stage Company. Variety thought this the least successful of the three Fugard plays because "it curiously fails to generate much dramatic tension." Times said the piece was "congested and in need of clearer articulation"; "superlative performances" by Ben Kingsley and Yvonne Bryceland. Christian Science Monitor judged it a complete failure and added that the totally nude performances led to "some ludicrous effects." While finding the play less effective, New Statesman said the nudity was justifiable in the scene where the police arrest the central characters. Less exuberant than the other Fugard plays, but still an "affirmative, humanist work" (Guardian). The first New York production (Stage 73 2/1/78) ran for 35 performances.

Comment: Alfred Emmet "used plenty of novel visual ideas in staging this modernised fable about sex change and the fast pace sustained interest through even the transparent bits of musical padding" (Stage).

74.22b The Cenci (P, 2a) Antonin Artaud (adpt of Shelley's play, and Stendhal, Chroniques italiennes, 1855; trans Simon Watson-Taylor of Les Cenci, 1935). QUESTORS 26/1/74. Cast: QTA. The piece was about the reversal of male and female attributes and roles. Guardian said it was a good idea but lacked development, and in retrospect the production was not particularly good. Times enjoyed a meat pie in the theatre’s bar, “but on stage there was a prevailing desolation” provided by a “leaden romp” with no discernable plot. “A weary musical, author-directed. Its plot has slid from mind. What I do remember is the general slovenliness of the performance” (Illustrated London News).

The production featured an iconic London Transport red double-decker bus. "Often plain silly and occasionally ... much worse" (Observer). An "exasperating amalgam of easy laughs and predictable protest" (New Statesman). Times reported the play had been rewritten since its premiere, but it remained "an irreclaimably sagging piece"; Nicky Henson was snappy as the bus driver. Christian Science Monitor viewed the piece favorably. During the run, Double Double by James Saunders was added to the bill (Reviews: Observer 10/2/74, 31; Stage 14/2/74, 15).

Comment: Guardian declared Jonathan Miller's direction was "masterly"; "this is Chekhov as it should be played." Commendable performances from Peter Eyre, Irene Worth and Robert Stephens (Observer). "It's Miller's achievement ... to conjure up a Chekhov who feels and thinks" (Spectator 9/2). "The finest British Chekhov we have seen since Olivier's Uncle Vanya" (Times).

Comment: MPS 537. Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety found the second act somewhat disconcerting when the play moved "into high symbolic gear." Tribune defended the piece as a "respectable failure" as Mercer attempted to write in a style different to his previous "Northern working-class naturalism." Christian Science Monitor discussed how a contemporary political crisis (the Miners' strike) affected the reception of the play. Spectator found the earlier part of the play "lucid," the second "portentous." Guardian (6/2) said Mercer had attempted to create a Heartbreak House of the 70s and in "attempting to escape the fetters of naturalism ... has landed himself in the shackles of rhetorical symbolism." Times saw the piece as "an updated Heartbreak House."

Comment: The play lasted three hours. "Has the characteristic Nichols combination of richly funny dialogue and barely suppressed pain" (Guardian). Variety praised the splendid acting of Albert Finney, Geraldine McEwan, and Pat Heywood; New Statesman added Denholm Elliott's performance to that list, as did Daily Mirror. "Perhaps rather less inventively funny than in previous plays" (Spectator). The play "unrolls in an unbroken sequence of truthful dramatic development," all safely delivered by Robert Chetwyn's production (Times). The first New York production (Stage 73 26/10/77) ran for 28 performances.

Comment: "A dense shaggy dog comedy about a small-town constabulary whose dull routine is made chaotic by intelligence agents and revolutionaries ... nicely played" (Variety). Spectator dismissed the piece. "Baffling, boring, dreadfully confusing" (Daily Mirror). New Statesman attempted to explain why the play was humorless. "A terrible mix-up and mock-up it all is; complicated; extremely difficult to follow. And, I regret to report, very dull, with laughs few and far between" (Stage). "Not as bad as some reviewers have made out, it is nonetheless pretty awful" (Observer).

Comment: Guardian thought the "black mass" element was missing, and the production was little more than a showcase for Glenda Jackson, Susannah York, and Vivien Merchant. "A mess of misinterpretation" (Tribune). Times said the production attempted, unsuccessfully, to combine naturalistic and ritualistic approaches to the play.

Comment: Variety and Spectator commended the stylish acting and Peter Dews's confident direction. However, New Statesman described the revival as "bland and insensitive," and it ignored Anouilh's description of the play as "one of his pièces grinçantes." Times thought Trevor Howard's performance lacked "size and energy;" Illustrated London News also faulted Howard's performance.

Comment: Traverse Theatre Club. Times reviewed a preview performance and noted the mistranslation of the title: Freiheit means freedom, which accorded with the play's plot. "Toxic comedy is neatly combined with social protest," and a focused production by Ronald Hayman (Guardian). "Elegantly acted" (Observer). New Statesman was unenthusiastic about the piece: "a bald narrative tempered by poor philosophy."

Comment: Guardian averred that Henry provided Rex Harrison with a role "worthy of his sinewy and haunting talent." Observer said the production was a triumph for Harrison although it was, unfortunately, obvious that his Henry had recovered his sanity too early in the play. "Mr Harrison's show," but with the wrong interpretative emphasis (Times). Variety reported that Harrison had toured North America in 1973 playing the role as a vehicle for himself (see, for example, at the Ethel Barrymore, New York, 28/3/73).

"No more than anecdotal: an O'Henry short-story with a touch of macabre fantasy" (Guardian). Generally badly acted, with the exception of Bob Hoskins (Observer). New Statesman agreed about the acting and thought the direction could have been more vigorous. Tribune described the play as "a neat little parable of the 'artist' in a competitive consumer society," but not Shepard's best work. Times found the play more comprehensible, and "more concerned with old-fashioned plot development" than Shepard's earlier plays, but the dialogue was lifeless. The first American performance was at the Yale Repertory Theater 7/3/74; there was a New York production at the Manhattan Theatre Club 4/12/75.

Comment: Guardian (26/2) said the problem of equating Richard III and Richard Nixon, the point of this political satire, was that "it makes Nixon far too engaging." Guardian (26/2) and Observer both criticized the redundant use of hand-held microphones in the tiny Bush theatre. "Lively enough, but far too predictable" (New Statesman). Times generally approved the production but with some reservations. The New York production (West Bank Café 24/9/83) ran for 19 performances.

Comment: Guardian noted the production consisted of "logically plotted, old fashioned revue sketches," previously seen on television, and received "with an ecstatic roar of welcome." Observer said the show was very funny but did not translate well to the stage. New Statesman echoed both opinions. Times complained about the sound arrangements, but otherwise welcomed the production, while noting the dominance of John Cleese. Daily Mirror reported "many chaps in the audience wore headgear of handkerchiefs knotted at the ends and lolled in their seats with trousers rolled up to the knee."

Forty-five minutes, the length of this “tight, tart, and alert” play, is not sufficient to fully explore this subject matter (Guardian). Stage commended Weldon’s insight about marriage.

Comment: Variety found the parody of the “hard-bitten Hollywood private eye era” appealing, with a “solid” performance by Edward Fox. Curly “a bit of a panto character, full of delicious wickedness. I felt like hissing him at times. Not one in the play can be taken seriously. I’m not too sure whether the author is trying to spell out an awful warning about the state of Britain or merely being flippant. It’s a bizarre role for Edward Fox” (Daily Mirror). Christian Science Monitor admired the “deep social concern” Hare introduced into his detective story. Spectator pointed out with some dismay the disparate elements in the play and Hare’s cynical view of people. Guardian recognized the play’s weaknesses but applauded Hare’s “moral comment.” Hare “seems to have begun from an idea of social types and pressures and then placed them in a realist setting; hence the atmosphere of artifice which dogs the play” (Times). Apparently there were previews beginning 26/2/74. Variety noted the box-office draw of John Gielgud, but felt that the “poetry and magic” of the text was overwhelmed by the opulence and gimmickry of the production. Guardian agreed, describing Peter Hall’s production as “vulgarly spectacular.” Tribune was equally dismissive of this “tasteless” and “misconceived” production. “Fabulous,” and “a magnificent evening: not, however, a flawless one” (Observer). Daily Mirror praised the comic performances of Arthur Lowe and Julian Orchard. Irish Times had difficulty hearing the actors and reported that on the second night Stephen Williams was a last minute replacement as Ariel because Michael Feast did not show up. New Statesman found numerous and sundry aspects of the production questionable. Times said the production failed to answer the question of “whether The Tempest represents a challenge to the masque, or an effort to digest it.” The production remained in repertory until 29/6/74.

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian complained the play had too many competing themes and ideas to be effective. Variety agreed completely: "little more than a well-observed slice of life among the English working class." "A series of social problems in search of a dramatic shape" (New Statesman). For Times the play had "the flinty Northern virtues and the warped Northern viewpoint" which Alfred Lynch attempted to humanize.

13/3/74, 19. Comment: Guardian thought the production was "undercast," but commended Al Mancini. "It needed a much subtler performance than it received from Al Mancini and Doreen Mantle" (Illustrated London News). "No more than a routine domestic study of its time" (Spectator). Times welcomed the revival, Michael Rudman's production, and the unconventional casting. The first New York production (Playhouse 5/2/24) ran for 571 performances.

74.86 The Wood Demon (C, 4a) Anton Chekhov (trans Ronald Hingley of Leshy, 1889). WIMBLEDON 12/3/74. "Formidably well done" (Observer). New Statesman commended the strong cast. Times echoed those views.

Comment: MPS 511. Observer thought the only reason to see this conventional comedy was Maggie Smith's performance. Laurence "takes a comfy, affectionate view of human foibles, treating even gonorrhoea and syphilis as if they were scampish tomboys" (New Statesman). A "numbingly contrived cartoon show," with Smith as a draw (Variety). The piece had "a theme [venereal disease] but no story. It is an evening of bits and pieces," with "the most extravagantly mannered performance Maggie Smith has ever given" (Times).

74.88 Hamlet (T, 2a) William Shakespeare. Comment: A “very good Hamlet from Peter Eyre,” but Jonathan Miller’s production is too fast (Guardian); Illustrated London News agreed. Observer said the cast was “floundering in visible distress.” New Statesman described Miller’s direction as careful and faithful, but noted the lack of resources available. Directed “as a family romance. The political superstructure has almost vanished”; however, one result was an “arbitrary and uninteresting” Hamlet from Eyre (Times).

74.89 A Streetcar Named Desire (P [3a]) Tennessee Williams. PICCADILLY 14/3/74.  243 perf. Comment: Variety (27/3) praised “Claire Bloom’s brilliant portrayal of Blanche Dubois,” adding Joss Ackland was “superb” as Mitch; Guardian was in agreement. Christian Science Monitor commended the production for being both a star vehicle and a “social study.” New Statesman said it “capitulated” unreservedly to Claire Bloom’s performance. Times noted Bloom’s “totally convincing image of Blanche” omitted her comic element, praised Ackland, and found Martin Shaw’s “fluent, ruthless” Stanley “effective.”

Comment: Actors Company. A disappointing production, with Robert Eddison only really effective in the closing act (New Statesman). Illustrated London News praised Eddison: "Entirely without tricks, relying upon Shakespeare's word and the actor's imaginative response—how curiously rare this can be in our theatre—it was a closely-textured performance, intensely moving." Times noted the production was intent on "telling Shakespeare's tale" rather than superimposing another "tale" on Shakespeare; the results were mixed.

Comment: Guardian described this two-hander as "Home Counties Strindberg" and dealt with a married couple's relationship and the husband's adultery with his wife's twin sister. New Statesman criticized the characterization and found the play tedious. Times said the writing was competent, but the play was "far too long for its meagre content."

The fasted-paced production was set in the Edwardian era, which Times thought did not work because it evoked "the pace and environment of a belle époque farce" and created "irrelevant associations." The production was good and made the play "very nearly comprehensible" (Observer).

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 4/4/74. The production was an eightieth birthday tribute for Priestley. New Statesman questioned this choice of play for the tribute. Observer called Laurence Olivier's production "occasionally stiff," but added Leslie Sands, Geoffrey Palmer, and Joan Plowright brought the text to life. Variety deemed the piece too dated for modern audiences. Times said the production gave the play "loving attention," but was not "an act of rediscovery." The production remained in repertory until 1/8/74.

Comment: Guardian thought the play lacked "a strong personal signature," but said it was "faultlessly cast." Variety said the play was unpretentious, satisfying, well played, and "a reasonable prospect" for the West End. Tribune detected the influence of Chekhov and O'Neill; however, the piece lacked character, atmosphere, and sub-text, and so was "an empty shell." The play reminded Illustrated London News "powerfully of the kind of man who is always telling you some unremarkable family story about a distant acquaintance.” “The best mainstream play to come out of America since the debut of Arthur Miller” (Times). “Beautifully acted by Constance Cummings, Sarah Marshall and Toby Robins” (Daily Mirror). The first New York production was at Stage 73 20/10/76.

Comment: The play did not explore its premise, of a man mistakenly thinking he is going to die soon, but was all right as a vehicle for Robert Morley who "is always a pleasure to watch" (Guardian). "Not particularly original, but no one is better than Mr. Morley at constructing mountainous performances from mole hill plots. He dashes about the stage in weird costumes and rarely stops talking. It is a frantic performance, at times very funny" (Daily Mirror 26/4). Times described in detail Morley's physical appearance and his perpetual stage character which remained unchanged yet again in this piece. "Derivative and overlong ... but a good audience show" (Variety). "A must for Morley fans" (Gay News).

Comment: English Stage Company. Produced without decor. Stage reported there were three different plays combined here: "One is the cliché story about the youngster who gets a girl into trouble, another is about the pains of growing old, and the third is the real-life factory setting." Times described the play as sounding like a "novelette in verse."

Comment: MPS 559. National Theatre. Press night was 2/5/74. "The action covers one long Sunday of family warfare," with excellent performances from Lynn Dearth, Gawn Grainger, and Gemma Jones (Variety). Gay News remarked how all the characters with one exception were unsympathetic yet retained the audience's attention. New Statesman said this family was uncharacteristic and therefore unconvincing. "A flabby, overweight three-hour domestic drama," which, ironically, was directed by Harold Pinter, "supreme master of verbal economy" (Guardian). Times ultimately did not care for the characters because "honesty in detail has yielded an improbable and incoherent pattern over the long range"; however, notable performances together with "some of the best child acting I have seen." The production remained in repertory until 15/8/74.

Comment: Guardian (2/5) praised the “machine-tooled precision and physical verve” associated with American musicals and Michael Crawford’s triumphant performance as Billy. Observer also noted the American quality of the production, but was less enthusiastic about Crawford’s abilities. Spectator said Crawford’s talents kept the show alive when other elements flagged. “A British musical that isn’t totally contemptible” (New Statesman). “A show which is solid on plot integrity, and weak on spectacle ... All too often there is not enough happening to fill the vast stage. Like Billy himself, the show is always just about to take off, but never quite able to make it” (Daily Mirror). Times described the show as very opulent and “an honest and intelligent show that plays fair with the book,” with music and lyrics that heightened the action.

Comment: MPS 514. Guardian commended the production’s ensemble performances that, ironically, contrasted with the play’s notion that teamwork was a dying American virtue. Observer singled out Broderick Crawford’s performance. “An intelligent, vigorous piece” (New Statesman). “The dialogue is caustic enough to blister the theatre’s paintwork ... Witty, rude, rough—it has some memorable wise cracks” (Daily Mirror). As an American genre “booze drama has settled down into one of the most rigid formulas ever to stunt theatrical imagination” (Times). The New York production of this Pulitzer Prize winning piece ran for 144 performances. It ran for another 700 performances on transferring to the Booth (14/9/72).

"Ayckbourn, one of the most genuinely accomplished dramatists now writing, explains to us what a family comedy can be ... Ayckbourn, showing a single situation from three varying angles, is a miracle-man with a civilized turn of humour and not a grain of cheapness for its own foolish sake" (Illustrated London News). Comment: Joint Stock. Guardian found the mix of genres and ideas in the piece too slippery to grasp. Observer said the piece was engaging but suffered from "making insecure moral judgments." Parts of the play lacked dramatic inevitability and the characters were not based in life (Times).

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 28/5/74. Spectator found the play ponderous and dated, the acting uneven with the best performances coming from Peter Firth, Michael Kitchen, and Beryl Reid. For New Statesman the production lacked electricity but thought the play worthy of production. Bill Bryden's "production underates the volatility of the writing" (Observer). Times observed Wedekind's first two acts were performed together to allow for the "change of style into the caricatured adult scenes" after the interval. Illustrated London News said the play was dated and unworthy of revival. The production remained in repertory until 24/10/74.

Comment: MPS 461. Performed under the collective title The Norman Conquests. The "firm structure" of this play "checked my former feelings that the characters were mere attitudes" (Times). Of the trilogy as a whole, Spectator praised "the perfection of the ensemble playing under Eric Thompson's direction," and relished "the joy of savouring Ayckbourn's comic craftsmanship." See also Lloyd Evans, 205–06.

74.223 Case for a Rebel (P, 4a) Emmanuel Robles (trans James Kilker and Marie Kilker of Plaidoyer pour un rebelle, 1965). UNITY 7/6/74. 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 13/6/74, 19. Charles Turner, John Byrne, Kathy Arnold, Andre Thornton-Grimes. Dir Helena Stevens; Sc dgn Peter North. Review: Stage 20/6/74, 20. Comment: The play involved a young terrorist who changes his mind about carrying out a bombing.

74.224 The Wall Is Mama (P) Rick Cluchey. NEW END 7/6/74. 1st London perf. Plot: Vinson. Review: Stage 13/6/74, 22. Comment: San Quentin Drama Workshop. Also performed at ICA in July 1974.

74.225 Release (P, 3a) Raymond Bantock. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/6/74. Cast: Stage 6/6/74, 17. Christine Way, Annabel Langston, Mark Colleano, Roger Davis, Richard Huggett, Margot Field. Dir Joan Campbell. Review: Stage 20/6/74, 15. Comment: Stage described four different plots in the piece: "None of it is very credible."

74.226 Decent Things (C) Richard Crane. THREE HORSESHOES 10/6/74 (Ln). 1st perfd Pool, Edinburgh, 4/72. Comment: During the run of this piece a performance of John Grillo's Number Three performed by Garage Theatre was substituted due to the unavailability of a cast member [Nurse Don Weinstein; Number Three Peter Ashley. Dir Don Weinstein] (see Stage 20/6/74, 17).

74.227 Travesties (C, 2a) Tom Stoppard. Reviews: Birmingham Post 11/6/74, 2; Daily Mirror 11/6/74, 18; Gay News 4/7/74, 14; Guardian 11/6/74, 12; Illustrated London News 1/8/74, 67; New Statesman 14/6/74, 859; Observer 16/6/74, 31, 23/6/74, 31; Spectator 22/6/74, 776; Stage 20/6/74, 15; Times 11/6/74, 7; Tribune 5/7/74, 7; Variety 19/6/74, 60. Comment: MPS 536. Royal Shakespeare Company. "Seems a foregone bet for a transfer to Broadway" (Variety). "Juggles the English language with a dexterity that is quite breath-taking ... easily the wittiest, cleverest and most absurdly funny play currently on the London stage" (Daily Mirror). "A play whose undeniable stylistic and verbal brilliance deceptively obscure a lack of significant content" (Tribune). "First and foremost a delightful entertainment of verbal wit" that says nothing new about basic ideas (Gay News). Spectator acknowledged the play was flawed, but relished virtually all of it, and commended highly John Wood's performance. "A dazzling pyrotechnical feat" (Guardian). Times particularly admired Stoppard's "skill in moving in and out of Wilde's dialogue, and rewriting it for his own purposes." The first New York production (Ethel Barrymore 30/10/75) ran for 156 performances.

74.228 Go West Young Woman (P) Pam Gems. ROUND HOUSE 11/6/74.* Cast: Stage 30/5/74, 19; WWT/16. Reviews: Guardian 7/6/74, 11; Stage 20/6/74, 15; Times 13/6/74, 15. Comment: Women's Company. The play was about a group of pioneer families trekking to the American West. Times said it lacked authenticity and it was not clear how the piece really advanced the feminist cause.

74.229 A Worthy Guest (P) Paul Bailey. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 11/6/74. 1st perfd University Theatre, Newcastle, 24/10/73. Reviews: Guardian 12/6/74, 12; New Statesman 21/6/74, 895–96; Stage 20/6/74, 20; Times 12/6/74, 11. Comment: MPS 483. English Stage Company. The play concerned a criminally insane man who has suffered numerous adverse circumstances but who possesses a feeling for words. Times was confused somewhat by the "fractured succession of brief scenes shuffled out of chronological order." Stage described the scenes as "intricately constructed flashback scenes."

74.230 A Day in the Death of Joe Egg (D, 2a) Peter Nichols. TOWER, CANONBURY, 14/6/74. Cast: TTC. Plot: Bordman/4, 423, Demastes/2, Fletcher, Griffiths, Hirschak, Hochman, Law, Loney, Patterson, Salem, Vinson, Weintraub.

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 9/7/74. Guardian (10/7) declared Jonathan Miller's "triumphant" production allowed this "comic masterpiece" to be seen in its own right. Observer was less enthusiastic about the production which tended "to sprawl," the acting was uneven, but the translation was very good. Variety said "Miller has staged the show with a fine flair for controlled lunacy" and predicted it would be a popular success. Times declared the production was "unsatisfying ... the comedy does not dance," but was partially redeemed by four fine actors—Gawn Grainger, Nicola Paget, Gemma Jones, and Derek Godfrey. The production remained in repertory 7/11/74.

Cast: Stage 20/6/74, 17. Maud Natasha Parry; Edward Judd, Karl Howman. Dir John Russell Brown; Sc dgn Jamie Leonard. Reviews: Guardian 4/7/74, 10; Observer 7/7/74, 27; Stage 11/7/74, 23. Comment: The play, "about a woman writing a story whose events become her life," reflected a "rather academic approach to playwriting" (Observer). "While the piece has an undeniable fluency it seems to be composed out of stock ingredients, suggesting nothing much has happened in the theatre since Patrick Hamilton's Gaslight" (Guardian).

74.262 Old Man Aesop: He Knew the Game (P) Edwin N. Turner. SOHO POLY 9/7/74 (Ln). 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 4/7/74, 20. Saul Alistair Bain; Norman Ben Bazell; David Adam, Elroy Josephs, Joan Ann Maynard. Dir Ken Chubb; Dgn Debbie Thompson; Mus Major Wiley. Review: Stage 18/7/74, 17. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company. The piece had won a playwriting award in Alberta in 1969. The play was a contemporary version of the raven who wanted to be a dove, here a white man who wishes to be black.

It is not; but it is an honest re-creation of a much-publicized literary coterie" (Illustrated London News). Variety was tepid about the play but praised Daniel Massey's performance as "a gem." Spectator said the play fell between trying to recreate Bloomsbury at large and focusing on Strachey. Guardian (11/7) opined "literary folk ... don't make good plays." "An over-long string of anecdotes ... [that] succeeded in making all the Bloomsbury set ... seem silly and ridiculous" (Tribune). Times (11/7) thought the play was mistitled because it was really concerned with the Strachey, Carrington and Partridge affair.

Comment: MPS 529. Guardian found the second half of the show better than the first, but overall the piece lacked "any feeling for English life"; good performances from Judi Dench, and John Mills; Observer agreed. Spectator was unenthusiastic, and noted the performers were not "distinguished for their singing." "A dated and schmaltzy show business yarn" with "functional" tunes (Variety). "A coherent showbiz fairy tale" with a shifting musical score (Times). Daily Mirror declared the show was corny and lacked only a fairy godmother to turn it into a pantomime. Illustrated London News reported "At the end of the premiere, J. B. Priestley made a warm and cogent speech that he ought to repeat every night through what should be an extended run."

Comment: English Stage Company. Observer described the play as "searing, sombre," "an intelligent, tight, meticulously structured play." New Statesman agreed, adding that Whitehead "is to sex what Edward Bond is to violence and cruelty." Tribune averred the play reflected Whitehead's misogyny. Times observed the play continued the same theme as Whitehead's The Foursome and dealt with "puritan sexuality through early middle-age."

Comment: English Stage Company. "Done with enormous zest and gaiety" and "admirably acted especially by Rudolph Walker and Stefan Kalipha" (Spectator). "An amusing if undernourished satire on [Matura's] homeland" (Variety). Observer admired the play's symmetrical construction and the performances. "The first half of the play feels like truth, the second part dwindles into fiction" (Times). Tribune confessed it was the only audience member who did not enjoy the production.

Comment: "The evolution of a lower-class English youth from toddler to post-graduate, told in a series of satiric sketches ... a mordant commentary on the class-reinforcing system of British primary education" (Variety). Tribune said the piece's predictability took the edge off its satire. New Statesman discussed the differences between first and second-night performances, the latter yielding very different results in audience responses and in the views of critics (critics for weekly publications usually attended the second night, while the dailies attended the first). Times praised both the writing and the acting.

Comment: Schiele (214) in a footnote indicates that Charles Marowitz was the author. Guardian declared this "piece of successfully costumed Victoriana" was completely misplaced at the Open Space; Julian Glover was good as Holmes. "A graceless pastiche" (Observer). "All very good-humoured and harmless," but the dialogue needed improvement (New Statesman). Times noted the point of the play was to portray Holmes as "a nasty piece of work."

Comment Guardian panned this piece about "skulduggery and crime" in the City. "Pleasant but flimsy" (Variety). New Statesman appeared to be slightly offended by the play's lack of fiscal morality. Observer noted the flimsiness of the sets, had difficulty following the plot, but conceded it had "a soap-opera fascination." Times welcomed the liberation of the Ambassadors from The Mousetrap (it had transferred to the St. Martin's on 25/3/74) but not the arrival of this deadly formulaic business thriller.

Comment: Guardian approved the staging but said the acting lacked commitment. Observer described the production as oscillating between “the raucous and the artlessly conversational.” The performances were “loud and broad” (New Statesman). Illustrated London News complained that, with “too much racing and chasing round the stage and, unavoidably, the intermittent shriek of the jets overhead, the night had a fever-chart rise and fall.” Times welcomed the rarely performed piece but the result turned out to be “a rum evening.”

Comment: MPS 460. Performed under the collective title The Norman Conquests. “Ayckbourn follows the rule of maximum craft and minimum pre-tension ... has salvaged the good name of entertainment theatre” (Times). Commenting on all three plays, Stage observed Ayckbourn “sees his people firm and clear, from the inside, but shows them in a world of habit, convention, daily talk, workaday triviality, and more or less regular contact, which, even in the midst of rows and family ‘dramas,’ keeps the plays on their airy level.”

Comment: MPS 494. English Stage Company. Variety said the play was "episodic and overly sketchy, with a tiresome first act that challenges audience patience," while "John Gielgud plays Shakespeare with

... convincing anguish." Tribune thought there was a disconnect between the play's intention to present Shakespeare as "the middle-class man-next-door" and Gielgud's performance of him as a tragic hero. Christian Science Monitor defended Gielgud: "I'm afraid the poverty of effect lies not in the actor's known powers but in the merely sour spirit of the play." Guardian also commended Gielgud, and said the play was "far from being a simplistic condemnation of the property-owning Shakespeare, it is a deeply moving study of the artist's impotence." Times had also seen the play at Exeter where "Shakespeare was given a rat-like performance by Bob Peck who left you in no doubt that property had always been his main goal. With Gielgud ... the figure regains heroic proportions." Illustrated London News disliked the play thoroughly. The first New York production was at the Abbey 12/10/76.

The play was about Christopher Marlowe: “It is appallingly pish-tushery, with not a single character consistently three-dimensional, and with endless liberties taken with history, both in the writing and in the production by Ray Roberts” (Stage).

Comment: MPS 527. Old Tote Theatre Company (Sydney). This "story of a successful young novelist and the conflicts in his life" could have been more original and interesting (Variety). "Over-heated domestic drama, too often loose-mouthed, but acted competently" (Illustrated London News). Guardian described it as "bright, sharp, funny," but lacking an extra resonance. Observer found it all too familiar. "A depressingly predictable kind of autobiographical comedy" and a disappointment after Williamson's earlier The Removalists (Tribune).

90. Comment: The play, about a stay-at-home husband, needed more development and a "modern Shaw: what it gets is sub-Neil Simon" (Guardian; for Tony Lesser's criticism of the Guardian review, see Guardian 10/9/74, 14). Variety called the play very funny and "a good audience show" with bright prospects. "As close as a play can get to being about nothing at all" but amusing (Spectator). "A jolly romp" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. "A parsimonious production," with contemporary interpolations by John Barton and a very good Faustus from Ian McKellen (New Statesman). Spectator was unimpressed by McKellen. Variety said Barton's adaptation worked but McKellen's performance didn't. Times called the adaptation "a partial success" although it came closer than other productions to making the play "a complete body." Illustrated London News found Barton's adaptation acceptable.

Directed by Ron Daniels, lighting by Mark Jonathan. Times commended the cast of fifty on its commitment but noted the irony that the play was “a powerful statement on the negative aspects of group solidarity.” Guardian noted, because the production was in the round, the young performers did not have to worry about projecting.

Comment: Prospect Theatre Company. “An heroic production” with an emphasis on action (Observer). Times observed “the evident purpose” this production of the two parts of Henry IV (see also 74.341) “is to give the plain text on a bare stage” and so make them suitable for a nine-week tour; however, that decision actually muffled the story. “Here intentions are excellent; a bare stage, the rigour of the game, little ‘business’, the text and nothing but the text, though I did notice some minor cuts” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Cahn's London stage debut. Observer dubbed Cahn "irresistible." "Cahn has acquired the skill of timing, bringing in famous names from the film world, and he cleverly describes and sometimes even mimes their characteristics so that they come alive like unseen actors in a comedy" (Stage).

Comment: National Youth Theatre. "A muddled essay on the Englishman abroad and its structure reflects the author's undecided attitude to that theme" (Times). Guardian observed, unlike most Terson pieces for the Youth Theatre, this one had a small cast; however, it still had Terson's attacks on aspects of modern society. New Statesman disapproved of both staging a small-cast piece (a reversal of previous practices) and the play itself. Stage viewed the production favorably.

Comment: "It involves diamonds, a burglar alarm and two peripatetic young women hidden in either a broom cupboard or a bathroom. Thoroughly forgettable" (Illustrated London News). Guardian said, because of commercial considerations, this was very much a trimmed down version of a typical West End farce. Variety said the piece was "more risqué, less funny" than previous Brian Fix farces. Times declared Brian Rix "does not understand farce."

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian thought this surrealist play either worked on a playgoer's "subconscious or it doesn't." New Statesman said Shepard's meaning was not helped by the play's "arbitrary, impressionistic style." "A surrealist collage which radiates symbolically from a central image" (Tribune). Out of several possible meanings Times settled on "the idea of a pastoral sanctuary" that is really horrible. The first New York production (American Place 4/4/75) ran for 34 performances.

Richard Pasco and Ian Richardson alternated the roles of Richard and Bolingbroke. Guardian (19/9) praised Richard Pasco (as Richard) for his “sense of the architecture of the verse.” Guardian (20/9) said the essence of Ian Richardson’s Richard was “bland control,” Pasco’s Bolingbroke was “completely convincing; however, the production was “insistently stylised,” “the pace over slow.” However, Times was dazzled by Richardson’s Richard “with new-found chest notes he makes magnificent vocal music as he proclaims his power away.”

Comment: Guardian faulted the production (and the acting to a degree) but acknowledged the difficulties inherent in the play itself. Times called the piece “grossly over-complicated, and reported Dorothy Reynolds substituted for Elisabeth Bergner at less than a week’s notice. The first New York production (Broadhurst 31/10/67) ran for 142 performances.

Reviews: Observer 6/10/74, 28; Stage 3/10/74, 28. Comment: Temporary Theatre. The play was about two public schoolboys selling hard drugs and some working-class teenagers who try to muscle in on their operation. Stage said some of the drug scenes proved too realistic for some audience members.

74.365 The Gentle Hook (Thriller, 2a) Francis Durbridge. WIMBLEDON 23/9/74.* Comment: The pre-West End production prior to opening at the Piccadilly in December (74.510).

Review: Stage 3/10/74, 28. Comment: For an “old woman living in her Gorbals tenement ... King Kong ... represents the world which oppresses the poor, but which someday will be defeated, not by the clever or the political, but by the natural power of the beast”; a parallel occurs when her son brings home an educated, upper-middle class girl (Stage).

The company for the double bill comprised Anita Dobson, Murray Salem, Cornelius Garrett, Avril Marsh, Patrick Collingham. Dir Steven Dartnell; Dgn Geoff Rose. The play was “an utter attack on the myth” of Eva Peron, who here appears as a man (Guardian). New Statesman criticized the piece for stridently debunking Peron without also providing reasons, explanations, or justifications.

74.369b The Four Twins (P) Copi (trans Anni Lee Taylor of Les quatre jumelles, 1973). NEW END 25/9/74. 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 19/9/74, 1. Reviews: Observer 29/9/74, 42; Stage 10/10/74, 15; Times 26/9/74, 11. Comment: Close Company. The piece numbered Times “into indifference,” but it was “a valuable, if tedious, key to Eva Peron.” The piece lacked the “spectacular” element present in a Parisian production (Observer).

74.370 John Gould at the May Fair (One-man revue) Jonathan Lynn. MAY FAIR 25/9/74.* Cast: WWT/16. John Gould. Pres David Gordon Productions; Dir Jonathan Lynn; Dgn Susie Caulcutt. Review: Stage 3/10/74, 19. Comment: The revue was “a fluent combination of sketches, rich in irreverent wit, and music,” performed by John Gould who “is extremely versatile and a master of timing, a born comedian whose musical skill, adding an impressive dimension to his talents, makes him a clever and original all-round entertainer” (Stage).

Comment: “The original French play may be witty, profound, flippant and thought provoking. None of these qualities is evident in this depressing version” (Daily Mirror). “Sets out to mock conventional stage comedies. The labored humour doesn’t rise above the banalities it spoofs” (Variety). “Tricksy, trite and trivial, the play is a real turkey” (Guardian). Observer “was driven away” by the play from seeing the second act. Times reported the first-night audience was poor as was its response to the piece; a front stall cost £3.30.

Stage 10/10/74, 15; Times 2/10/74, 12; Tribune 25/10/74, 6–7. Comment: MPS 561. National Theatre. Press night was 1/10/74. “A dismally facile, predictable affair of easy long-range sneers at both working-class affluence and old-fashioned privilege” (Guardian). Spectator accidentally missed the first ten minutes of the production and urged everyone else to miss the play altogether “especially if they have admired Nichols’s work in the past.” New Statesman was somewhat positive but lamented the “visual poverty of the production.” “The direction by Jonathan Miller is sluggish, uneven and heavy handed” (Daily Mirror). Illustrated London News commended the performances of Graham Crowden, Irene Handl, Paul Rogers, Joan Hickson, and Lionel Murton. The production remained in repertory until 26/12/74.

Comment: Italian Beat 72 Company. An inept "75-minute guignol show that comes as a belated and bungled aftermath to the theatre of cruelty" (Times). "Highly stylised; dead white, green or mauve faces with red-rimmed staring eyes, formal top-knots in the men's hair, a sort of open cassock with knee stockings and lamé briefs as the uniform for all but two of the players ... as credible as the average horror film, and with as little impact" (Stage).

Comment: The play was about madness and sanity as exhibited by two escaped convicts and the family they hold hostage.

Observer said the play and the acting ranged across different styles, with only Colin Welland's performance having any conviction. Spectator commended Leonard Rossiter's performance. "It would be nowhere without the acting of Leonard Rossiter and John Turner" (Illustrated London News). Times detected a "cartoon effect" in the production which hindered "a connected line of revelation."

Review: Stage 24/10/74, 17. Comment: Actors Unlimited. "The first act was a line-for-line parody of Wilde's Importance; the second act was Derek Fowlds trying to be Tom Courtenay; and the third act ... [was] travesties of Shakespeare, Rattigan, and even David Frost" (Stage).

74.402 On a Clear Day You Can See Marlowe (P) John Spurling. COCKPIT 15/10/74.* Cast: Stage 10/10/74, 16. Review New Statesman 25/10/74, 594. Comment: Major Road Theatre Company. The play was about Christopher Marlowe the historical figure combined with a Marlowe who is "an actor in a contemporary theatre group: the old play-within-a-play device, used here with unusual aptness" (New Statesman).

Comment: Observer saw no reason to stage this "empty tale" at a major theatre; Geraldine McEwan gave a good performance. Variety provided economic reasons (small cast, single set) for the revival, but "otherwise, there's not much to be said for this inconsequential French comedy." "Honestly, sharply funny" (Times). "Still, as a joke it is pleasantly turned, trying though it might be without such players as Geraldine McEwan and James Villiers" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: MPS 531. Guardian had reservations about Simon’s approach to his plot but none about Elaine Stritch’s “stellar performance.” Variety opined Stritch’s performance and her apparent following would be enough to secure the play’s success. New Statesman found the play “notably charmless,” predictable, and the characters merely “symptoms of a fraught, hipped-up civilisation.” “Sentimental and slick and totally lacking in credibility” (Tribune); Times held a diametrically opposing view. The first New York production (Plymouth 13/12/70) ran for 193 performances.

Comment: Ewan Hooper’s “deliberately low key” production elicited admirable performances from Kenneth Haigh, Gwen Watford, and Cleo Sylvestre (Guardian). However, New Statesman thought the production and acting were “bland.” Spectator called the production “indifferent” and one (unnamed) performance “disastrous.” Times said some very poor acting heightened the incredulity” in the production.

Comment: MPS 533. Guardian criticized the play's "outrageous premises," confusing plot lines, and the telegraphed acting. Illustrated London News was also confused by the plot. "A moderately suspenseful and amusing melodrama about blackmail and murder ... okay with undemanding audiences" (Variety). Times described the piece as "formula entertainment" with a hint of a story "worthy of Dürrenmatt." "An improbable overacted affair from start to melodramatic finish" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Despite good direction and Wilson's flair with language, "a dreary subject makes for a dreary evening" (New Statesman). Observer described the direction as "portentous." The play was "as aimless and trivial as it is dreary" (Spectator). Times responded favorably to the production which "owes much of its power to its central performance" by Richard Pascoe. "I am sorry so rare an actor as Richard Pascoe should have been forced to battle with the futilities of The Beast" (Illustrated London

Comment: MPS 534. Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety praised the production generally and noted an emphasis on the cabaret style. Spectator praised every aspect of the production apart from the play itself which was essentially outdated foreign minor drama. New Statesman indicated Wedekind was overrated, although this was the best recent Wedekind revival in London with Ian McKellen portraying the Marquis with “manic energy.” Guardian viewed the play and production favorably. Times found McKellen’s conception of Keith was inconsistent with Wedekind’s conception.

Comment: MPS 592. National Theatre. Press night was 3/12/74. “A spectacularly pointless retelling of the Dreyfus Affair” that added nothing new and was a costly production” (Guardian; A. E. Ellis replied in Guardian 11/12/74, 14). New Statesman objected to a straightforward story being dressed up much after the fashion of Oh What a Lovely War! Spectator gave an account of how the production came about and ended up “tricked out with extravagant flapdoodle” that resulted in “measureless vulgarity.” Times indicated Michael Blakemore was wise in choosing to direct the piece as “a highly drilled melodramatic farce.” Illustrated London News said the production was “spirited” and the play held the audience’s attention. The production remained in repertory until 13/2/75.

Reviews: Stage 19/12/74, 29; Times 10/12/74, 9. Comment: Performed by Grimms, a collective of poets and musicians. Times found the evening an uneven collection of musical and spoken material. "The production is badly lacking in discipline, which means that often comedy points go for less than they are worth and that the overall effect is weak. The Clowns are a likeable group, and have talent. It would be good, however, to see them rise above varsity rag humour" (Stage).

Comment: Unicorn Theatre. New Statesman indicated it was an uneven piece and not as good as the previous year's Cinderella. A "garbled telling of a fine old tale," but with "some good jokes, and effective audience participation" (Times).

74.490 Trickster (P) David Gale. OVALHOUSE 12/12/74. 1st London perf? Cast: Stage 12/12/74, 17. Jo Bartholomew, Cindy Oswin, David Gale, Eiji Kusuhara. Dir Hilary Westlake; Mus John Mitchell, George Khan. Review: Stage 19/12/74, 45. Comment: Lumiere & Son.

Although based on the “North American Indian mythological character,” this trickster “specialises in removing human limbs and sexual or excretive organs; somewhere along the story line we have echoes of Frankenstein, Porgy and Bess; the whole was “dull, meaningless and wastefully tasteless” (Stage).

Comment: "A gushy, sentimental, romanticized pantomime which relies heavily on" Tommy Steele, "looks a winner" (Variety). "Follows the formula that has had the coach-parties lining up in Argyle Street immemorally" (Spectator). Times reported the show ran only 2½ hours (short for a pantomime), five minutes of Tommy Steele smiling was more than enough, and a microphone wire trailed behind Steele's denim trousers. Daily Mirror (19/12) reported the show cost £250,000 to mount and the audience wanted only to see Steele, whom the newspaper had interviewed.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. The production featured Jeffery Dench as Cornelius who acted as a “moderator” by supplying the audience with linking basic information and reading stage directions (Times). Guardian noted the appropriateness of the play for Christmas: “the perfect fairy-tale play far outdoing Cinderella in romance.” Observer admired Susan Fleetwood’s Imogen while the remainder of the cast exhibited “an unexciting competence.” Variety described the production as “an enjoyable fantasy-farce” without any hamming.

Reviews: Acton Gazette 28/11/74, 18; Irish Times 3/1/75, 10; Stage 2/1/75, 7. Comment: An updated version of the pantomime with vague pretensions at being "a socialist panto" (Irish Times). Stage noted "the emphasis, if not overtly political, is certainly on a different sort of moral. Once master of the magic lamp and ring, Aladdin proceeds to a power takeover à la Hitler and it takes the two genii serving notice of a strike to reclaim him."

"Almost totally inaccessible" (Guardian). Observer found this "60-minute account of the Creation and Fall ... incomprehensible." Times declared it was worth seeing "as a tribute to the expressive powers of the human body" and its "joyous vitality." Stage said the production was "extremely dull" and there was no point to the nudity; it could have been performed equally in some sort of costume.

74.515 Princess Ida; or, Castle Adamant (CO, 3a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 23/12/74. Plot: Ayre, Bordman/5, 74-75, Gänzl, Hochman, Sobel. Review: Stage 23/1/75, 11. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

Comment: Gay News said most of the sketches stood the test of time. "Most of the items have lasted well; all were worth reviving. The show is entertaining ... only Sheila Hancock is anywhere near the level required for the items to be revealed at their best" (Stage). Spectator provided a discourse on the revue genre and catalogued its complaints about this selection. Times enjoyed the revue because it was all completely new to the reviewer. Illustrated London News discoursed extensively on revues past and present.

Comment: MPS 553. English Stage Company. "The play, for all its talk, is intellectually vacuous and a dreadful trial" (Spectator). Guardian (3/1), while acknowledging the play's interesting ideas, called it "schematic," and too "rigidly and tightly structured." Variety said the play was "a familiar catalog of hangups and personality distortions." Times described the play as "flimsy and long-winded ...[with] nothing to say." Tribune listed several objections to the play.

75.7 Stella Superstar and Her Amazing Galactic Adventures (Show) Bruce Lacey and Jill Bruce. OLD TOWN HALL, FULHAM, 2/1/75; trfd to OVAL HOUSE 23/1/75. Cast: Stage 16/1/75, 12. Comment: A multi-media show that "charts the adventures of Stella as she battles with cosmic forces in a vain attempt to escape being engulfed by the 'Great Black Hole'" (Hammersmith and Shepherds Bush Gazette, 19/12/74, 6).

75.8 Innocent Bystanders (P) Gordon Graham. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 5/1/75.* Cast: Findlater; Stage 9/1/75, 17. Sam Kelly, Nicholas Loukes, Paul Nicholas, Deborah Norton, Max Phipps. Dir Denise Coffey. Reviews: Guardian 6/1/75, 8; Times 6/1/75, 11. Comment: English Stage Company. In the play two disgruntled airline baggage handlers find themselves confronted by three terrorists who have smuggled themselves by hiding in freight boxes. Times faulted the short piece for its attempt to introduce a psychological element into a basically farcical situation. "A spring-heeled and nippy little farce ... worked out with a headlong economy that many West End farce writers could learn from" (Guardian).

Comment: Oxford Theatre Group. Because of its success, the piece was brought back on 20/2/75 with a new cast of Scott Antony and Katy Manning. "An evasive voyage round the subject of Barrie's life and plays" (Guardian). A brief "impressionist portrait" of Barrie (Times).

75.11 Mr. Poe (P) Robert Nye (deviser). OPEN SPACE 7/1/75 (Ln). 1st perfd Cranston Street Hall, Canongate, Edinburgh, 19/8/74 as Edgar Allan's Late Night Horror. Comment: The play, "about the need for peaceful Protestant-Catholic coexistence," was "hollow as a drum" (Guardian). Observer thought the play "works pretty well" as a domestic drama, with a "towering, roaring performance by Andrew Keir." New Statesman described Keir's performance as "deliberately stagey and over-inflated." Tribune noted the Protestant characters were "colourful," the Catholic "washed out," a tactic designed to influence the audience's view; nevertheless a promising play.

Comment: Dolphin Theatre Company. New Statesman thought the revival was better than the original production and the play remained relevant. Times agreed. "The victim of an ultra-careful, falsely liturgical production by Kevin Billington that squeezes much of the natural life out of the play" (Guardian). Spectator persisted in its view "that Pinter is the most overrated dramatist of his time," and this was "the most famous bad play in the annals of English drama."

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Times noted that "catchpenny references to modern English affairs" introduced by Barton for the Stratford production had been eliminated, though some other "inventions" had been retained; however, this production was now better than the Stratford version. "Goes considerably farther in its departures from [the] original" (Spectator).

75.15 The Sorcerer (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 9/1/75. Plot: Ayre, Gänzl, Hochman, Shipley. Comment: D'Oyly

75.20 Fairy Tales of New York (P, 4a) J. P. Donleavy. INTERNATIONAL ARTS CENTRE 13/1/75. Cast: Stage 16/1/75, 12. Plot: Vinson.

75.21 Go to the Devil (C of the macabre) "Marcus Crippen." GLOBE (2) 13/1/75. Cast: Stage 9/1/75, 21. Baron von Zago Kenneth Herbert; Susannah Page, Toby Byrne, Cathy Arnold. Dir Andre Thornton-Grimes. Review: Stage 6/2/75, 11. Comment: Scorpio Productions. The author complained about the director's mutilation of his play, and hence its appearance under a pseudonym (see Stage 13/2/75, 23). Stage said the play, about a widow visiting an occultist in an effort to determine where her late husband's money is, was nonsensical and poorly performed.

75.22 Laura (P) Steven Dartnell (adpt of August Strindberg, The Father, 1887). Comment: Close Company (Glasgow). Observer said the adaptation "drastically telescoped the action," and "the cast are catastrophically young for their roles." "Abysmally acted" and lacking any sense (Spectator). Times failed to see what purpose lay behind this 75-minute cut down version.

75.23 Macbeth (T, 3a) William Shakespeare. YOUNG VIC 15/1/75. Cast: Stage 9/1/75, 1. Comment: Spectator said it was a reworking by Frank Dunlop with three actors (Alfred Lynch, James Bolam, Derek Fowlds) in masks playing Macbeth. "A black-magic version, apparently performed by members of Hecate's Coven," and unsuccessful (Guardian), a reaction echoed in Times. "Frank Dunlop, a director I admire, has run quite wild with a production that appears to be the ritual of a witches' coven, with three Macbeths, two Ladies, two Macduffs, and a variety of witches, led by Hecate herself" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: The play concerned a rich female brothel keeper "full of Women's Lib aspirations” who aims “to expose various allegedly important people who have been regular visitors ...When the accumulated evidence is revealed, presumably the women take over the government. Or words to that effect” (Illustrated London News). “It is alive with the authentic Osborne spirit, penetrating, alert, original” (Stage). New Statesman said the piece “comes over as a third-rate parody, not even intentional, of a yellow-press smoking concert.” Spectator wondered why Osborne would want this “limp frivolity” reviewed. Times observed the piece presented “a challenging comic situation, and calls for 16 actors who are simultaneously on stage for much of the time.”

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 28/1/75. Variety applauded the “impressive performances” of Ralph Richardson, Wendy Hiller, and Peggy Ashcroft in “a splendid production on all counts.” Spectator said the “very excellence” of the production exposed the weaknesses of the play itself. New Statesman thought Peter Hall’s stylized production was the correct way to approach the play; Times shared that view. The production remained in repertory until 17/6/75.

75.32 My Mother Says I Never Should (P). OVALHOUSE 21/1/75.* Reviews: Gay News 27/2/75, 6; Guardian 21/1/75, 19. Comment: Women’s Theatre Group. “A pro-

Comment: Observer said it was a lively play, although the second act was weak; good acting by Billy Harmon, a "tight lucid production by Chris Parr." New Statesman thought the writing was "lively, original," but the plot suffered from "second-hand paranoia." Interesting, but "no overall formal structure at all" (Tribune). Times found the early scenes fragmented and the final confrontation was prepared insufficiently.

75.44 The End of the World Show (Sci-fi mus) Derek Smith and Ian Barnett (mus). BUSH 2/2/75. 1st London perf? Review: Stage 20/2/75, 20. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company. "What happens when the water on earth runs out? When the air is no longer fit to breathe? When capitalism and socialism are locked in deadly conflict? When our superheroes are sent far into space to save the world and discover Utopia?" The piece provides the answers (Hammersmith and Shepherds Bush Gazette 30/1/75, 8).

Comment: Observer noted Wall's many talents. Variety enjoyed many aspects of Wall's performance but there was a tendency to self-indulgence. Spectator thought Wall was best years ago in the music halls doing a twenty minute stint but here faced the challenge of a two-hour solo performance, a point elaborated by Illustrated London News.

"This wholly fascinating piece of naturalism obviously needs a smaller theatre even than this ... The play, evolved from an improvisation, simply reports passages from a late afternoon and evening's conversation in a Birmingham suburban house" (Birmingham Post). Times, which had seen the Stratford performance as well, liked the piece less because it was merely "an extremely long series of trivial events."

75.48 The Hollow Crown (Ent) John Barton. RICHMOND 3/2/75. Cast: RSCA; Theatricalia. Roy Dotrice, Ann Firbank, Clifford Rose, Terrence Hardiman, Bill Homewood. Dir John Barton. Plot: Bordman/4, 386,

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian (6/2) said Peter Gill's production made sense for the romantic characters but not for the comic ones. New Statesman said the sketch of Narcissus on the set was the controlling image for Gill's production, aspects of which sometimes suffered from "overkill." Illustrated London News opined the Narcissus image was unhelpful. Times also noted the controlling image of Narcissus, and said the major performance of the production was Nicol Williamson's Malvolio.

Comment: MPS 415. 7:84 Company. "Brimms over with passion, vitality, humour and music," also very long (3¼ hours), and eventually lapses into "perfunctory melodrama" (Guardian). For New Statesman the piece and the performances lived, although it did need trimming. Times welcomed the opportunity to "attend to a show whose content really matters."

75.62 Mrs. Grabowski's Academy (P) John Antrobus. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 11/2/75.* Cast: Findlater; WWT/16. Mrs. Grabowski voice of Patience Collier; Richard Beckinsale, Ian Charleson, Denis Lawson, Simon Callow, Cheryl Hall, Beth Morris, Philip Stone. Dir Jonathan Hales; Dgn Sue Plummer. Reviews: Stage 20/2/75, 20; Times 12/2/75, 21; Tribune 28/2/75, 7. Comment: English Stage Company. Young People's Theatre Scheme. The "Academy" offered various lurid and criminal activities that Tribune dubbed "horrid," which also applied to the play itself. Times described the piece as a “garbled fable” about an anarchic future with decent acting from Richard Beckinsale, Ian Charleson, and Simon Callow.

75.63 An Italian Straw Hat (F, 3a) Theodore Hoffman (adpt of Eugène Labiche and Marc Michel, Un chapeau de paille d’Italie, 1851). THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 12/2/75. A somewhat ramshackle production (Observer). “Maxwell Shaw’s dreadful production” (Times). “A light, swift production by Maxwell Shaw that kept the nonsense flowing. The piece has always been irresistible” (Illustrated London News).

75.64 The Only Way Out (P, 1a) George Thatcher. NEW END 12/2/75. Redmond Michael Elphick, Dir David Halliwell. Comment: Guardian praised Osborne’s adaptation but not Clive Donner’s “lacklustre” production. Illustrated London News wondered why Osborne had decided to adapt the book, noting The Importance of Being Earnest was Wilde’s sole masterpiece. Observer also faulted the production, adding that, of the cast, only Anne Blake knew “how to eight an epigram.” New Statesman thought “Osborne should have dared to dramatise Wilde more freely;” Spectator and Gay News agreed. “A fairly workmanlike adaptation ... The treatment sometimes suggests the old-fashioned play-doctor” (Times).

75.66 The World’s Not Ready for You Yet, Sylvester (Black C) Laurence Marks and Maurice Gran. GLOBE (2) 13/2/75 (Ln). Comment: Scorpio Productions. Directed by Andre Thornton-Grimes.

The play was about one member of a gay partnership wanting to have a child. Gay News thought the piece was believable. Times was unimpressed by this "lugubrious spectacle" that seemed to rely on "special indulgence" because it was a gay play.

75.74 Two Gentlemen of Verona (C) William Shakespeare. Comment: Played successfully at "great speed," with Crab performed by a real terrier named Flicka (Guardian). Spectator thought the dog was "unusually forbearing in offering no more unseemly comment [than barking] on the proceedings." Times thought it was perverse of the Young Vic to stage the piece in an eighteenth-century setting, more so because it was given a "straight performance" and was heavily cut.

Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 25/2/75. "A practically faultless production" (Observer). Guardian said Schlesinger "emphasizes the mystical, dream-like quality of the proceedings," with outstanding performances from Paul Rogers and Kate Nelligan. New Statesman commended the production while noting "the play has little life by Shakespeare's or Chekhov's standards." Spectator averred the production convinced it this was Shaw's best play. "An excellent revival ... a lot of fine ensemble playing to admire" (Variety). Times joined in the chorus of approval. The production remained in repertory until 29/7/75.

Comment: Leeds Playhouse production. "[Scofield] towers in authority and command. Looking like an Old Testament prophet, he utterly convinces one of his supernatural powers." (Stage). Illustrated London News was startled by Scofield's delivery and exploration of his speeches. A "tatty little show" dependent on Scotfield for its box office success (Spectator). “The acting around Scotfield has become far less amateurish” than in the production’s staging in Leeds (New Statesman). “The details in John Harrison’s production do not add up to a focused whole,” with uneven acting (including Scotfield) (Times).

Comment: Triple Action Theatre. The adaptation included only a third of the play: “poor theatre at something like its academic worst” (Observer). Hamlet was played in repertoire with a play by William Dumas; Stage reviewed this piece but failed to name it.

75.86 Lady Che—A Political Love Story. BUSH 25/2/75. Reviews: Acton Gazette 6/3/75, 6; Stage 6/3/75, 21. Comment: Action Theatre. “Lady Che is a play within a play. Basically it is the story of how the bourgeoisie Lady Lay becomes a revolutionary. But as you would expect at the Bush Theatre, there is nothing straightforward about this production ... The audience is an integral part of the play. It gets lashed with a piece of rope, thrown plastic cabbages, hugged and even kissed by the actors” (Acton Gazette).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Performed without an interval. Observer faulted the production for failing to bring the characters alive, and for an academic approach to Shakespeare. Variety noted the production employed no scenery, few props, and consistently bright lighting; thus, it lacked atmosphere. However, Times declared "the puritanical staging comes to the aid of meaning. What happens, happens inside Macbeth's head; we are not to be taken in by it."

Comment: Guardian observed the play "panders to Tory prejudices fascinatingly," but eventually "emerges as a work of some political ambivalence and thoughtfulness." Spectator agreed, and pointed out the theatricality of the play with "nearly every scene producing its set-piece of theatrical surprise right on cue." Variety called it "a slick piece of theatre, often pungent and witty but essentially glib." Times noted the play did raise a significant issue, but otherwise the piece "consists of another trudge round the courtroom drama treadmill."

"Punctuated with mortar fire, Loud Reports is described as the musical biography of a twentieth century soldier. In revue-theatre style the production whisks its audience through 75 years of British history" (Acton Gazette). Times found the piece delightful but episodic.

Comment: MPS 569. Guardian (12/3) enjoyed Frayn's wit; however, the play lacked a centre, and the characters were not rounded out despite fine performances from Dinsdale Landen and Billie Whitelaw. New Statesman (14/3) identified only very slight defects in the play. "A mildly successful situation comedy with unsuccessful pretensions to saying something about Life, as well as life in a provincial newspaper" (Tribune 28/3). "A charming, lovable piece worth 20 of the Fringe's more bruited efforts, and expertly performed" by Barbara Ferris, Whitelaw, and Dinsdale Landen" (Illustrated London News). "Pleasant, stylishly written and well acted fare for the undemanding, with a fair outlook in the limited-capacity Mayfair" (Variety). Times commended Frayn for avoiding stereotypical plot developments and thought this was "much the best of Frayn's plays." There were 258 performances at the May Fair.

Reviews: Gay News 27/3/75, 7; Stage 20/3/75, 48. Comment: Gay Sweatshop. The play was about a gay television script writer attempting to write for a straight audience; however, his own characters come to life and argue with him. Gay News noted the play's gratifying effect "that someone has at last had a damn good laugh at the pompousness that attends any gay lib utterance worthy of the name."

Comment: Guardian noted because Shaffer was "more concerned with deft and breathtaking manipulations the play grips and holds unfairly." "A slack thriller with pretensions, goes beyond ordinary tedium" (Observer). "Often ponderously overelaborated thriller, with a surprise or two, blood in excess and a loyally uncompromising performance by Robert Stephens" (Illustrated London News). As with other reviewers, Variety noted affinities with Shaffer's Sleuth: the piece "continues the author's fascination with gamesmanship," but not as successfully as the earlier play. "Without the memory of Sleuth, perhaps this show would seem a striking novelty. But it is impossible to banish the comparison" (Times).

Comment: National Theatre. Peggy Ashcroft gave an "excellent" performance (Variety). "A memorable performance of someone desperately failing to deceive herself" (New Statesman). Tribune said Ashcroft "strikes additional terror into the situation by playing Winnie as a very ordinary person." By the final curtain the play "acquired a fearsome new cutting edge" (Times). Daily Mirror some audience members "were trying to find a laugh in even the saddest dialogue," and concluded the play "remains a masterpiece of theatrical boredom." The production remained in repertory until 19/8/75.

Performed with Panic in Portobello (75.37). The inspiration for the piece derived from and was concerned with teenagers. "As a piece of drama it justifies the practice of looking over teenagers' shoulders as they gaze at their navels, by focussing everybody's gaze with precision" (Times).

Comment: Observer said the revival lacked any vitality, with a particularly poor performance from Hywel Bennett, a performance praised by Illustrated London News. For New Statesman the production seemed like "a glum parody of Thirties' weekly rep. with stock parts stock-acted." Times used much the same language to describe its reaction to the play and acting. Tribune disliked the play but praised Bennett for his "beautiful attention to detail and great sensitivity."

Comment: Jonathan Miller’s production broke with traditional representations of the play by ignoring “the slow, stylised [sic] high-comedy speech patterns,” which was a revelation (Guardian). Observer was bemused by Miller’s approach, did not know what his interpretation was, and found the production lacked humour. New Statesman echoed those sentiments and wondered why Miller had chosen to stage the play. Spectator, like other reviewers, noted Irene Handl’s portrayal of Lady Bracknell as a Jewish hausfrau, analyzed how Miller had reached such a view, and concluded the production was “deplorable.” Times clearly shared the latter opinion.

This production began a season to mark centenary of the first Gilbert and Sullivan collaboration (on the centenary see Stage 27/3/75, 21–25). All of Gilbert and Sullivan's works were performed during 25/3/75–5/4/75; however, individual items not advertised in Times. "The D'Oyly Carte have found a style that people enjoy and they have stuck to it. But the routines ... seem awfully hackneyed and weary and genteel" (Times).

Reviews: Stage 17/4/75, 14; Times 2/4/75, 12. Comment: The play involved a young female Polynesian prime minister and treaty negotiations between Russia and America. "Not particularly strong on satire ... but entertaining in a simple way" (Stage). For its precis of the piece Times adopted the pidgin English used in the play: "me savvy pidgin proper lingo for tale that long time tell simple truths without saying nothing."

Reviews: Stage 10/4/75, 20; Times 2/4/75, 12. Comment: Oxford Playhouse Company. "For the most part lively, fast-paced and comprehensible," but with less than satisfactory performances from Frances de la Tour and John Flanagan (Stage). Gordon McDougall "seems to have no commanding reason for passing the piece off as a cheery Edwardian extravaganza" (Times).

"A Polish equivalent of a Wagnerian Gesamtkunstwerk uniting verse, music, dance, psychological realism and heroic action" (Guardian). New Statesman seemed somewhat bewildered by the production and described it as "over-blown." Observer was frustrated by the fragmentary nature of the production. Times defended the lack of coherence because a Polish audience would be familiar with the historical events surrounding the November 1830 insurrection.

Comment: Sources vary somewhat about the date of opening night, varying from 25/3 to 15/4, with a preponderance indicating 1/4/75. "Poliakoff's psychological build-up is cunning, but with hardly a hint of contrivance" (Observer). "Lively, unhackneyed" (New Statesman).

Comment: Mary Ure died (3/4/75) hours after performing in play (Stage 10/4/75, 21). The second performance was cancelled; the production resumed 4/4/75 when Margo Mayne took over Ure's role; she was replaced by Anna Cropper (who had performed in the television production) on 10/4/75. Guardian (and other reviewers) reported this ghost-story play was being billed as a new play, but, correctly, remembered seeing it previously on television. New Statesman described it as "a decent, humane, even disturbing piece." Variety said this stage version was "somewhat stretched ... contrived and insubstantial." Times described the piece as a mixture of Agatha Christie and David Mercer because the characters were "variations on the theme of socialist guilt." See Stage 6/10/83, 24 on the original production being unauthorized.

Reviews: Irish Times 22/5/75, 10; Stage 10/4/75, 15. Comment: "An outstanding show ... a robust, satirical, comical, political, tuneful version of the story of Mary Read, the seventeenth century pirate" (Stage). "It costs only 30 pence, and that's very little for a bit of fun and leaping around the stage and cheerful, skilful dancing" (Irish Times).

Comment: "A bright, agile, fitfully amusing comedy about the basic problem of being a writer," with very good performances from brothers Clive Swift and David Swift (Guardian, 5/4)."A contribution to that limp genre, the play about not being able to write a play" (Times). Observer did not like this kind of play involving a divided personality being depicted on stage; New Statesman called it "a gimmick." "A tediously artificial contrivance" (Spectator).

Comment: Gothenburg Stadsteater (Sweden). World Theatre Season. This company performed this production at the Royal Lyceum, Edinburgh, 23/8/74, which may have been the first British performance of the play. Guardian was impressed solely by the scenes of marital conflict played by Birgitta Palme and Sven Wollter. Gay News concluded Gustave was homosexual. Times said "those seeking a definition of the word 'camp' will find it" in Sven Wollter's brilliant Gustav.

Comment: The production was notable for the West End debut of James Stewart as Elwood P. Dowd, a role closely associated with him (Variety). Illustrated London News was equally impressed by Stewart and the comedy “came up with unaltered spirit, and I could have sworn that the white rabbit 6 feet 2 inches tall, the alcoholic Elwood’s unswerving partner, was there at the final call.” Times praised Stewart’s comic timing and the supporting work of Mona Washbourne and Geoffrey Lumsden.

Comment: “A splendid cast, playing at top ability” was the major reason for the success of the production rather than the somewhat inaccessible play (Variety). Times (11/4) was rather surprised by the “big salary list” of actors “in the midst of the commercial stage recession.” Spectator thought the adaptation was more of a literary exercise since it did not engage the audience’s emotions. New Statesman found the play more compelling. The performances of Alec Guinness, Margaret Leighton, Rachel Kempson, and Julia Lang “distinguish a play that pleases like an impeccably-printed edition” (Illustrated London News).

Review: Stage 24/4/75, 11. Comment: The Group. The play, set in Haiti in 1804, was about three men who dress up as nuns in order to rob a noblewoman. “On one level it is the epitome of Grand Guignol, ending with all four characters grisily dead; on another, it is a tirade against religion which is mere superstition and autocratic and despotic power. It could also be simply a nightmare vision, as unreal as the fact that men play all but one of the all-female parts” (Stage).

Comment: MPS 560. A pre-production matinée for the theatrical profession was given on 11/4/75 in aid of the family of Gareth Davies, music director. “I like it immoderately” (Observer). “Okay voices and outstanding scenery, lighting, costumes and acoustics” (Variety). “It raises the American musical to new levels of literacy, taste and wit” (Guardian). New Statesman had reservations, but did like “its relative honesty, its wistful, menopausal mood and the frequent pungency of its dialogue.” “A show that effects a reunion between Broadway and the artistic conscience” (Times). The first New York production (Shubert 25/2/73) ran for 601 performances.

75.168 The People Show. HAMPSTEAD 15/4/75.* Comment: “The People Show has a season at Hampstead from April 15 to 26 with a production originally commissioned by the club” (Stage 10/4/75, 17).

Comment: MPS 402. Guardian objected strongly to the plethora of “grubby, shoddy” anti-gay jokes, and the “caricature image of the homosexual as a limp-wristed mother-lover.” Gay News had more than a few objections to the play’s gross misrepresentations and inappropriate “jokes.” Variety called it a “sour comic strip,” and predicted failure “on the evidence of a vastly undersold house.” Daily Mirror noted “A sophisticated sex comedy that has been produced in twenty-four countries has been adapted as a thick, lumpy farce for British tastes,” and then, unironically, played on those reprehensible tastes. The New York production ran for 12 performances.

Comment: English Stage Company. The production was part of a five-month retrospective of Orton’s work, which Guardian thought was unnecessary since his work had enjoyed “maximum exposure in the West End” and elsewhere. Variety said it was a successful revival with a superior cast. Gay News confined its praise to Reid’s performance. New Statesman agreed Reid’s was “the most memorable performance” in a rather “muted production. Times (18/4) placed Orton’s work in the context of Giles Cooper, Edward Bond, Pinter, and other dramatists.

Reviews: Gay News 8/5/75, 19; Stage 22/5/74, 29. Comment: MPS 598A. Studio '68 of Theatre Arts. "A rather shadowy montage-portrait of the playwright, but with a certain evocative power. [Richard] Powell captured the very essence of Wilde magnificently" (Stage). Gay News also praised Powell's portrayal and recorded Powell used an Irish accent and "the brogue added considerable charm."

75.177c To Bobolink, for Her Spirit (P, 1a) William Inge. COCKPIT 21/4/75. Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 22/5/74, 29. Comment: Studio '68 of Theatre Arts. An "engaging sketch about a bunch of stage-struck teenagers waiting to get autographs outside the New York 21 Club" (Stage).

75.178 The Doctor's Dilemma (P, 5a) Bernard Shaw. "A play without precedent in the history of the British Theatre; one that shows in detail how a revolution actually works" (Guardian). New Statesman dubbed the piece "a stark Brechtian documentary," and wanted to know where Hare stood on the issues, and needed "more humanising touches." Tribune said the play's dialectics were "truly fascinating and the issues are neither over-simplified nor sentimentalised." "An exercise in total objectivity" (Times).

Reviews: Guardian 22/4/75, 12; Stage 24/4/75, 40; Times 22/4/75, 13. Comment: Abafumi Company (Kampala, Uganda). World Theatre Season. The piece involved a brave warrior having to choose between his tribal duty and his personal happiness, choosing the former. Guardian said much of the action involved "intoxicating primal ceremonies.” “Certainly has exotic interest, but its theatrical signature is very familiar ... Africa has spoken more powerfully through less artful shows” (Times).

75.184 William Shakespeare in Persons (One-man show) Rob Inglis. BANKSIDE GLOBE 21/4/75. Review: Stage 1/5/75, 9. Comment: “Mr. Inglis’s programme is a life-and-times-of job, aimed at university arts centre audiences on the other side of the Atlantic. Wisely, he does not attempt to erect a theoretical Shakespeare in the novelist’s fashion” (Stage).

75.185 The Dumb Waiter (P, 1a) Harold Pinter. YOUNG VIC 22/4/75 (Ln). Cast: Stage 17/4/75, 19. Ben Neil Dickson; Gus David Stockton. Pres Cameron Mackintosh. Plot: Demastes/2, Fletcher, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Weintraub.

Comment: MPS 586. Variety declared the piece was a waste of the collective talents of all involved, a view shared by Illustrated London News. “A British musical falling flat on its face is not a pretty sight ... dreary, un-funny, untuneful and so woefully staged” (Daily Mirror). A “disastrous musical” (Gay News). A “witless travesty” (Guardian). New Statesman reported the original script had been cut down from four hours to under three for the actual production. Times implied this “modest, well-written, unspectacular piece” was out of place in the cavernous Her Majesty’s.

75.187 Let’s All Streak Down the Strand (P) Desmond Maidment. PRINCE OF WALES (2) 22/4/75 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 17/4/75, 19. Allan Walsh, Felicity York, Victor Reynolds. Dir Hal Dryer, Review: Stage 1/5/75, 10. Comment: Wimbledon Pub Crawlers. This piece, about “a honeymoon couple experiencing the ups-and-downs of the prenuptial hour,” needed a lighter touch (Stage).

Comment: MPS 579. National Theatre. “Pinter’s achievement ... is to have treated comically a theme most writers tackle with sententious gravity”; superb performances from the cast (Guardian). Variety praised all aspects of the production. Tribune, praising the play, described it as “Pinter on Pinter, Pinter parodying Pinter, Pinter feeding on himself and his previous work for regeneration.” New Statesman (2/5) “felt that the various Pinters on parade had not altogether been reconciled,” but added “Peter Hall’s production is as sensitive as it could be,” the acting superb. See also Lloyd Evans, 215–18. The production remained in repertory at the Old Vic until 28/6/75. The first New York production (Longacre 9/11/76) ran for 47 performances.

Comment: "The recycled G&S score plays back in jazz, pop ballad, soul and rock variations, and the functional libretto is hoked up to suit the new ethnic ambience;" Michael Denison was the only white performer (Variety). "Braham Murray's slap-happy production is wildly festive" (Observer). New Statesman singled out Val Pringle as "the hero of the evening." Times approved generally but wondered why the piece was placed in "some palm-wine pleasure spot." Unexpectedly Illustrated London News enjoyed the production "probably because it was so swift and exuberant it gave one little time to think." Daily Mirror reported the Gilbert and Sullivan Society was upset at this version of the original.

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian compared Lan's "gun-popping melodrama" unfavorably with David Hare's Fanshen! Observer thought Lan had run out of ideas. "Half-baked philosophising imposed upon a ludicrous melodrama of the Napoleonic wars" (Spectator). Times called this a "dreadful sequel" to the successful Bird Child in which Lan had written about what he knew, whereas here he didn't.

75.198 60 Glorious Minutes (Show) George Logan and Patrick Fyffe. AMBASSADORS 28/4/75 (Lt). Comment: Performed by Hinge and Bracket, i.e. the authors.

Comment: Spectator thought it was a pedestrian production and Alastair Sim's talents were wasted. Guardian said it was a typical West End classic revival: "a marvellous star performer surrounded by an uncohesive scratch company, pointlessly fussy settings and a wanton sacrifice of meaning for easy laughs." Times presented a diametrically opposed judgement. Illustrated London News thought any success would derive from Sim's performance; everything else was too exaggerated. Daily Mirror said performances by Ron Moody and Dandy Nichols were disappointing.

Comment: James Saunders added a new second half to John Vanbrugh's original A Journey to London left uncompleted at his death in 1726. Guardian said Saunders's version worked until the final ten minutes of Pirandellian "sophomoric philosophising." New Statesman was unhappy with both the ending specifically and Saunders's version generally. Spectator thought Saunders should have expressed his ideas in a play completely his own.

tator 10/5/75, 5867 Stage 8/5/75, 15; Times 2/5/75, 11. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. An enchanting production by David Jones and a "masterly performance" by Ian Richardson (Guardian); Observer and New Statesman were equally enthusiastic. The production revealed the play was not "the work of an immature poetic dandy" (Times).

75.208 Dear Janet Rosenberg, Dear Mr. Kooning (RC, 2a) Stanley Eveling. Plot: French/2, Hochman, Mander/3, Matlaw, Purdom. Review: Times 7/5/75, 7. Comment: National Theatre. Times faulted the cast for "passing off the characters as ordinary instead of allowing them to balloon to proper Shavian proportions."

75.213 Oh, If Ever a Man Suffered (P, 1a) Mary O'Malley. HAMPSTEAD 7/5/75 (Lt). Cast: Stage 17/4/75, 1. Mammy Mary O'Malley; Bernadette Eve

Belton; Ron Cook, Aiden Murphy, Dick Sullivan, Paddy Ward. Dir Brian Croucher; Dgn Mary Greaves, Pauline Murphy. Reviews: Irish Times 22/5/75, 10; Spectator 17/5/75, 617; Times 9/5/75, 13. Comment: The play involved an Irish family the mother of which returns after a fifteen-year absence. Spectator said Mary O'Malley made the "catastrophic mistake of appearing herself in one of its principal roles." Times thought the piece was only an anecdote which failed to explain why the family endured "senseless self-torment." Irish Times noted it was not easy to get tickets for this hour-long play.

Comment: Spectator said Alfred Marks and Jimmy Jewel succeeded "joyously" as the pair of retired comics. For Guardian the only thing missing in the production was "the authentic New York Jewish voice." Variety credited the director, Neil Simon's brother Danny, "for the credible way [the show] reproduces the New York show biz tone and tempo." Times was amazed at Simon's ability to "write honestly and brilliantly without infringing the Broadway code"; excellent performances from Jewel and Marks. The first New York production (Broadhurst 20/12/72) ran for 538 performances.

Comment: "A pretty good audience show," but its triteness may disappoint the discriminating (Variety), a view Illustrated London News shared. Gay News objected to the bisexual character Baldassare being treated as the "object of farce," but not the straight characters. "Absurd and fragile though it is, it has charm" (Spectator). "As wet an example of Broadway Blytonese as I can remember" (Times). Daily Mirror noted this was a stage version of the film Avanti! (1972).

Reviews: Guardian 22/5/75, 10; Irish Times 26/6/75, 10; New Statesman 30/5/75, 734-35; Stage 12/6/75, 8; Times 22/5/75, 11. Comment: Ambiance, season of gay plays. New Statesman said Patrick was good at bitchy humour but not at serious matters. "A frantic, febrile but often very funny homosexual comedy" (Guardian). For Times Patrick was weak on plot but good with dialogue, and the two American actors clung to their roles "as if to second skins."

75.234 Miss Adams Will Be Waiting (C) Arthur Lovegrove. WIMBLEDON 19/5/75. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Windsor, 2/2/71. Moira Lister, Richard Todd, Diane Hart, Terence Longdon. Dir Jan Butlin. Comment:

MPS 12525. Comment: "Married publisher with taxi leaps to the aid of attractive divorcee with parcels and is invited into her flat for refreshments. We meet them in the springtime as author Arthur Lovegrove proceeds to partition the developing relationship into seasonal scenes. It is a sort of Brief Encounter without benefit of British Rail" (Birmingham Post 10/6/75, 2).

75.235 Family Spear (P, 1a) Elvania Zirimu. AFRICA CENTRE 20/5/75 (Ln). 1st perfd Kampala, Uganda, 1973?; 1st London perf. Jeillo Edwards, Yemi Ajibade. Dir Kwesi Kay. Reviews: Observer 25/5/75, 24; Stage 5/6/75, 15. Comment: Wakefield Tricycle Company. "An account of the trials endured by a couple of newly weds at the hands of their tribal in-laws" (Observer). "A distinctive writing talent in its exploration of family resentments over a new daughter-in-law, proving the generation gap to be just as wide in a tribal community as anywhere else" (Stage).

75.236 Hunt the Ripper (P) Peter Dawson. JACK THE RIPPER 20/5/75.* Cast: Stage 15/5/75, 15. Irene Bough, Peter Dawson, Julia Godley, Leigh Jackson, Phillip Kelleher, Lin Merchant, Craig Mollison. Lynne Suffolk, Tony Turner. Dir Peter Dawson; Sc dgn Judith Wild. Review: Stage 17/7/75, 9. Comment: Curtain Theatre Company. About Jack the Ripper. "Peter Dawson's direction is imaginative, vigorous but disciplined, and realises fully the intentions of his writing" (Stage).

Comment: Wimbledon Pub Crawlers. The final, and apparently fiftieth production, at this pub. "A tribute to London, spanning the reigns of the two Elizabeths" (Stage).

75.238 The Year of Goats (P) Lari Williams. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 20/5/75. 1st stage perf. Cast: Stage 22/5/75, 13. Teni Gbogboade, Yvonne Gidden, Cherry West, Tony Abolo, Lewis St. Juste. Dir Lari Williams. Review: Stage 3/7/75, 21. Comment: Calabash Artistes (a group of professional African actors). "The situation is a modern one, but timeless and applicable to any part of the world—the conflict between city illusions and village realities" (Stage).

75.239 Best We've Ever Had (C) Ben Cross. MAXIMUS 22/5/75 (Ln). 1st perf? Cast: Stage 8/5/75, 17. Michael Halsey, James Hunter. Dir Barbara Markham. Review: Observer 25/5/75, 24. Comment: Actors' Arena. Observer called it a "comedy well laced with menace from Pinter ... performed with notable smoothness."

75.240 No Room for Sex (F) Anthony Marriott and Bob Grant. RICHMOND 26/5/75. 1st perfd Theatre, Royal Brighton, 19/5/75? Thora Hird, Barry Evans, Hugh Paddick, Sheila Staefel, Kenneth Connor, Desmond Walter Ellis, Hilary Pritchard. Comment: A one-week engagement.

Comment: Marowitz pared the original down to ninety-five minutes, losing some of its complexity, but revealing "how sheer judicial corruption overwhelms ... Angelo ends in triumph and laughter with the Duke, Isabella is unbelieved, a brother dead" (Guardian 29/5). New Statesman thought the play provided "good criticism" of Shakespeare's shift in the play "from potential tragedy to soggy, sentimental comedy." Tribune said the adaptation was "better than the later Marowitz" ones.

75.246 What a Crazy World (Mus, 2a) Alan Klein (bk, lyr, mus). Reviews: Spectator 7/6/75, 696; Stage 5/6/75, 15; Times 5/6/75, 13. Comment: "Aimless facetiousness about a tedious sextet isolated by a car breakdown, with nothing to eat but chocolate cake" (Spectator). Even though it found the play episodic Times opined Nicholas Wood might well be "a major new talent."

75.248 Travesties (C, 2a) Tom Stoppard. The play involved two black male Londoners who complain about white oppression but who force a black woman into prostitution. "A feeling but unfocused piece" (New Statesman). "Badly constructed, boringly written old-school naturalism," but finely acted (Tribune). Times noted Fagon's ability with "comic ideas" but said he failed to develop them.

Comment: English Stage Company. Tribune said the play managed to survive "Albert Finney's disastrously misconceived" and miscast production. A "curate's egg revival" (Guardian 4/6). Variety generally approved the revival but thought it needed "more of the play's lunatic spirit." Times noted and approved of Finney's decision to anaesthetize the physical violence and the gruesome aspects.

Comment: Observer called the production "regrettable," while Stage said it was "cheery." New Statesman said Sam Walters's production was "genial but unimaginative." "A good, plain, intimate treatment" of the play (Illustrated London News). Times thought the production by Sam Walters made "light of the technical obstacles" the play possessed and the result was successful.

11; Variety 25/6/75, 72. Comment: "The show is simply a yawn, with all the snap and pace of a stately minuet," but with an excellent cast (Variety). Observer called John Gielgud's production "immaculate" and attuned to the changing tones in the play and aware that Pinero wrote "very funny dialogue"; commendable performances. Guardian regarded the piece as passé and not worth reviving. "The reason for choosing this play to revive is baffling" (Times). Illustrated London News defended both the play and the production. The first New York production was at the Criterion 12/11/1900.

Comment: Actors Company. Guardian described the play as aspiring to be "the Heartbreak House of the 70's," but was too cosily theatrical to be compelling. Times also invoked Heartbreak House though this play was really just an anecdote about a father keeping his adult children at home. "Domestic comedy, oddly shaped but sharply written" (Observer). "Sub-Shavian, soporific soap-opera" (Tribune).

Comment: Vincent Price's West-End stage debut. Variety opined the piece would "please some audiences, but many will shrug it off as old-hat and artificial." Spectator declared "it is one of Anouilh's duds," and wondered why Vincent Price and Coral Browne "chose it in which to make their debut as a married couple" [they married in 1974]. Guardian thought Frith Banbury's production missed "the work's dark subterranean disgust." The production was "as edifying as a dish of scarecrow in aspic" (Times). Better as a radio play (Daily Mirror). The first New York production, as an adaptation entitled Cry of the Peacock (Mansfield 11/4/50), ran for 2 performances.

Comment: New Statesman confined its remarks to the "charmless," humorless portrayal of Falstaff by Peter Schofield. Guardian noted there was far more laughter on stage than from the audience. Times said Josephine Wilson's production emphasized "the romp," presenting the piece as "a simple pantomime"; "the audience responded warmly."

Comment: Actors’ Company. New Statesman faulted Wilbur’s “ambling translation” but said the cast played it “with energy and humour.” Times noted Edward Petherbridge played Tartuffe with “meek stillness.” “Petherbridge makes so smug a horror of the hypocrite and confidence man who could have taught Parolles a device or so that we are more than ever delighted when he crumbles at the Officer’s speech. Sheila Reid proves again what a compelling actress she is” (Illustrated London News).

Comment: English Stage Company. Tribune said "politically [the play] stinks," and made the mistake of assuming generality equals universality. Poliakoff "does not write well enough for the subject and his characters do not convince" (Observer). Although written with "fire and anger," Poliakoff has buried "his original talent under a dead weight of received ideas" (Times).

75.307 An Die Musik (Performance) from an original idea by Rudi Engländer; Chris Jordan (mus, and Schubert, Beethoven and Liszt). Comment: Pip Simmons Theatre Group. The play involved Jews in an extermination camp identifying with their captors and being killed. Observer declared the production was "unequivocally my most terrifying theatrical experience," but questioned what the real purpose of it all was. Times reported a post-performance encounter with the actors who had reverted into typical "luvvies."

75.308 Black Slaves, White Chains (P, 1a) Mustapha Matura. Reviews: Guardian 8/7/75, 10; Times 4/7/75, 13. Comment: English Stage Company. The play involved three black prisoners and the enslaved freedom two of them accept, while the third eats their dead guard. Guardian thought the piece "shapely and theatrically alive," but at thirty-five minutes in length too compressed. "A balefully muddled racial indictment" (Times).

The pantomime was told in mime and connected with the previous item by a reappearance of Dionysus being turned into the Giant.

75.316 Gem (P, 1a) Barrie Keeffe. SOHO POLY 8/7/75 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 10/7/75, 19. Kev Will Knightley; Bill Michael Brodie; Gary Adrian Shergold; Sharman MacDonald. Dir Keith Washington. Plot: Bull/2, Walford. Reviews: Guardian 9/7/75, 8; Stage 17/7/75, 20; Times 10/7/75, 9. Comment: Guardian said the central character, Kev, was "a totally convincing picture of a modern malcontent ... played by Will Knightley with a desperate, thin-lipped jauntiness that suggests a mound of sexual frustration and corrosive hatred." Times agreed about Knightley's performance but found aspects of the play predictable.

Comment: National Theatre. Observer noted an emphasis on sexual rather than social tension in the production; Harrison's translation was "generally brilliant." Spectator welcomed every aspect of the revival. Guardian said this third version of the production "seems to have achieved perfect scale and definition." "It demonstrates that Molière can be successfully played in English, and that serious drama can be composed in rhymed couplets without any Christmas pantomime echoes" (Times).

Comment: Guardian said Jonathan Miller's "chamber-Shakespeare" production possessed "narrative clarity" but lost the play's "elegiac fairy-tale quality." A "starkly and unsmiling" revival needing "more variety and more zest" (New Statesman). "The show is interesting as a piece of Shakespearean criticism; less so as a production" (Times). Illustrated London News generally approved of the production.

Comment: Originally the play was to be entitled Around the Bottle. The play was about "a group of Austrian intellectual drop-outs ... [who] are simply a distorted mirror image of the bourgeois world they ostensibly condemn" (Guardian). Times thought too much of the dialogue was trivial and did not advance the play. "An over-written and vulgar exercise. I wish dramatists would stop being so defiant about the kind of language they think is fitted to an average audience. It appears to me to be silly bravado" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: Henry Fonda's London debut. Fonda's performance was "eminently smooth and honed by time, assured, totally effective and convincing, a bravura job done in thesp's characteristically sotto voce style" (Variety). Times said the show needed a more intimate theatre than the Piccadilly, John Houseman's direction was fussy, and the "text is undramatic because unrevealing." The first New York production (Helen Hayes 26/3/74) ran for 29 performances.

Comment: New Shakespeare Company. Times and Illustrated London News discussed and approved of the new auditorium designed by William Howell. "Up-dated to Byronic Greece, although, as far as I could see, for no good reason except the purely visual," with uneven acting (Stage).

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian thought Lindsay Anderson's production lacked "any real feeling for the mechanics of farce." Judging from a preview performance New Statesman opined "it will be some time before the company is fully relaxed and sure of itself." Variety thought "the playing is serviceable." Times found the production was "most meticulously paced," but had reservations about the play itself.

Review: Stage 24/7/75, 21. Comment: Actors' Arena. "John Dalby's direction overlooks no opportunities for implementing the verbal humour with visual farcical situations, and though needing a little run in, it should soon be rollicking along at a spanking pace" (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Guardian called Glenda Jackson's Hedda "an astonishing performance," without emotional inhibition, and portraying Hedda as "a cowardly bungler whose few positive acts always misfire." Spectator took a diametrically opposed view of Jackson's performance and Trevor Nunn's direction. New Statesman thought Hedda could be seen as a "sneering nihilist," but the audience should also "feel that her death is a waste; and this time we don't." Times quoted Ibsen's comment "Life for Hedda is a farce which isn't worth seeing through to the end," and the production animated that viewpoint. Illustrated London News commended all the cast.

Comment: Bristol Old Vic production. The piece was about Gilbert and Sullivan's relationship as a framework for the performance numerous of their songs. Both Gay News and Guardian said the piece became more alive in the second half. "The author has worked rather too hard on stoking up the Gilbert and Sullivan quarrels. They are dangerously repetitive" (Illustrated London News). "A crisply paced and charmingly satiric divertissement" (Variety).

Comment: MPS 519. Guardian said this was not better than Ayckbourn's previous plays, but added "his great virtue ... is that he always builds farcical comedy out of observable truth.” “The characters are solidly upright and British. But out of the boring small talk Mr. Ayckbourn can conjure the most farcical situations. There is none better than Richard Briers when it comes to portraying genial chumps” (Daily Mirror). New Statesman declared the play was “an unmitigated failure” because of the unfunny dialogue and “inadequate characterisation.” Variety also said it was not Ayckbourn’s best work but “is nevertheless first class stuff by general standards.” Times described the piece as “limp” with no clear storyline or developed characters. Illustrated London News also detected a slacking off by Ayckbourn.

Comment: “The worst thriller imaginable” (Stage). “Creaky item, very poorly performed by most cast members, has few redeeming factors” (Variety). “The characters are wooden and the actors are even more sadly afflicted that way ... Miss Christie’s characters rarely transfer from the printed page with any credibility” (Daily Mirror). “A lamentable evening” (Times). Illustrated London News wished it had ended when the curtain fell on act one.

Comment: English Stage Company. Guardian praised Tom Bell's "quite remarkable performance" as a teacher caught up in a sex scandal. New Statesman faulted the play for its "doubtful sociological theorems" and for being "vastly overwritten." The authors "come over as sociologists first and dramatists second" but they evince "care for individual characters" (Times).

75.352 Telephone on the Terrace (P) Bob Coleman. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 28/7/75. 1st perf? Cast: Stage 24/7/75, 17. Richard Denning, Jiggy Bhoire. Dir Richard Denning.

Plot: Hischak/2, 193–94. Reviews: Observer 17/8/75, 20; Times 1/8/75, 9. Comment: National Theatre, which had taken over the ICA for a two-month season of studio productions. The play concerned Charles Blondin (1824–97), a tightrope walker, and a young antagonistic disciple. Times said the real interest lay in the growing relationship between the two men which was "vividly projected" by Gawn Grainger and Andrew Byatt. The first New York production was at Stage 73 3/11/81.

Comment: Spectator said Alan Bates gave "One of those imperturbably relaxed performances he gives so well." Illustrated London News said it was a good play that owed a lot to Bates's performance. "Harold Pinter's direction keeps the pace chilling and crisp" (Guardian). In addition to Bates, Variety noted the "classy support" from the remainder of the cast. Observer (3/8) pointed to symmetrical elements in the two acts"; for example, a mock suicide in the first act, a genuine one in the second. Times (18/2) noted Gambon made "an entirely new sense of the role."

Comment: National Theatre. Guardian described the piece as “a rather stolid jape” because the object of Gilbert’s satire had faded long ago. “A very, very funny play ... an absurd situation comedy with a thousand complications” (Irish Times). “I suspect it might be less a piece of period curiosity than Michael Blakemore’s production makes it”; uneven acting (Tribune), a view echoed by Times. The piece was worthy of revival and was performed well (Illustrated London News).

75.372 The Lady or the Tiger (MC, 2a) Jeremy Paul (bk; based on Frank Stockton’s short story, 1882) and Michael Richmond (bk) and Nola York (mus). ORANGE TREE 6/8/75.* Cast: Stage 21/8/75, 45. Plot: OTF. Comment: The premiere proved very popular. The production was also performed at the Baroque, Baden-Baden, 14/9/75.

75.373 The Party (P, 1a) Sławomir Mro ek (trans Nicholas Bethell of Zabawa, 1963). POLISH CENTRE, HAMMERSMITH, 7/8/75. Plot: Hochman, Matlaw, 546. Review: Guardian 11/8/75, 8. Comment: Guardian saw connections with Beckett’s Godot, and noted the play’s “political resonance.”

Reviews: Irish Times 23/8/75, 9; New Statesman 15/8/75, 207; Times 14/8/75, 12. Comment: Equinox. The play was about a Dublin man conditioned by his environment and his mother to a life of violence and boredom. “A fine piece of theatrical writing” (New Statesman). “A fine company presents an unflinchingly honest piece of work” (Times).

75.377 A Process of Elimination (P) David Halliwell. HOWFF 11/8/75. 1st perf? Cast: Stage 31/7/75, 9. Robin Carr, Steve Halliwell, Heather Page. Dir David Halliwell. Comment: Quipu.

Comment: The production was set in late nineteenth-century Vienna. Guardian generally commended Jonathan Miller’s “cool, rationalist approach,” but it did rob “the low-life scenes of their sleazy Dickensian vitality.” New Statesman approved the setting since it got rid of many traditional theatrical mannerisms. Illustrated London News queried the setting and thought Miller should have used a freer approach to the play.

“Miller evidently sees [the play] as a morality with no moral centre of gravity” (Times).

75.379 A Cure for Freedom (Ent) Quentin Crisp. KING’S HEAD 14/8/75 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 14/8/75, 1. Quentin Crisp. Pres Richard Jackson, Richard Gollner. Review: Stage 21/8/75, 46. Comment: Crisp’s “impressive personality is the strong and vital background to his fascinating talk” (Stage).

75.380 Fanshen! (D, 2a) David Hare (based on William Hinton, Fanshen, 1966). HAMPSTEAD 14/8/75. Cast: Stage 7/8/75, 1; WWT/16. For Spectator the production failed to meet its “expectations of the theatrical experience.” Guardian defended the piece as “a major piece of theatre.”

75.381 The Girls (P) David Turner. MAXIMUS 14/8/75 (Ln). 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 14/8/75, 17. Reviews: Irish Times 5/9/75, 8; Stage 28/8/75, 21. Comment: Actors’ Arena. “A very strange little tale a bit like Arsenic and Old Lace, but without the laughs ... a gripping 40 minutes, a great 50 pence worth” (Irish Times). Stage noted the theatre was “setting high lunch-time standards in acting, direction, décor and, not least, comfort.”

75.382 Hydra. BANKSIDE GLOBE 14/8/75 (Lt). Comment: Middlesex Polytechnic production.

75.383 Madame de Sade (D, 3a) Yukio Mishima. KING’S HEAD 14/8/75. 1st perfd Kinokuniya Hall, Tokyo, 14/11/65, as Sado K shaku Fujin; 1st London perf? Plot: French/2, Gunn, Hochman. Reviews: Stage 21/8/75, 46; Times 27/8/75, 5. Comment: A Bush Theatre production originally given in a tent on Bush Green on 13/8/75. Presented by Young Vic (but not a Young Vic production). Times faulted David Mouchtar-Samourai’s production and the “aggressive banality” of the translation.

75.386 The Lord of Misrule (P) Allan Swift and Bob Tomson. SHAW 18/8/75.* Simon Shepherd, Simon Butteriss, Tigga Wild. Dir Bob Tomson, Allan Swift; Dgn Dee Greenwood; Light Mark Jonathan. Reviews: Stage 28/8/75, 15; Times 19/8/75, 5. Comment: National Youth Theatre. The play, about Elizabethan boys kidnapped to become boy actors, also included a large portion of The Knight of the Burning Pestle. The complete cast was approximately 50 performers.

75.387 This Wooden O (Ent) Douglas Cleverdon. BANKSIDE GLOBE 18/8/75.* Cast: Stage 21/8/75, 39. Sinead Cusack, Ron Moody, Marius Goring, Jeremy Clyde, Frank Duncan, Rob Inglis. Reviews: Stage 28/8/75, 15; Times 21/8/75, 10. Comment: “About staging Shakespeare in London between the 16th and 19th centuries” and about “later theatre managements [bringing] the ‘uncut jewels’ of the Shakespearian canon into line with contemporary taste” (Stage).

75.388 B Movie (P) Robert Walker. SOHO POLY 19/8/75 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 21/8/75, 46. Ron Travis, Pat Quinn, Simon Callow, John Bay, Christopher Ryan, Anthony Scott. Dir Robert Walker. Review: Stage 28/8/75, 15. Comment: Stage said this was a very clever and funny parody of a B movie.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews began on 14/8/75. “It’s an episodic affair, and so is the impact . . . most succeeds in establishing character” (Variety). “Throughout the night one wavers between irritation at Mr. Wood’s extravagant caricature and admiration at his sense of atmosphere. It is this that conquers us at the last” (Illustrated London News). Tribune noted the irony of watching the play while “bomb disposal experts had cordoned off Waterloo Bridge,” one consequence of the war in Northern Ireland. Spectator was baffled to know what the intent of the production was other than being “an antique parody of colonial army life.” “Despite some neat satire on a British way of life long since gone, Jingo fails to be consistently funny. Like the British at Singapore, Mr. Wood seems uncertain of his targets” (Daily Mirror). Guardian commended “Wood’s wry, puzzled, equivocal attitude to the subject,” and his ability to write “like a poet rather than a moralist.”

Plot: Bull/2. Reviews: Guardian 21/8/75, 8; Stage 11/9/75, 20; Times 21/8/75, 10. Comment: National Youth Theatre. Times was impressed by this play being combined with the NYT’s two other productions this summer (Lord of Misrule and Zigger Zagger) because all three spoke to a young generation’s social problems. Guardian noted the piece was typical of the company’s formulaic productions: “the bustling all-male group-show that combines physical expertise with a dash of social criticism.”

Comment: New Statesman said “Bernard Miles’s production does justice to this fascinating, embarrassing piece,” and pointed to cuts in the text that illustrated Shaw “could be a gullible, callous old man.” Spectator was somewhat unnerved that Miles had chosen to revive the piece. Daily Mirror found the first act “long-winded” but “for its, lively second-half debate it is a revival well worth a visit.” For Times the virtue of the production was “that the smaller figures come over as spokesmen first and buffoons second.” Variety noticed that the play’s concern with the economic depression of the 1930s was relevant to the current economic distress in Britain. The New York production (Daly’s 63rd Street 15/6/38) ran for 66 performances.

Comment: MPS 587. Oxford Playhouse Company. Guardian opined the production did not deserve a better fate than the original one which was "an unmitigated disaster." Variety thought the music and acting were worthwhile, particularly by Bob Hoskins and Angela Richards. Spectator was antipathetic. "A fair example of Brecht at his tub-thumping worst" (Daily Mirror). A "vivid, well paced production" (Times). The New York production with this translation (Martin Beck 7/5/77) ran for 75 performances; and see also 65.49.

The company for this double-bill comprised Denise Dwyer, George Mayo, Penelope Parry, Jennifer Lautrec, Kim Horsman. Dir Peter Lindsay. In the double-bill "Peter Lindsay's production uses a simple setting which is imaginatively lit to bring into prominence characters stepping out of the story frame to make an appeal to the audience or the episodes which happen as a form of play within play" (Stage)

Comment: MPS 604. English Stage Company. The beginning of a new season under the direction of new joint artistic directors, Robert Kidd and Nicholas Wright. Guardian thought the piece a lively, honest account of a '60s rock band falling apart, with "splendid performances" from Helen Mirren and Dave King. "It's bitter, vulgar, funny and depressing, but ultimately optimistic ... Some of the philosophical passages seem arbitrary and occasionally pretentious" (Variety). New Statesman, which had disliked Hare's earlier work, found the piece was on "altogether another level of dramatic energy and intelligence ... it has that mysterious x-factor, resonance." Times said the piece was comparable to The Entertainer. Spectator opined the piece was really a very early work: "Let's all just hope that Hare really did write this rubbish in his leveret days." Daily Mirror disliked the piece generally and Mirren's performance in particular.

After further weeks at Norwich, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Leeds and Birmingham, it goes to Canada for a season at the O’Keefe Centre, Toronto before returning for a West End run. The show is produced, written and composed by Bertha Egnos, with lyrics by her daughter Gail Lakier, choreography by Sheila Wartski and designed by Elizabeth MacLeish. It is presented by Ray Cooney, for Ray Cooney Productions Ltd., by arrangement with the Academy Theatre and Brooke Theatre, Johannesburg” (Stage 28/8/75, 5) with illustration. Birmingham Post (9/9/75, 7) reported one of the Wimbledon’s directors objected to the dancers being topless; his objection was ignored. The first New York production (Harkness 12/1/77) ran for 39 performances.

Comment: National Theatre. Previews 3/9–8/9/75. The play was reset in nineteenth-century India with Phèdra as the Memsahib and Theseus as a Governor (Observer). “The endless exposition statically presented in John Dexter’s production was so unendurably torturous that even Diana Rigg’s magnificent efforts to convey tragic self-torture were defeated by it—and also by the tedium of the unrelieved rhymed coupleting” (Tribune). “An unsatisfactory and at times ponderous melodrama which is not redeemed even by the witty verse and its often eloquent imagery” (Variety). Spectator expressed reservations about Harrison’s transformation of the original, but was full of praise for “John Dexter’s marvellously atmospheric production” and Diana Rigg’s “superb performance.” The production remained in repertory until 5/2/76.

Comment: "There's an action replay of World War 2 at the Ambassadors Theatre. So if you missed the event, or were in it and want to savour two-and-a-half hours of blissful nostalgia, I suggest you start queuing" (Daily Mirror). "An anthology of entertainment, 1939-45," although it was uncertain what Ken Lee's contribution was (Observer). "It should prove an irresistible show, and business should be upbeat" (Variety). "It is all thoroughly well meant, but—except by its actresses—indifferently performed and with imitations that remain on charade level" (Illustrated London News). Spectator, reporting the audience was composed largely of "senior citizens," wondered why they were nostalgic about a world war. Times reported the show was "greeted with extraordinary enthusiasm."

A shapeless, aimless piece about life in London's East End (Observer). "It is positively libellous in its insistence that Cockneys are acquisitive, violent, sex-obsessed and pig-ignorant" (New Statesman). For once, Times said, it warmed to Berkoff's work because it seemed to be based on his own experience.

Comment: Guardian detected the influences of Genet, Arrabal, and Tournier. Tribune thought the production had ignored the play's potential as a farcical black comedy, a point also made by Times. "Though there are macabre developments, the piece reaches its real climax too early, and it becomes repetitive. In spite of a certain strength, Mr. Fernald's production, and some sound playing by Michael Blackham, Anthony May, James Fox-Salaman and Heather Page, the night in general has to be obstinately unpersuasive" (Birmingham Post).

Reviews: Stage 25/9/75, 10; Times 18/9/75, 11. Comment: National Youth Theatre. Times found Michael Croft's production boring and lamentable, and lambasted Croft for failing to provide the young actors with a "life-enhancing experience." "Scene changes were silent and swift, special effects were good, and the three hour long production was obviously the end product of much hard work and enjoyment" (Stage).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews 16/9–17/9/75. Tribune observed Granville-Barker was happier representing the upper classes rather than the lower. Variety thought little of the play, but commended Mia Farrow and Paul Rogers. New Statesman reported the audience was restless during the performance. Spectator found "splendid things" in the piece, but faulted the characterization of Ann Leete. Times praised David Jones's "beautifully articulated production" of this notable play, "the closest work we have to an English Cherry Orchard."

Comment: Guardian thought behind some "folksy clichés" there was a "fascinating theme, with strong performances from Toby Robins and Donald Burton. New Statesman remarked on the numerous empty seats for the second-night performance and on Toby Robins's misreading of her role. "A miserably unauthentic production" (Observer). Melodrama predominated for Times.

"Rather resembles a forties' prisoner of war camp concert" (Times). "In effect, it covers the Falstaff-Hal scenes, with some others, roughly pieced, and padded with bits from the Shrew, a few speeches from Henry V, a phrase from Troilus and Cressida, and so on. It is a mixture that even has Prince Hal singing: 'When that I was and a little tiny boy,' Falstaff breaking into 'Crabbed Youth and Age,' and the company joining, after Henry IV's death, in a resonant chorus, 'This happy breed of men.' A strange exercise" (Birmingham Post).

Comment: National Theatre. Nottingham Playhouse production. Preview: 23/9/75. "Strong on characterization and human interest, and it's very funny" (Variety). Guardian was impressed by Griffiths's ability to present many sides to ideas and leave the audience to draw its conclusions, and admired Jimmy Jewel's performance. "An imaginative and provocative play," with Pryce "a real discovery" (New Statesman). Times (25/9) also commended the acting of Jewel and Pryce together with "the Nottingham company's teamwork." Spectator discussed the many aspects of comedy in relation to the play and its intentions, and noted "the performance of the piece is, indeed, impeccable throughout under Richard Eyre's inspired direction." The production remained in repertory at the Old Vic until 18/10/75. The first New York production (Music Box 28/11/76) ran for 145 performances.

Review: Stage 16/10/75, 15. Comment: Entertainment Machine. Stage was saddened by this production which "played for laughs, with take-offs of musical comedy production numbers and heaven knows what else; pantomime gags with soda water syphons, rubber masks and a bouncing bomb." Also performed later at the Cockpit (date unknown).

Comment: "Shakespeare at the Young Vic means simple staging, energetic performance, and prices teenagers can afford"; unfortunately, it here means an inept "directorial debut by Alfred Lynch" and odd casting (Times). "David Burke and Michael Kitchen were content to play Othello and a slippery Iago for uncomplicated drama and without considering the splendour of the language" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: A series of "set-piece routines ... a show that's often funny, corny and full of unabashed and sometimes embarrassing patriotism," and part of the current wave of wartime nostalgia (Variety). An attempt "to siphon a pint of telly into a gallon pot of theatre [that] ... must be described as the dramaturgy of desperation" (Times). "A sub-standard offering" (Daily Mirror).

Comment: Times faulted the performances of Vivien Merchant and Timothy Dalton. However, Stage appreciated their performances and the direction by James Roose-Evans. Daily Mirror commented the play had "shocked audiences fifty years ago. Now it all seems so tame. Miss Merchant develops the role slowly, but in the final confrontation with her neurotic son (Timothy Dalton) she is majestically in control." The first New York production (Henry Miller's 16/9/25) ran for 157 performances.

516; Stage 16/10/75, 15; Times 9/10/75, 21; Variety 15/10/75, 73. Comment: "An amusing audience show, produced with care and played with style and verve," starring Harry Secombe who gets to sing but is "otherwise a model of restrained hamminess" (Variety). Spectator did not think the piece would "entertain a sharp metropolitan audience" for very long. "The usual story of an ensemble production being invaded by a star" (Times). Illustrated London News opined most people would go to see Secombe and not even think what the play was about.

Comment: MPS 605. English Stage Company. Good in parts but lacking a “sense of inexorable, organic growth that marks out all first-rate drama” (Guardian). Variety wondered what Barker intended in the play, but commended the performances of Michael Hordern and Constance Cummings. Spectator said the play “simmers with intimations of talent” but Barker needed to “conquer his aversion to lucidity.” Tribune thought Barker had finally succeeded in achieving his aims with this play. “Barker often seems more interested in the incidental extravagances of his story than in its meaning” (New Statesman). Times listed several plays from which Barker had borrowed something or other, and said “Chris Parr’s unadventurous direction” failed to reconcile the “comic and dramatic elements.”

Comment: Spectator described the piece as an "excruciatingly sentimentalised episode" involving "the dreary little flirtation of fourteen-year-old Betzi ... and the exiled Bonaparte." Home had chosen "an intractable subject" for his play (Illustrated London News). Guardian called it "a competent piece of story-telling." Variety noted this period drama had the attraction of Herbert Lom. Times wished Home had focused more on the relationship between Napoleon and Betzi.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews 21/10–22/10/75. Tribune called it "an odd play in which Shaw sinks to his silliest ... then tries to switch to a more serious gear, with debatable success." Variety said Clifford Williams had "caught the full lunatic spirit of the play," with Ian McKellen, Judi Dench, and Anna Calder-Marshall leading a fine cast. Spectator wondered why, given its financial difficulties and with so many plays to chose from, the Royal Shakespeare Company chose to revive it. "Even second-rate Shaw is still something special in wit and wisdom" (Daily Mirror). New Statesman credited "good acting" for transforming Shaw's ideas into something listenable. Times (24/10) credited Clifford Williams's production for revealing the play was "superbly wrought, prophetic and wise"; Illustrated London News agreed, adding praise for the cast. There were 96 performances at the Globe.

Comment: A reminder of "when revue was intimate, unbarbed and full of pastel-coloured lyricism ... [possesses] nostalgic charm" (Guardian). "Often pleasant, sometimes feeble and containing a number of songs that would be best appreciated by the tone deaf ... offers little more than nostalgia value" (Daily Mirror). Times declared that Farjeon had "virtually nothing to say."

Comment: New Statesman thought Lindsay Anderson's production was somewhat uneven, but Helen Mirren's Nina "reclaims a major character from theatrical tradition." Times said the production possessed wit and sometimes moved "into the realm of farce." "As well-conceived as any I can remember" (Spectator). "An engrossing production played with sensitivity and finesse" (Variety).

Comment: National Theatre. Previews: 22/10–28/10/75. A careful production, but why did the National bother to revive the play (Guardian). Irish Times (1/11) provided a synopsis of favorable reviews. New Statesman said the production lacked "any strong sense of place, or of community, or even of people." Spectator commended Bill Bryden's "beautifully paced production with a marvellously evocative set by Geoffrey Scott." Times noted the production both held the audience in "rapt silence" and caused very hearty laughter. Variety thought the production lacked "a deeper measure of sadness. Behind all the comic buffonery, there runs a current of loneliness and sexual hunger that doesn't emerge as sufficiently as it might." The production remained in repertory until 23/12/75.

Comment: The piece involved theatre people indulging in theatrical bitchy small talk, with Frank Middlemass as an "understudy to the knighted leading player, an actor of the old school whose whisky-inspired reminiscences of sadness and lost hopes are terminated abruptly by the call to go on in an emergency" (Stage).

75.509 A Man's a Man (C, 11sc) Bertolt Brecht (based on Rudyard Kipling, Barrack-Room Ballads, 1892; adpt Bernard Pomerance [as Man Is Man] of Mann ist Mann, 1926) and Hans Brown (mus). Comment: "Features Leslie Phillips as a Foreign Office man trying to break out of a wearying marital routine" (Spectator). "Little more than a patchwork of randomly amusing wisecracks" (Variety). The play had many jokes, lacked a premise, and benefitted from "Roy Kinnear's cheerful mugging" (Times). Predictable and empty (Illustrated London News). Observer reported "the audience seemed to enjoy it a lot."

Comment: The female impersonator "somewhat palled on me by the time he was into the second hour ... and the dedicated unseemliness of his material may exhaust the patience of the fastidious" (Spectator). "Makes Danny La Rue seem like a Clarence House tea party ... a very high-class camp, and a rare experience (if you like drag)" (Guardian 7/11). "A male actress of wit and sensitivity" (Times). At the time Clarence House was the home of Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother.

Comment: Almost Free. “Played in Stygian darkness, the only visible action is the effect of two small pools of light emanating from spots L1 and L2. These have disembodied voices which discuss their state of health or what one of them describes as ‘dashes of death,’ and even engage in a row” (Stage).

75.530 One White Day (P) Jehane Markham. SOHO POLY 10/11/75 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 13/11/75, 26. Jill Richards, Jennifer Piercey, Jonathan Darvill. Dir Bill Alexander; Dgn Paul Kleiman. Review: Stage 27/11/75, 17. Comment: The play concerned a woman lying in bed from self-induced inertia.

Comment: Stage said the production “is workmanlike in every way but lacks real dramatic excitement and theatrical colouring.”

75.534 Song of Asia (Mus). WESTMINSTER 12/11/75. Review: Stage 20/11/75, 11. Comment: This Moral Re-Armament show was “generously supplied with large dollops of moral uplift in the form of naive sketches as simple as those cartoon story books for people unwilling to read ... All of it is perfectly well-meant and sincere, of course, but the amateurish technique and endless series of pregnant pauses which turn out to be barren, make these sketches irritating to sit through” (Stage).

75.535 The Car Cemetery (D, 2a) Fernando Arrabal (anon trans of Le cimetière des voitures, 1961). Comment: "A freak of a play—Romeo and Juliet re-found in some contemporary, though politically anonymous, country" (Guardian). Observer opined Edgar was trying to draw parallels with the situation in Ulster. "Here is David Edgar attacking Romeo and Juliet, of all plays, as a counter-revolutionary tract with 'a finish tragic, comfortable and neat'" (New Statesman).

Comment: MPS 606. English Stage Company. "A powerful, cheerless play with a great performance by Tom Courtenay as John Clare, the 19th century poet" (Daily Mirror). "Fails to develop a dimensionally arresting portrait of the poet, but is more successful in depicting his times" (Variety). Spectator noted the same dichotomy, adding there were two plays "concurrently in progress." Illustrated London News described the two plays: "The first half is less a study of Clare than an incident among the hunger-rioting peasants of the East Midlands during the Regency. The second half, years ahead, is in effect the madness without the vision." Observer praised Bond's writing for its "matchless stage presence," but said "the play halts: nothing binds it." "I have no clear impression of what the play is saying" (Times).

Comment: MPS 628. Prospect Theatre Company. "Witty, observant, compassionate, cleverly but simply staged, and dazzlingly played (Variety). New Statesman compared the production less favorably with Prospect's A Month in the Country, but noted noone in the audience walked out (75.548). Spectator commended the adaptation for capturing "much of the atmosphere of the book." Times complained "by eliminating the Fiesole scene ... the adapters have cut the pagan heart out of it."

three-hour long production inaudible and incomprehensible. "Intensely, often embarrassingly intellectual, the 'literary and artistic life,' as seen in the Journal, now forms the material of a most curious entertainment. It is a prolonged stream-of-consciousness exercise that uses speech, dancing, films, song, music, even a bit of radio and television" (Birmingham Post).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews: 2/12–3/12/75. "A previous pastiche that topples over into camp" that also falls short "as a jolly seasonal send-up" (Guardian). Illustrated London News remarked on the lack of fun in the piece. "I had expected something rather better from Graham Greene" (Spectator). Variety said the play was a disappointment but the production "is appealing to the eye and adroitly performed." "Some hesitant playing, slow pace and uneven direction blunt its farcical impact, particularly in the early scenes" (Daily Mirror). A "ramshackle piece" lacking a defining style (Times).

Comment: National Theatre. Previews 4/12–9/12/75. The Lyttelton opened on 16/3/76, the first of the three National Theatres on the South Bank. The play was performed uncut and ran about four hours including the interval (20 minutes). Guardian declared the production was “a totally satisfying blend of actor [Albert Finney] and concept [Peter Hall]”; Finney played Hamlet as Renaissance student “whose passion is constantly at odds with the ‘sovereignty of reason.’” For Observer Finney’s “success is one of presence and stagecraft, rather than of acute definition.” New Statesman was split between two critical views of Finney’s performance: “that it is exaggeratedly extraverted and monotonously spoken; ... that it has size and passion.” Illustrated London News thought Finney was unsuited to Hamlet and the production was uneven. Spectator called it “This star-bright but tediously inadequate production,” with only the gravediggers as “the most agreeable personations.” “I can recall few productions less coloured by a directorial viewpoint” (Times). The production performed in repertory at the Old Vic until 28/2/76; the Lyttelton transfer remained in repertory until 15/1/77.

Comment: A restaging of Sean Kenny's 1968 production but with a new book and music. Guardian regretted the original had been turned into “an updated pantomime full of camperie, topical allusions and off-beat jokes.” Despite mentioning some faults in the production, Times still thought it offered very good value.

Comment: Guardian thought this production came “a lot closer to the heart of this bizarre play” than the National’s in 1971 (71.34) because Tim Fywell “makes no attempt to disguise the erotic nature of the relationship between the two men.” Times said it was pointless to stage the play “under the puritan conditions of the Vic studio, which belittle a Bosch-like fantasy into a sex-kit romp.”

75.607 The Dream of the Ridiculous Man (based on Fyodor M. Dostoyevsky’s short story, 1877). ICA 16/12/75. 1st perfd 1975 (touring). Roderic Leigh, Emil Wolk. Dir Pip Simmons; Mus Chris Jordan. Reviews: Observer 21/12/75, 22; Stage 31/12/75, 7. Comment: Pip Simmons Theatre Company. The plot involved the dreams and nightmares of a man intending to commit suicide. “A theatrical experience, but also one which goes deeper, and that depth is what finds me at a loss for the right words” (Stage).

Comment: The sub-title of the piece was “The Vincent Crummles Company in an Extraordinary Dress Rehearsal of the Musical Melodrama of Nicholas Nickleby.” “As melodrama it’s unmoving, as comedy it’s unfunny, as a musical it’s painful, and as Pirandello it isn’t” (Observer). Times agreed.

75.635 Psyche (P) Julia McLean. ICA 30/12/75. Review: Stage 15/1/76, 11.

75.636a The Everest Hotel (P, 1a) Snoo Wilson. BUSH 31/12/75.* Cast: Stage 31/12/75, 13. Emma Williams, Anna Mottram, Janet Chappell. Plot: Demastes/2. Reviews: Guardian 2/1/76, 10; Observer 4/1/76, 18; Spectator 10/1/76, 19–20; Stage 15/1/76, 9; Times 3/1/76, 9. Comment: Scarab Theatre. This “free-wheeling fanstasy” involved “three ex-Woolworth’s counter girls [who] have become world famous as a trio of singing nuns and are going to broadcast from the top of Everest”; “the final effect is one of random whimsy” (Guardian).

“An incoherent mish-mash of half-baked religious and revolutionary satire” (Spectator). Times averred whatever the play entailed the important thing was that it was “projected through the imagination of three Liverpool girls.”

75.636b The Sleeping Quarters of Sophia (P) David Gale. BUSH 31/12/75. Gil Brailey, Eiji Kusuhara, Diana Patrick, Nicole Penn-Symons, Linda Spurrier, David Gale. Dir Hilary Westlake; Light Stephen Whitson; Sound Mike Figgis; Cost dgn Rose English.

Review: Spectator 10/1/76, 19–20; Times 3/1/76, 9. Comment: Lumiere & Son. Spectator wondered whether the piece was “an obscure send-up of psychological drama, or as a parody of something I hadn’t seen.” Times was equally clueless about what it had seen.

75.637 On the Spot (P, 3a) Edgar Wallace. QUESTORS 31/12/75. 1st perfd Wyndham’s 2/4/30. Reviews: Acton Gazette 15/1/76, 15; Middlesex County Times 9/1/76, 14.

76.1 Soaking up the Heat (P) Hanif Kureishi. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 1976.* Comment: Apparently a Sunday night performance? Possibly a reading.

76.2a The Dream of Geronimus Bosch (T, 1a) Tudor Gates. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 1/1/76.  Review: Stage 15/1/76, 9.

76.2b Matrimony Limited (F) Tudor Gates. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 1/1/76. 1st perf? Review: Stage 15/1/76, 9.

76.3 The Mikado; or, The Town of Titipu (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 1/1/76. Plot: Ayre, Bordman, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

76.4 Barnstable (P) James Saunders. MAXIMUS 5/1/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 31/12/75, 13. Dr. Carboys William Squire; Lorna Heilbron, Graham Lines, Angela Rooks, Patricia Trueman. Dir Tristan de Vera Cole; Dgn Tanya McCallin; Sm Michael Troughton. Plot: Walford. Reviews: Stage 22/1/76, 17; Times 6/1/76, 5. Comment: Times said the "art-deco environment of the Maximus Arena" was a perfect setting for the piece.

76.5 The Browning Version (D, 1a) Terence Rattigan. KING'S HEAD 8/1/76. Cast: Stage 8/1/76, 1; WWT/17. Andrew Crocker-Harris Nigel Stock; Millie Crocker-Harris Barbara Jefford; John Taplow Stephen Galloway; Frank Hunter Peter Baldwin; Dr. Frobisher Lindsay Campbell; Peter Gilbert Simon Jones; Mrs. Gilbert Briony McRoberts. Dir Stewart Trotter; Dgn John Scully, Geoff Stevens; Light Les Johnson; Cost dgn Maggi Smith. Plot: Bordman/4, 284, Demastes/1, Fletcher, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, 258, Matlaw, Patterson, Rusinko, 62–69, Shank, Vinson, Walford, Weintraub.

Reviews: Spectator 17/1/76, 20; Stage 15/1/76, 9; Times 10/1/76, 9. Comment: Played with Carol's Christmas (75.614). From 21/2/76 the play was accompanied by Rattigan's adaptation of his television play, Duologue (Rosemary Hodge Barbara Jefford), which was an adaptation of his All on Her Own (1st perfd BBC-2 TV 25/9/68).

76.6 The Hot L Baltimore (P) Lanford Wilson. TOWER, CANONBURY, 9/1/76. 1st perfd Circle Repertory, New York, 4/2/73; 1st British perf. Cast: TTC. Plot: Bordman, Bronner, Bryer, Hischak/2, 58–59, Hochman, MacNicholas, Nelson/2, Salem, Vinson. Reviews: Spectator 17/1/76, 19–20; Stage 22/1/76, 20; Times 12/1/76, 15. Comment: "The situation [in the play] is sentimental and synthetic" (Spectator). Times commended the company for its ability to stage successfully "new, large-cast pieces that the commercial theatre can no longer afford." The New York production ran for 1,166 performances.

76.7a The Demolition Downtown (P, 1a) Tennessee Williams. CARNABY STREET THEATRE 12/1/76 (Ln and eve).* Cast: Stage 31/12/75, 13. Plot: Heintzelman, MacNicholas. Reviews: Guardian 13/1/76, 10; Times 13/1/76, 17. Comment: Anglo-American Studio 68. "All the play really expresses is an apolitical horror of social change and a morbid fear of the young" (Guardian). Times said the production failed to provide the necessary "strong contrast between shadowy squalor and shiny affluence" between the two plays.

76.7b The Lady of Larkspur Lotion (P, 1a) Tennessee Williams. CARNABY STREET THEATRE 12/1/76 (Ln and eve). Plot: Heintzelman, Hochman, MacNicholas. Reviews: Guardian 13/1/76, 10; Times 13/1/76, 17. Comment: Anglo-American Studio 68. Guardian declared "This is the Williams I would like to remember," not Demolition Downtown.

76.8 The Naked Luncheon (P) Patrick Williams. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 12/1/76.* Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 10. Elliott Cooper, Janis Winters, Ralph Henry. Dir Kross Leigh. Review: Stage 22/1/76, 17. Comment: "A stale lump of theatrical stodge ... about a young man playing at playing at being a waiter" (Stage).

76.9 The Bite (P) Alfio Bernabei. ICA 14/1/76 (Ln). 1st perfd Edinburgh 1975. Comment: The Bite Group. The play was about Chile.

76.10 The Great Ban (P) Michael Wells. ALMOST FREE 14/1/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 10. Keats Adam Bareham; Susannah York, Sylvester Morand, Michael Poole, Tom Dupré. Dir Jack Emery. Reviews: Guardian 16/1/76, 13; Stage 22/1/76, 20; Times 14/1/76, 9. Comment: The play was about a "show business marriage on the rocks" (Observer 11/1/76, 20). Times panned this "genuine hand-crafted literary stinker" and noted Susannah York, "frequently left in sole command of the acting area," was Michael Wells's wife.

76.11 Plunder (F, 3a) Ben Travers. OLD VIC 14/1/76; trfd to LYTTTELTON 19/3/76. 1st perfd King's, Southsea, 18/6/28. Cast: NTA; Stage 18/12/75, 3; Theatricalia; Variety 21/1/76, 108; WWT/17. Oswald Veal Trevor Ray; Prudence Malone Diana Quick/Barbara Flynn/Penelope Wilton; Mrs. Hewlett Dandy Nichols/Peggy Mount; Simon Veal Paul Dawkins/Basil Henson; Freddy Malone Frank Finlay/John Standing; Mabel Catherine Harding; Joan Hewlett Polly Adams/Gil Brailey; D'Arcy Tuck Dinsdale Landen; Sir George Chudleigh Michael Beint/Anthony Higginson/Glenn Williams; Lady Chudleigh Brenda Kaye/Kate Beswick/Shirley Dixon; Harry Kenward Michael Keating/Robert Ralph; Ruth Bennett Carol Frazer/Patricia Doyle/Kristin Milward; Footman Ray Edwards/Tom Durham/Andrew Tourell; William Desmond Adams/Andrew Tourell/Timothy Earle; Buckley Michael Stroud/Tom Durham; Mrs. Orlock Barbara Keogh/Diana Payan; Chief Constable Grierson Daniel Thorndike/Robert Howard; Chief Detective Inspector Sibley Derek Newark/Terence Rigby; Police Constable Davis Andrew Hilton/Andrew Tourell/Timothy Earle; Detective Sergeant Marchant Glyn Grain/Steven Crossley; Detective Sergeant Bryant Patrick Monckton/Kit Thacker; Plain Clothes Detective Peter Rocca; Cook Rose Power; Maids Brenda Blethyn, Nora Connolly, Jeananne Crowley, Rynagh O Grady. Dir Michael Blakemore; Dgn Michael Annals; Light Leonard Tucker; Staff dir Sebastian Graham-Jones; Pd mgr Marshall Goodhew; Sm John Rothenberg; Dsm Elizabeth Markham; Asm Angela Bissett, Jeremy Gadd, Ernest Hall; Sound Susanna Ayliff. Plot: Bull/1, Loney. Reviews: Daily Mirror 15/1/76, 16; Guardian 15/1/75, 10;

Illustrated London News 1/3/76, 65; Observer 18/1/76, 25, 29; Spectator 24/1/76, 26; Stage 22/1/76, 17, 18/3/76, 9; Times 15/1/76, 8; Variety 21/1/76, 108. Comment: National Theatre. Previews 8/1–13/1/76 at the Old Vic; a charity preview was given at the Lyttelton on 15/3/76. Guardian thought the cast had not quite captured the farcical style adequately, a view held also by Observer and Variety. Daily Mirror agreed the opening act was very slow despite Dandy Nichols' best efforts; however, it did pick up thereafter. Times said this "funny, honest and beautifully constructed" work an object lesson in farce at its very best; Illustrated London News agreed, adding praise for the cast. The production remained in repertory at the Old Vic until 10/2/76; the production remained in repertory at the Lyttelton until 20/1/79 (see also 78.327 which was regarded by the Press as a revival and reviewed as such).

76.12 The Ik (Documentary D, 1a) Denis Cannan and Colin Higgins (based on Colin Turnbull, The Mountain People, 1972). ROUND HOUSE 15/1/76. 52 perf. 1st perfd Bouffes du nord, Paris, 12/1/75 as Les Iks; 1st British perf. Cast: RSCA; Stage 15/2/76, 1; Theatricalia; Variety 28/1/76, 73; WWT/17. The Ik Malick Bagayogo, Michele Collison, Miriam Goldschmidt, Bruce Myers, Katsuhiko Oida; Colin Turnbull Andreas Katsulas; Young Catechists, Children Philip Calender, Hubert Clarke, Davidson Knight, Kelvin Omarde, Adrian Phillips. Dir Peter Brook; Dgn George Wakhevitch, Jeanne Wakhevitch; Tech adviser Joseph Towles. Plot: Hischak/2, 169, Salem. Reviews: Birmingham Post 16/1/76, 2; Guardian 16/1/76, 10; Illustrated London News 1/3/76, 65; Observer 18/1/76, 29; Spectator 24/1/76, 26; Stage 22/1/76, 17; Times 16/1/76, 11; Tribune 13/2/76, 8–9; Variety 28/1/76, 73. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Variety reported that, because Peter Brook was the director, this production was attracting "near-capacity business." "Strikes just the right note of cool, lean objectivity" (Guardian). Observer said Brook "makes voyeurs of us; as theatre always does." Spectator noted the house lights were kept full on during the performance: "It could be that [Brook] wants that contrast between the chic background [audience members] and the stage portrayal of the distressed tribes-people." Moreover, Spectator said, "Brook takes an oddly selective view of realism." Times summed up the production, and its purpose, as "a study of total human degradation rehearsed in conditions of subsidized security and now imported from Paris as the intellectual treat of the month." The production closed on 28/2/76. The first New York production was at La Mama 1/5/80.

76.13 Ruddigore; or, The Witch's Curse (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS

15/1/76. Plot: Ayre, Gänzl, Hochman, Shipley.
Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

76.14 Clownmaker (P) Richard Crane. NEW END 16/1/76. 1st perfd Lauriston Hall, Edinburgh, 21/8/75. Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 1; WWT/17. Diaghilev Edgar Wreford; Nijinsky Tony Meyer. Dir Faynia Williams; Ch Stuart Hopps. Reviews: Gay News 29/1/76, 24; Observer 25/1/76, 28; Stage 29/1/76, 17; Times 17/1/76, 9. Comment: About Diaghilev and Nijinsky. Gay News thought the "public events are vivid enough" in the play, "it's the private ones that don't seem to live." "This piece feels like the sketch for something more decisive" (Observer). "Much closer to fairy tale than to documentary" (Times).

76.15 A Slight Accident (P, 1a) James Saunders. ORANGE TREE 16/1/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 10. Penelope Auriol Smith; Roger Robert McBain; Camilla Ann Curthoys. Dir Robert Gillespie. Plot: Walford. Review: Times 19/1/76, 11. Comment: Richmond Fringe. An adequate revival that tended to emphasize the piece's flippancy.

76.16 Ulysses, A Voyage of the Imagination (P for children) Rod Lewis. ARTS 18/1/76.* 1 perf. Lizza Aiken, Anita Dobson, Caroline Hunt, Duncan Faber, Alistair Fullerton, Jona Jones, Rod Lewis, Ken Shorter, Tom Vernon, David Wehner. Review: Stage 5/2/76, 24. Comment: Unicorn Theatre. "An interesting reworking which takes the dual (if not downright split) personality of the central character and gives it to two actors, one playing the bombastic braggard who deserves the troubles which befall him after the fall of Troy; the other representing the wily priest-king who uses brain to succeed where muscle fails" (Stage).

76.17a Bee Wine (C) Henry Livings. MAXIMUS 19/1/76 (Ln). 1st perfd Repertory, Birmingham, 1970. Cast: Stage 22/1/76, 20. Review: Stage 5/2/76, 17. Comment: The company for the double-bill comprised Roger Sloman, Geoffrey Lander, Lesley Duff. Dir Philip Hedley. A double-bill of Pongo plays: "They are all set in Victorian times, using the same four North Country characters, and are an English equivalent of those Nyogen comic interludes, which separate the serious Japanese Noh plays in performance" (Stage).

76.17b The Ink Smeared Lady (P) Henry Livings. MAXIMUS 19/1/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 22/1/76, 20. Review: Stage 5/2/76, 17.

Comment: Guardian said the piece comprised "spot-on musical parodies" and poor "woozy verbals." Times commended the cast's precise teamwork. Illustrated London News said the piece was unmemorable and too loud.

76.19 Fangs That Go Munch in the Night (P for children) Lee Pressman. COCKPIT 19/1/76.* Dracula David Marquis; W.P.C. Bigboty Di Thrower; Maggie Karen Coulthard; Paul Ratledge, Liz Wootten, Chris Collett, Neil White, Marina Mizarolli. Dir Janet Mokades; Cost dgn Jane Baunton. Review: Stage 5/2/76, 17. Comment: Ken O'Meat Kids Kompany. "In which Count Dracula meets the Scratchit family" (Stage).

76.20 Judgement (One-man P) Barry Collins. COURT 19/1/76. Cast: Findlater. Captain Andrei Vukhov Colin Blakely. Dir Peter Hall. Plot: Griffiths, Vinson. Reviews: Irish Times 6/2/76, 8; Spectator 24/1/76, 26; Stage 29/1/76, 17; Tribune 30/1/76, 7. Comment: English Stage Company. Spectator said both the piece and the performance were "impressive."

76.21 The Hard Stool (P) Tony Haygarth. BUSH 20/1/76.* Priest Terry Palmer; Rob Walker. Dir Henry Woolf. Review: Stage 29/1/76, 17. Comment: The piece involved a priest and a blasphemous penitent, but failed to fulfill its potential (Stage). Preceded by a poorly executed puppet show, Operation Wordsworth.

76.22 Henry V (Hist P) William Shakespeare. ALDWYCH 20/1/76. Cast: RSCA; Theatricalia; *WWT/17. Reviews: Birmingham Post 21/1/76, 2; Guardian 21/1/76, 8; Observer 25/1/76, 28; Spectator 7/2/76, 18–19; Stage 29/1/76, 17; Times 21/1/76, 19. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews 16/1–19/1/74. Spectator noted the production was being staged as a trilogy with the two Henry IV plays (76.38, 76.39), and wondered why Henry V was being staged first. Guardian thought Terry Hands's production made the play "a tragicomic pageant rather than a chauvinistic assertion of English valour," with a "memorable" performance by Alan Howard.

76.23 My Name Is Rosa Luxemburg (P) Marianne Auricoste (trans Pam Gems). SOHO POLY 20/1/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 10. Narrator Mary McCusker; Rosa Luxemburg Ann Mitchell; Singer Maggie Nicols. Dir Sue Todd. Review: Times 21/1/76, 19. Comment: The production struck Times as a flat lecture based on Luxemburg's letters and pamphlets.

76.24 Wood Painting (P) Ingmar Bergman (trans Anna Christie and Meurling Proud and Frederick Proud of Trämålning, 1955). YOUNG VIC 20/1/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 10. John Turner, Ron Pember, Maureen O'Brien. Dir Frederick Proud. Reviews: Guardian 21/1/76, 8; Stage 5/2/76, 17; Times 30/1/76, 13. Comment: In-Sight. Stage noted "this is the morality play which formed the basis of the controversial film The Seventh Seal, yet in this Insight production ... it has a vivid life of its own in the theatre."

76.25 I Do! I Do! (MC, 2a) Tom Jones (bk, lyr; based on Jan de Hartog, The Fourposter, 1951) and Harvey Schmidt (mus). PHOENIX 21/1/76. 61 perf. Comment: Variety noted the production was a star vehicle for Rock Hudson and Juliet Prowse and "should have little trouble luring its intended audience." The adaptation was "something mealy-mouthed beyond belief" (Times).

Comment: Dolphin Theatre Company. Observer thought the revival was "worth the hearing, but not necessarily worth the watching." Times was glad of the revival but thought the central role needed a stronger performance than it received from John Shrapnel.

76.33 Isabel and the Matador (C) Ian R. Buckley. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 27/1/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 22/1/76, 20. Harold Clive Flint; Isabel Patricia Leach; Edmund Kente. Review: Stage 26/2/76, 13. Comment: The plot involved a bank manager dressing up as a matador and actually killing muscular young men acting as the bull.

76.34 Jattehemligt-Top Secret (P for children) Anon (based on Barbro Lindgren's dramatised diary, 1971). LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 27/1/76. Review: Stage 19/2/76, 12. Comment: Sammelsurium Theatre Group (Nacka, Stockholm). This melancholic Swedish piece was performed in Swedish with a running commentary in English to explain the action.

Reviews: Observer 1/2/76, 26; Spectator 7/2/76, 19; Stage 5/2/76, 17; Times 28/1/76, 9. Comment: MPS 1061. Comment: "Misogyny run absurdly amok" (Spectator). "A piece of revenge writing: obsessive garrulity and venomous indifference to understanding," but strong acting from Merchant, Chapman, Hooper, and Knight (Times).

76.36 Miss (P) Martin Stellman. COCKPIT 27/1/76. 1st perf? Liz Standish Denise Armon; Julie Hudspeth, Abi Gouhad, Ian Bamforth. Dir Chattie Salaman; Dgn Andrew McAlpine. Review: Stage 5/2/76, 24. Comment: Common Stock. The result of interviews with teachers, the play concerned "a young teacher in a large comprehensive school who in one day comes to breaking point between the obstinacy of her colleagues and the obtuseness of her pupils" (Stage).

76.37 England Expects (P) Gavin Richards. HALFMOON c. 29/1/76. Review: Times 30/1/76, 13. Comment: Belt and Braces. The cast was drawn from the following performers: Jeni Barnett, Jim Bywater, Terry Canning, John Fiske, Jan Hardistey, Paul Hellyer, Paul Kessel, Gavin Richards, David Simcock, Derek Thompson A committed left-wing piece that "takes on wage control, inflation and the decline of capitalism," among much else (Times).

Terry Hands “has laid the plays out beautifully, in stunningly economical sets by Farrah” (Observer). “Part I is all brisk fun and brisk heroism. Part II, both politically and comically, repeats the material in a minor key” (Times). Birmingham Post singled out “the performances of Hal, graceful in manner, electrically quick in apprehension: and of Falstaff who has developed through the years into the knight himself, no sodden hulk but a man of the most enchanting readiness.”

Comment: Chaos Productions. “Inno Sorsy and Charlotte Trench totter around the steep set for Clownmaker [76.14] in cutaway showgirl costumes and hideously clumsy platform shoes. They sing to taped music from time to time, step out a little, smoke a lot” (Stage).

76.41 The Other Side of the Swamp (C, 2a) Royce Ryton. THREE HORSESHOES 30/1/76.* Cast: Stage 15/1/76, 10. Terry Adrian King; Leslie Paul Jerricho. Dir Royce Ryton. Review: Stage 12/2/76, 20. Comment: Pen-tameters. The comedy explored the uneasy relationship between two gay actors, with very good performances (Stage).

Comment: A “couple of dozen sub-Footlights sketches” (Gay News). “Very clever” but need to sing more (Observer). Guardian reported this was an expanded version of earlier productions but added that compared to American revue it had become “whimsical and enclosed.” Too many of the sketches were “aimless” and uninventive (Times).

76.47 The Lady or the Tiger (MC, 2a) Jeremy Paul (bk; based on Frank Stockton’s short story, 1882) and Michael Richmond (bk) and Nola York (mus). Comment: Guardian said this musical’s “only virtue is the music; the rest is over-sweet to the point of distraction.” “A bland fable about moral choice. The book is light hokum and the musical numbers veer to corny simple rhymes” (Variety). “In the pubby atmosphere [of the Orange Tree] it must have seemed polished, almost sophisticated entertainment. And after a few drinks, I bet most of the regulars thought it was good as most of that stuff in the West End. I’m afraid it is not. ... I hate to knock it, for it’s as eager to please as a puppy, but I can’t see it catching on” (Daily Mirror). Times approved of the piece: “It takes you back to the heyday of Julian Slade.”

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Buzz Goodbody’s four-hour long modern-dress production, previously performed at the Other Place, Stratford. “Ben Kingsley in the title role invests it with a chilling alternation of rigid control and loose-limbed despair” (Stage). Times commented favorably and extensively on the effects of the staging at the Round House. Illustrated London News remarked on the excessive use of the aisles for entrances and exits.

Reviews: Guardian 3/2/76, 8, 5/2/76, 8; Stage 12/2/76, 19; Times 5/2/76, 9. Comment: Theatre Workshop. “A fragile, occasional chronicle” of the West Country hanging judge (Guardian). “A disjointed, ill considered attempt to bring together the diverse elements of early English capitalism in a demonstration of their mutual interaction and effect upon a nascent proletariat” (Times).

76.50 Pleasant Company Excepted (P) Paul Dorrell. LAMB AND FLAG 5/2/76.* Cast: Stage 5/2/76, 19. Ronald Alexander, Terence Nolan, Irving Lycett. Pd Cacropia Company Dir Stephen Parkins. Comment: LAMP.

Comment: MPS 607. English Stage Company. Guardian (6/2) was dismayed Hampton had returned “to the world of hermetic middle-class relationships and small civilised ironies.” Spectator (14/2) called it a “bleak and vacant torment” in which the cast “do as well as might be expected with their tedious assignments, which on the whole is badly.” “It’s a play with little action and a good deal of barbed, witty dialogue. But it does have moments when nothing at all is said” (Daily Mirror). Variety described it as “a thin piece” with dim commercial prospects. Times was amazed Hampton had chosen such an “insignificant theme and brought so little skill to working it out.” There were 77 performances at the May Fair.

76.52 Filthy Fryer and the Woman of Maturer Years (P) Andrew Davies. ORANGE TREE 6/2/76. Comment: Richmond Fringe.

76.53 The Oh One Show (One-man ent) Michael Maynard. WAREHOUSE (2) 6/2/76.* Michael Maynard. Review: Stage 26/2/76, 40. Comment: “A bewildering mixture of the serious and the farcical, music and words, stage trickery and utter simplicity” (Stage).

76.54 Catherine (P) Antoine Vitez (adpt of Louis Aragon, Les cloches de Bâle, 1934). INSTITUT FRANÇAIS 9/2/76. Review: Times 10/2/76, 13. Comment: Théâtre Ouvert. Times described and questioned the staging of the piece which consisted of diners reading out excerpts from Aragon’s novel during the course of eating a meal lasting two hours.

76.55 A Celebration of Finnegans Wake (P) John Quinn (deviser). SUGAWN 9/2/76.* Narrator John Quinn; James Joyce John Blanchard; Treasa Ni Fhatharta, Peggie McCarthy. Reviews: Irish Times 26/2/76, 8; Stage 26/2/76, 9. Comment: “John Blanchard achieves a remarkable likeness [as Joyce] that helps to create the atmosphere in which so extraordinary a work had its genesis” (Stage). Irish Times, which was able only to read to play, said it was “full of sympathy for Joyce and all his torments while writing Finnegans Wake, his own near-blindness, his daughter’s madness, the desertion of friends, the loneliness.”

76.56 Godspell (Mus, 2a) John Michael Tebelak (bk) and Stephen Schwartz (mus, lyr). WIMBLEDON 9/2/76. Plot: Bordman, Bordman/5, 673, Fletcher, Gänzl, Green, Hirschak, Kennedy, OTF, Shipley, Wilmeth.

76.57 It’s Not Funny (One-man show) Alex [or A. S.] Robertson. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/2/76.* Adrian James. Dir Alex Robertson. Review: Stage 26/2/76, 40. Comment: “He didn’t know what normality was but he spent all his life trying to achieve it” (adv’t); five sketches designed to “show how close are farce and tragedy to each other” (Stage).

76.58 Purity (P) David Mowat. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/2/76 (Ln). 1st perf’d Stables, Manchester, 4/4/69. Cast: Stage 5/2/76, 19. Lorna Rachel Herbert; Richard Gale, Graham Seed, Gay Wilde. Dir Stuart Kerr; Dgn Beth Millward. Review: Stage 26/2/76, 13. Comment: The plot involved a sort of censorship office and various sexual relationships, some of which are frustrated or unfulfilled.

76.59 Sleuth (Thriller, 2a) Anthony Shaffer. RICHMOND 9/2/76. Richard Todd, Peter Byrne. Dir Jan Butlin. Plot: Bordman, Fletcher, Hirschak, Hirschak/2, 22–23, Law, Loney, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub. Comment: A one-week engagement.

76.60 As You Like It (C) William Shakespeare. Comment: The indeterminate setting and the Victorian costumes together with Alfred Lynch’s “tricked out” but serious direction left Times wondering what it was all about. Stage declared the only good thing was Denise Coffey’s Audrey; the remainder of the acting was appalling, there was a “mish-mash of styles,” and a lack of direction. Illustrated London News noted there were some “odd performances.”

76.61 Johnny Boxer (P) Phil Woods. HALF MOON 10/2/76. 1st perf’d Phoenix, Leicester, 30/10/75. Cast: SHM; WWT/17. Johnny Boxer Billy Colvill; Max Alan Devlin; Den John Mulcahy; Clancy Gabriel Connaughton; Dr. Ayreton Shane Connaughton; Carter Graham Gluck; Teddy Shay Gorman, Marie Carol Harrison; Manda Penny Darch. Gen mgr Micheline Brina; Dir Pam Brighton; Dgn Peter Ling; Cost dgn Miranda Melville; Mus dir Terence Dougherty; Light Charles Paton; Pd mgr Gean Wilton; Sm John Hildrick. Reviews: Guardian 11/2/76, 10; Times 11/2/76, 10; Tribune 27/2/76, 6–7.

Comment: Tribune thought the piece was lacking “the East End locale and thirties’ context” to vivify this story about a boxer. Guardian described Pam Brighton’s direction as “lumbering,” and some performances as shaky. Times said what happens was a foregone conclusion; the play failed at explaining how it came about.

76.62 Anatol (Play cycle) Arthur Schnitzler (adpt Frank Marcus of Die Frage an das Schicksal, 1893). OPEN SPACE 11/2/76. 1st perf this adpt. Cast: WWT/17. Anatol Derek Godfrey; Max Nicholas Selby; Six Women Prunella Scales. Dir Charles Marowitz; Dgn Robin Don; Cost dgn Susan Thompson. Comment: MPS 833. Observer said Frank Marcus’s version was “lively,” and the two main characters were well acted by Prunella Scales and Derek Godfrey. Times observed that in the production “Anatol is an anachronistic absurdity, paraded simply for fun.”

76.63 It’s a Clean Well Lighted Place (P) Joel Shatzky. ICA 11/2/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 12/2/76, 12. Hessel Saks, Hilary Gasson, Gay Rose, Christopher Muncke, Allan Hendrick, Christopher Whitehouse. Dir Antonia Bird; Dgn David Scull; Sm Michelle Braidman. Review: Stage 4/3/76, 17. Comment: A not very observant piece set in a London café occupied by “an assorted half-dozen types, each with some kind of chip on their shoulder” (Stage).

Dir Robert Walker; Dgn Jane Ripley. Reviews: Stage 4/3/76, 11; Times 19/2/76, 13. Comment: Temba. The play was about "a West Indian family's problems of adjusting to English society," a problem Times readily admitted but was forced to note the play's "naïvely hack dialogue" and thin plot.

76.79 Tsafendas (P) William Tanner. Dir Tessa Marwick. Reviews: Guardian 19/2/76, 10; Stage 11/3/76, 19; Times 19/2/76, 13. Comment: Ambiance. "A straight, sober, factually-based study of the man who stabbed [the South African Prime Minister] Dr. Verwoerd in the House of Assembly in 1968" (Guardian). Times said the story needed developing in order to show why, apart from being mad, Tsafendas acted as he did.

76.80 Elizabeth the First (One-woman show) Cavada Humphrey. KING'S HEAD 19/2/76. 1st perf? Cast: Stage 19/2/76, 19. Cavada Humphrey. Dir Herbert Machiz. Review: Stage 4/3/76, 11. Comment: Stage "was conscious of the Elizabeth of historical fiction and of film-scripts rather than of fact, although Miss Humphrey speaks with authority and has some ingenious effects." Also performed as Henry's Daughter (76.501).

76.81 The Gondoliers; or, The King of Barataria (CO, 2a) W. S. Gilbert (lib) and Arthur Sullivan (mus). SADLER'S WELLS 19/2/76. Plot: Ayre, Fletcher, Gänzl, Hochman, Law, Salem, Shipley, Sobel. Comment: D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

Comment: Guardian, unconvinced by the play's chauvinistic stance and lack of real characterization, said it was boring despite good acting. Daily Mirror noted the over-use of four letter words. "Generally, and in spite of the playing, it all proved to be as exhilarating as a wet afternoon by a rubbish dump" (Illustrated London News). "Ought to go down well with women's lib types" (Variety). Tribune found the play "a refreshing and amusing antidote to the typical stage image of women as sycophantic role-objects." A "spellbinding piece ... an electrifying event, with stunning performances from Judy Cornwell and Anne Dyson" (Times).

76.83 How the Other Half Loves (C, 2a) Alan Ayckbourn. TOWER, CANONBURY, 20/2/76. Cast: TTC. Plot: Demastes/2, Dorney, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hischak/2, 31–32, Law, Loney, Vinson, Weintraub.

Reviews: Stage 19/2/76, 10, 11/3/76, 17; Times 24/2/76, 11. Comment: A "cheerful" resetting of the Nativity story around a teenage couple and their baby (Times). "It seems that David Wood ... has aimed his book and lyrics at the eight-to-twelve age range. While perhaps the Tony Hatch and Jackie Trent music is pop with too strong a fizz for the pre-teens. The show is very televisual in appearance" (Stage).

The play examined "the brutality of achievement set against the banality of human affection" (Times).

76.88 Mister X (P) Drew Griffiths and Roger Baker (based on Andrew Hodges and David Hutte, With Downcast Gays: Aspects of Homosexual Self-Oppression, 1974). ICA 24/2/76 (Ln). 1st perfd CHE Conference, Sheffield, 23/8/75. Mister X Alan Pope; Drew Griffiths, Grant McDonald, Philip Howells. Plot: Griffiths. Reviews: Gay News 11/3/76, 22; Stage 11/3/76, 19; Tribune 12/3/76, 7. Comment: Gay Sweatshop. "Shows, with unflinching eye, the way we are and what we could be if more of us came out" (Gay News). "What was curious was that everything shown to be anti-gay seemed also to be anti-feminist" (Tribune).

76.89 Smile for Jesus and the Cameraman (P) Roy Kift. ICA 24/2/76. Cast: WWT/17. Anthony Ian Jentle; Mary Frankie Cosgrave; Jonathan Christopher Ettridge; Stella Paola Dionisotti. Dir Penny Cherns. Reviews: Financial Times 26/2/76, 3; Times 25/2/76, 12; Tribune 12/3/76, 7. Comment: Pro Creation Company. Financial Times said the play was about "the emotional hang-ups of an unintelligent ex-public school boy and his journey to suicide in an unsympathetic, fantasised world." "Muddled, irredeemably banal and anti-feminist" (Tribune). Times saw the play as being about "dying capitalism and dying Church," with the working class taking over.

76.90 Watch It Come Down (D, 2a) John Osborne. Comment: MPS 646. National Theatre. Previews 18/2–23/2/76. Variety described the play as "rambling melodramatic symbolism in which teeming ideas and passion somehow got out of the author's control. It doesn't just teeter on the brink of farce but slides over embarrassingly." Illustrated London News panned the play but not the cast. Observer said the play's faults were "manifest and manifold," yet ultimately "it somehow manages to impose itself as truth." Because of the insubstantial characterization, Spectator declared the piece "one long, rampaging metaphor for our doomed civilisation." "Another attempt to re-write Heartbreak House" (Guardian). Times said it was a familiar Osborne piece with the characters all speaking in the same way: "There are two prevailing idioms: invective and gush.” “The characters carry little conviction and are little more than messengers delivering Osborne’s well-known warnings on the subject of Britain’s short-comings” (Daily Mirror). The production closed 26/2/76 at the Old Vic; the transfer at the Lyttelton remained in repertory until 7/9/76 for 29 performances.

Comment: Spectator averred only a Henry Irving "could move an audience in this melodramatic hogwash," and Freddie Jones wasn't Irving. However, Observer thought Jones was brilliant in conveying "the tell-tale gnawings of fear." Illustrated London News also remarked on the shadow of Irving on the play. Eric Thompson's production "showed an absurd misunderstanding of a genre" (Tribune), a sentiment which Times shared heartily.

76.103 Winter Visitors (P) Andy Smith. BUSH 2/3/76.* Cast: Stage 26/2/76, 10; WWT/17. Gill Gil Brailey; Simon Terry Taplin; Frank Norman Ettlinger; Marjorie Doreen Mantle; The Man Terry Palmer. Dir Glen Walford; Dgn Elaine Garrard; Light Simon Stokes. Reviews: Observer 7/3/76, 25; Stage 11/3/76, 17; Times 4/3/76, 13. Comment: Observer found the characters' problems were "tedious and rather fanciful." Times said the play showed that "affection, like everything else, dies with time," but it lacked a "specific stage situation that is supposed to convey it."

76.104 Wild Orchids (P) Frank White. NEW END 3/3/76. 1st perfd Theatre Royal, Lincoln, 23/4/75. Comment: Adam Faith was unconvincing as the "disaffected and manipulative disk jockey" (Variety); Spectator called the performance "uncertain ... probably inhibited by what he knows of the real thing." Faith was not as good as John Shrapnel had been in the earlier Bush production (75.464) (Guardian). Times described the play as "scathingly brilliant" and commended Faith's performance. Illustrated London News enjoyed the latter's performance and the play as a whole.

Reviews: Guardian 8/3/76, 8; Observer 14/3/76, 29; Stage 11/3/76, 17; Times 8/3/76, 7. Comment: Pierre Chabert delivered the monologue "in rapid plainsong" (Observer).

76.110 The Nose Play (P for children). COCKPIT 6/3/76. 1st perf? Sara Boyes, Ken Gregory, Norma Cohen, Guy Groen. Dgn Luli Chapman. Review: Stage 18/3/76, 9. Comment: Sidewalk Theatre. "The story is about a king whose family is bewitched by an aggrieved cat-magician. His successor is plagued with a Cyrano-type nose" (Stage).

76.111 Sanctuary (P, 2a) James Keller. QUESTORS 6/3/76.* Cast: QTA.

76.112 Happy Days (D, 2a) Samuel Beckett. LYTTTELTON 8/3/76 (m). Winnie Peggy Ashcroft. Dir Peter Hall. Plot: Demastes/2, Dorney, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Schrank, Vinson, Weintraub. Review: Stage 18/3/76, 9. Comment: National Theatre. This inaugural matinée performance was given before an invited audience.

76.113 Motive (Thriller, 2a) Larry Cohen. RICHMOND 8/3/76. 1st perfd Yvonne Arnaud, Guildford, 3/2/76. Paula Cramer Honor Blackman; Wallace Barrows Ian Hendry; Andrew Creed George Cole. Pp Richmond Theatre Ltd.; Chm Louis I. Michaels; Mgr dir Melville Gillam, Enid Chanelle; Lic Melville Gillam; Pres Duncan C. Weldon, Louis I. Michaels; Dir Val May; Dgn Graham Brown. Comment: "An eternal triangle in the psychological thriller genre. All possible permutations are computed for this mechanically-clever, totally-incredible exercise in the aspects of motivation" (Stage 12/2/76, 17). A one-week engagement.

76.114 Verdict (P, 2a) Agatha Christie. WIMBLEDON 8/3/76. William Lucas, Zeph Gladstone. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Vinson, Wagoner, 125–26.

76.115 On the Game (P) Glenn Chandler. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/3/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 11/3/76, 21. Dougie Shaun Scott; Nicholas Sean Baker; Stuart Blake, Maitland Chandler. Dir Ann Fenn. Review: Stage 8/4/76, 13. Comment: The play was about "jobless boys who drift into London and slip into male prostitution for an easy pound or two" (Stage).

76.116 Sense of Loss (P) Alan Drury. OPEN SPACE 9/3/76 (Ln). 1st perf? Cast: Stage 4/3/76, 17. Sarah Diane Aubrey, Judy Jan Harvey; Peter Paul Gregory. Dir

Timothy West; Dgn Robin Don. Review: Times 10/3/76, 13. Comment: "A dullish entertainment" about a sexual triangle (Times).

Comment: MPS 618. "Splendidly performed, the play caricatures the convoluted world of corporate p.r. and its deceptions," "but lacks satire and is little more than a series of sketches" (Variety). Observer thought it an old-fashioned piece, and lacking in characterization. Daily Mirror averred the characters were very realistic. Spectator said the performances were better than the play itself. Times thought the characters and the situation were familiar and some of the material was "tame."

76.118 Agitator (P, 2a) John Norman. QUESTORS 12/3/76.* Cast: QTA. Review: Acton Gazette 1/4/76, 15.

76.119 The Land of Palms (P) David Cregan and Martin Duncan (songs) and Brian Protheroe (songs). ORANGE TREE 12/3/76. 1st perfd Barn, Dartington, 14/11/72. Cast: Stage 18/3/76, 17; WWT/17. Paula Christina Greatorex; Robert Paul Jesson; Jim Peter Benson; Moles Sam Kelly; Ada Stephanie Cole; Bobbie Sharman Macdonald; Louie Roger Swaine; Kate Sarah Stephenson. Dir Rhys Mcconnochie. Plot: Weintraub. Review: Times 26/3/76, 11. Comment: "Cregan's special talent is for dramatizing Anglo-Saxon attitudes by creating fantastic attitudes well removed from daily experience" (Times).

76.120 The Poetry Reading (C, 1a) Stanley Nelson. THREE HORSESHOES 13/3/76 (Ln and Ev). 1st perfd Cubiculo, New York City, 20/4/73?; 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 11/3/76, 21. Susan Clare Fischer; Mrs. Ganch Finola Keogh; Kazik Michalski, Joan Blackham, Davilia David. Dir Ron Travis. Review: Stage 18/3/76, 15. Comment: Pentameters. A "delightful example of elitist theatre laughing its head off at its own absurdity"; the setting was transposed from Greenwich Village to Hampstead (Stage).

76.121 Bed and Sometimes Breakfast (Mus) Sally Miles and Colin Tarn. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 15/3/76. 1st perfd Thorndike, Leatherhead, 3/75. Cast: Stage 4/3/76, 17. Sally Miles, Colin Tarn. Comment: "An intensely moving study of the life and times of a London prostitute ... the play follows the career of the whore from her early introduction to 'the game,' through wartime encounters to the more exotic life of the call-girl and her sometimes kinky customers to a pathetic lonely old age" (Stage 18/9/75, 12).

76.122 Charlie's Baby (P) Helen De Wynter. ALMOST FREE 15/3/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 11/3/76, 21. Charlie Yvonne Gilan; Prue Maggie Ollerenshaw; Charles McKeown. Dir Suresa Galbraith. Reviews: Gay News 25/3/76, 22; Stage 22/4/76, 10. Comment: Ambiance. The play was about a lesbian having a baby and its effect on her lesbian partner. "The play's idea is good, but the dialogue is often banal" (Stage). Gay News found some of the characterization weak, but Maggie Ollerenshaw gave a "darling of a performance."

76.123 Supplement au voyage de Bougainville (P) Denis Diderot. INSTITUT FRANÇAIS 15/3/76. Review: Times 16/3/76, 8. Comment: Théâtre du Double. In this semi-dramatization of Diderot's 1796 work, three actors preserved "continuous separate personalities while incessantly switching characters as natives and explorers" (Times).

76.124 Woe Extremity! Woe Extremity! (P) Ron Berry. SOHO POLY 15/3/76 (Ln). 1st perf? Cast: Stage 18/3/76, 17. Don McKillop, Hessel Saks. Dir Antonia Bird; Dgn David Scull.

Comment: Variety predicted most audiences would enjoy the show "immensely ... Humphreys is very funny." Spectator said the show was full of "antique music-hall jokes ... its amusements are thinly sporadic." Guardian reported the first night began at 11:00 pm, lasted three hours, and needed trimming by an hour. Subsequent performances began at 8:30. The first New York production (Theater Four 19/10/77) ran for 34 performances.

Comment: MPS 608. English Stage Company. Tribune commended the play's observant depiction of "Nigerian life transplanted to north London." "An enormously agreeable entertainment" (Spectator). "Comes over as a small-scale ghetto piece that ignores the requirements of an average English audience" (Times). Illustrated London News had difficulty understanding the accents used as well as the confusing plot. "The story is really too slight and extended" (Variety).

76.128 Out of Practice (F, 3a) Georges Feydeau (trans Claudine Henry; adpt Maxwell Shaw of Tailleur pour dames, 1887). Plot: Hochman. Reviews: Guardian 29/3/76, 8; Spectator 27/3/76, 28; Stage 25/3/76, 23; Times 18/3/76, 12. Comment: Theatre Workshop. "French farce played for mild dither rather than downright panic" (Guardian). Spectator noted the "lack of stylishness in the playing." Maxwell Shaw's production lacked "a strong pulse," and most of the cast did not know how to play Feydeau; nevertheless, Theatre

Workshop was “in better form than I have seen them in a long time” (Times).

Comment: Both Peter Dews's direction and most of the acting completely eliminated the play's humour (Guardian). “All that is missing are the laughs” (Times). Spectator noted the “lack of stylishness in the playing.” However, Variety commended “this stylish revival.” The first New York production (Circle in the Square 16/3/78) ran for 77 performances.

76.130 Mardi Gras (Mus, 2a) Melvyn Bragg (bk) and Alan Blaikley (mus, lyr) and Ken Howard (mus, lyr). PRINCE OF WALES 18/3/76.* 212 perf. 28; Stage 25/3/76, 11; Times 19/3/76, 12; Variety 24/3/76, 80, 84. Comment: The show lasted three hours. Guardian concluded the production possessed “conscientious professionalism,” but “what it lacks, on close inspection, is any trace of a heart.” Similarly, for Variety the piece possessed “form” but lacked “substance.” Spectator thought it might be a parody, or a burlesque, but was neither, only “tinsel” done lavishly. Gay News liked the singing and dancing, but not the book. Times suspected the piece was just a pretext for presenting a Mardi Gras extravaganza. Daily Mirror reviewed the production enthusiastically, complaining only about the Southern (American) accents.

76.131 Betjemanian (Ent) John Gould (mus, deviser; based on John Betjeman's poems) and David Benedictus (deviser). ORANGE TREE 19/3/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 18/3/76, 17. Comment: Guardian opined the revival of this "arthritic old thriller" was a "sign of managerial desperation." "Couldn't have been much of a play even in 1938" (Variety). Times thought it was dire economic necessity that had forced the revival of this "closet melodrama ... difficult to like and impossible to resist."

76.145 Kentucky Moon S. E. 8 (Country and western Mus) Rick Lloyd (bk, mus, lyr) and Julian Colbeck (lyr). ALBANY EMPIRE 26/3/76.* Eve Pauline Edmett; Marie Debbie Arnold; Jimmy Mike Khan; Mr. E. Martin Watkins; Joe Peter Dawson. Dir Alan Pearlman. Review: Stage 22/4/76, 21. Comment: Stage described the piece as a thinly-disguised 'beware the crypto-fascists in your midst' tract rather in the style of Mayday or Red Ladder."

76.146 The Merry Wives of Windsor (C) William Shakespeare. Previews 24/3–25/3/74. Guardian said the humour derived from characterization rather than "farical mania." The production lacked the "fizzing comic atmosphere" it possessed when staged at Stratford in 1975 (Times). The production closed on 17/4/76.

76.147 Present Laughter (P, 3a) Noël Coward. TOWER, CANONBURY, 26/3/76. Cast: TTC. Plot: Best/46, 433, Bordman/4, 261, Demastes/1, Fletcher, French/2, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Levin, 90–93, Mander/4, Salem.

Comment: Actors' Company. A charity performance was given on 29/3/70 in aid of Shelter (Daily Mirror 26/3/76, 3). Times thought the play was still entertaining and relevant, but faulted the sets which evoked Victorian farces and well-made plays. Birmingham Post described the piece as "compact, wise, and astringent" as well topical.

76.156a Dark Days Light Nights (P) Jamal Ali. SOHO POLY 31/3/76. Cast: Stage 1/4/76, 10. Benjamin George McLeod; Richard Horne, Edison Simpson, Barry Noel, Yvonne Agard, Bertram Carnegie, Angela Greenwood, Comment: The pre-West End production prior to opening at the Globe in July (76.350). Gay News thought the play depended “on stock types”; “at his best, Frayn seems remarkably close to Ayckbourn when humour emerges from a slightly poignant or else cruel piece of observation.”

76.197 Cycle Sluts (Transvestite revue). BROADWAY, KILBURN, 26/4/76. 1st British perf. Plot: OTF, OTF/2. Comment: The theatre was formerly the Kilburn Empire. The production originated at the Roxy Theatre, Los Angeles. “The Sluts’ initial visual impact is superb but it is not backed up by their performance or their material" (Gay News, 6/5, 21). Guardian felt "pummelled by grotesque Hollywood chic," or "concentration camp." "Briefly diverting ... only minimal amusement" (Spectator). Parts of the production were "a perverse delight" (Times).

76.198 La grande Eugène (Transvestite revue) Frantz Salieri and Alain Guiu (mus). ROUND HOUSE 26/4/76. Cast: WWT/17. Erna Von Scratch Christophe Basso; Belle De May Luc Chevalier; Josepha Badabou José-Christian Niego; Alain Deshayes, James Cameron, Bruno Tonioli, Ladislav Pergler, Thierry Le Bourgeois, Peter Althoff, Patrick Louis-Sidney, Jean-François Decarufel. Pres Bernard Delfont, Toni Azzì; Dir, Dgn Frantz Salieri; Balmr Alain Deshayes. Comment: Spectator reluctantly conceded the "show has a satirical and parodial edge." "A brilliantly executed show that, in terms of production values, outpaces all the other current spectaculars" (Guardian). Times, approvingly, discussed exactly how the production worked.

76.199 Move Along Sideways (One-man show) Ron Moody. THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD EAST, 26/4/76. Cast: WWT/17. Ron Moody. Light Ray Duffill.

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews 22/4–27/4/76. The play was a character study of a merchant (Matlaw, 310). "A commonplace family chronicle with little to commend it as social comment and rather less as drama" (Spectator). Observer said David Jones's "sadly flaccid production" failed to be either "stirring or comic." Guardian drew comparisons with Chekhov and pointed to Gorky's cruder writing. "The characters are tedious and repetitious, the story diffuse and sketchy" (Variety). "A long evening in which the promise of a controlled study of large issues dwindles into a noisy and rather small personal drama" (Times).

76.205 Miss Julie (P, 1a) August Strindberg (anon trans of Fröken Julie, 1889). GREENWICH 29/4/76. Cast: WWT/17. Miss Julie Susan Hampshire; Jean Martin Shaw; Christine Marjorie Yates. Dir John Cox; Dgn Peter Rice; Light Graham Phoenix. Plot: Fletcher, French/2, Gassner, Griffiths, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Patterson, Shank, Shipley, Sobel, Walford. Reviews: Birmingham Post 30/4/76, 2; Spectator 8/5/76, 28; Stage 6/5/76, 13; Times 30/4/76, 11. Comment: Spectator thought Susan Hampshire's temperament was "disastrously at odds" with the role of Miss Julie. For Times Susan Hampshire was also "the unlikeliest Julie one can think of"; indeed, she offered "her usual radiant impersonation of the fairy on the Christmas tree."

Reviews: Stage 13/5/76, 17; Times 4/5/76, 9. Comment: Toronto Workshop Company. Times reported the show had been successful in Canada but doubted it would be in England because “an element of historical proportion is lacking,” and because the privations of the Canadian depression were “muffled by the relentlessly wholesome performance.”

76.213 Article Five (P) Brian Phelan. ICA 4/5/76 (Ln). Reviews: Times 5/5/76, 15; Tribune 14/5/76, 7. Comment: “In support of Amnesty International, [the] play seeks to show how torture is perpetrated by ordinary men in the name of respectable causes, but [Phelan] chooses to demonstrate this by staging a torture which is so graphic that its image nearly obliterates his argument” (Times).

THREE HORSESHOES c. 8/5/76.* Cast: Stage 6/5/76, 14. Ethel Evie Garrett; Tricia Morar Kennedy; Kenny Andrew Quiney; Duggie Ivan Vander. Dir Royce Ryton; Mus Andrew Quiney. Review: Stage 3/6/76, 18. Comment: Pentameters. "A wry tale of the last night of a third-rate provincial panto," given a good performance (Stage).

76.223a The Christian Brothers (Monol) Ron Blair. MERMAID 9/5/76. 1st perfd Nimrod, Surry Hills, New South Wales, Australia, 1/8/75; 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 6/5/76, 14. Lloyd Lamble. Dir William Alexander. Review: Stage 3/6/76, 18. Comment: Association of Australian Artistes. Lloyd Lamble was a quirky school teacher addressing recalcitrant pupils; Stage thought the monologue was somewhat too long.

76.223b Mates (P) Peter Kenna. MERMAID 9/5/76. Cast: Stage 6/5/76, 14. Sylvia, Neil John Muirhead; Gary Chris Cummings; Bettina Dickson, Lloyd Lamble. Dir William Alexander. Plot: Gunn, Vinson. Review: Stage 3/6/76, 18. Comment: Association of Australian Artistes.

76.224 Olympics '76 (P) Jack Winter. YOUNG VIC 10/5/76. 1st perfd Toronto Workshop, Canada, 18/5/75 as Summer 76. Diana Douglass, Judy Crocker, François-Regis Klanfer, Peter Millard, Rich Payne, Grant Roll, Ross Skene, Jim Warburton. Dir George Luscombe; Dgn Astrid Janson. Review: Stage 20/5/76, 24. Comment: Toronto Workshop Productions. The play was about the Olympics generally and the Montreal games in particular.

76.225 The Shadow of a Gunman (P) Sean O'Casey. SUGAWN 10/5/76. Davoren Timothy O'Grady; Mr. Gallogher Seamus O'Casey; Shields John Quinn; Minnie Treasa Ni Fhatharta; Peggie McCarthy, Dermot O'Sullivan. Dir Colin Ley. Plot: Fletcher, Gassner, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Matlaw, Mplots, Patterson, Salem, Schrank, Scrimgeour, 65–73, Shank. Reviews: Irish Times 13/5/76, 10; Stage 8/7/76, 18. Comment: A good revival that played to full houses (Stage).

76.226 Shakebag (P) David Pinner. SOHO POLY 10/6/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 13/5/76, 18. Jean Fergusson, Ronald Fernee, Catherine Griller, Paul Hastings, Peter Pacey, Clare Richards. Dir Ian Lindsay; Dgn Harry Duffin.

76.227 Les diálogos ou autres inventions à deux voix (P) Roland Dubillard. GREENWOOD 11/5/76. 1st stage perf Michodière, Paris, 10/1/75. Claude Pieplu, Philippe Laudenbach. Dir Jean Chouquet; Dgn Marcel-Louis Dieulot. Reviews: Stage 20/5/76, 20; Times 13/5/76, 15. Comment: Théâtre de la Michodière. This series of conversation pieces for two people was originally a radio play which was later given on television.

76.228 Work to Role (P). ICA 11/5/76. Review: Tribune 28/5/76, 7. Comment: Women's Theatre Group. The piece showed "what women at work can expect today—lously stereotyped jobs like typing or waiting tables ... at low wages, with little union assistance" (Tribune).

76.229 Yesterday's News (P) Joint Stock and Jeremy Seabrook. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 11/5/76. 1st perfd Alder-shot 1976. Cast: Findlater; Stage 29/4/76, 1; WWT/17. Keith Jones Will Knightley; Roche Philip McGough; Gillian Barge, Linda Goddard, Paul Kember, Tony Mathews, David Rintoul. Dir William Gaskill, Max Stafford-Clark; Dgn Hayden Griffin; Light Rory Dempster. Reviews: Guardian 12/5/76, 12; Observer 16/5/76, 29; Spectator 22/5/76, 28; Stage 20/5/76, 17; Times 12/5/76, 14; Tribune 28/5/76, 7. Comment: Joint Stock. The piece was about the recruitment and massacre of British mercenaries in Angola. Tribune reported the piece consisted of seven actors "facing the audience delivering interwoven monologues" with no attempt at dramatization.

76.230 Bus Stop (CD, 3a) William Inge. PHOENIX 12/5/76. Cast: Theatricalia; Variety 26/5/76, 91; Stage 15/4/76, 1; WWT/17. Bo Decker Keir Dullea; Carl John Church; Cherie Lee Remick; Dr. Gerald Lyman Alfred Marks; Elma Duckworth Jenny Quayle; Grace Hoylard Miriam Karlin; Virgil Blessing Don Fellows; Will Masters Roy Purcell. Lic, Mgr dir Veronica Flint-Shipman; Pres Veronica Flint-Shipman, Paul Elliott; Pd

Plot: Bordman, Bronner, Bryer, Fletcher, Hischak, Matlaw, Salem, Wilmeth. Reviews: Daily Mirror 13/5/76, 18; Guardian 13/5/76, 10; Illustrated London News 1/7/76, 59; Observer 16/5/76, 29; Spectator 22/5/76, 28; Stage 20/5/76, 17; Times 13/5/76, 15; Variety 26/5/76, 91. Comment: Lee Remick's West End debut. Variety said this was "a worthy production" ably headed by Americans Lee Remick and Keir Dullea. Times thought the production made "a good case for Inge as a playwright who is content to show people in action and leave others to do the judging." "The play, with its single set and containing little action, is better-suited to film than stage" (Daily Mirror).

76.231 Geisterbahn (P) Franz Xaver Kroetz (trans Katharina Hehn of his play, 1975). BUSH 13/5/76. 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 13/5/76, 18; WWT/17. Stallerin Penelope Lee; Staller Mike Pratt; Sepp Peter Sproule; Beppi Jenny Twigge. Dir David Mouchtar-Samorai; Dgn Terry Jacobs; Light Buz Williams. Plot: Hochman. Reviews: Guardian 14/5/76, 8; Observer 16/5/76, 29; Stage 20/5/76, 17; Times 14/5/76, 8. Comment: David Mouchtar-Samorai's production was "an exercise in extreme slow-motion" that ultimately left Times feeling less than sympathetic towards the fate of the child, Beppi. Similarly, Stage remarked Mouchtar-Samorai "takes the whole play at such a realistic slow pace that the audience is left thinking of parody."

76.232 Jump! (P for children) Ken Whitmore. ARTS 13/5/76. 1st perfd BBC Radio-3 8/4/75; 1st stage perf. Review: Stage 20/5/76, 17. Comment: Unicorn Theatre. "What it is all about is the imminent disintegration of the world. This can only be prevented if all the people on it can be persuaded to jump at exactly the same time, thereby allowing the subterranean armies of moles to relieve the pressure on the molten zone turbulent some 30 miles below the surface" (Stage).

76.233a Campion's Interview (P) Brian Clark. SOHO POLY 17/5/76.* Cast: Stage 20/5/76, 12. Mr. Campion Julian Curry; Director of Education Noel Howlett; Derek

Seaton, Don Henderson, Polly Hemingway. Dir Brian Clark; Dgn Jane Ripley. Reviews: Stage 27/5/76, 21; Times 18/5/76, 9. Comment: The two plays “formed two very different prongs of an intelligent, convincing assault on the failures of comprehensive education” (Times).

Plot: Demastes/2, Patterson, Weintraub. Reviews: Irish Times 13/5/76, 10; Times 4/6/76, 9; Tribune 28/5/76, 7. Comment: Irish Times reported that the fourteen fifty-minute episodes (one episode per day) would be repeated twice; “it’s hard to see where you will get an audience that will come to 14 plays on the trot.” Times managed to see six parts and concluded the authors had attempted too much in trying to “explain the twentieth century and [James] Connolly’s life.” Times reported on the six parts it had managed to see.

76.235 Cracks in a City (P) Giles Mitchell. ROUND HOUSE DOWNSTAIRS 17/5/76.* Giles Mitchell, Kevin Whately, Anne Franklin-Wjite, Paul Kalli, Carina Wyeth. Review: Stage 10/6/76, 11. Comment: Dimension Theatre. “What this piece is saying, I think, is that city life is vile and that wish fulfilment can easily turn vicious; both somewhat self-evident truths” (Stage).

76.236 Dom Juan (P) Molière (trans Henry Baker and James Miller). HAMPSTEAD 17/5/76. 1st perfd Palais-Royal, Paris, 15/2/1665 as Don Juan, ou le festin de Pierre. Reviews: Gay News 3/6/76, 27; Stage 24/6/76, 17. Comment: Gay Sweatshop. The play was about two schoolboys in the 1950s and their sexual relationship, with one remaining gay, the other receiving “treatment” that results in him rejecting his friend.

Comment: Performed under the collective title Confusions. "It seems to me that Ayckbourn is doing more for the true theatre with his cheerfully contrived inventions than Beckett is with the apparently hypnotic power of his name" (Illustrated London News). "An event to be treasured ... There is little contrived about his comic situations. His characters don't crack gags—they're just ordinary people trying to avoid life's banana skins only to trip over the kerb" (Daily Mirror). Variety said the five playlets were somewhat uneven but "hilarious," and deserved a long run. "Excellent directed by Alan Strachan and springily played" (Guardian). Observer said the actors were "immaculate." "Very slight, and only very slightly amusing" (Tribune). Times praised the cast, Alan Tagg's revolving set, and Ayckbourn's structural abilities but not his persistent "increasingly unsympathetic handling of his characters."

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews 20/5–24/5/76. The production ran four and a half hours. Variety reported Ian Holm was to perform Hickey, but, because of illness, was replaced by his understudy Alan Tilvern who gave a "nicely shaded and altogether authoritative" performance in this "excellent revival." For Spectator the production "never successfully negotiates the dichotomy imposed by its realistic setting and O'Neill's expressionist method"; the acting was uneven. "Altogether a rich extension of the Royal Shakespeare repertory, staged somewhat too spaciouly by Chris Dyer" (Times).

Comment: Observer thought the revue, a British cast singing songs about America to a British audience, was "a bit pointless." "So red, white and blue that it practically reeks of toothpaste ads" (Times). Variety thought the piece was uneven, but "sharp and caustic numbers" helped to compensate.

76.255a The Fear of Heaven (C, 1a) John Mortimer. GREENWICH 28/5/76.* Cast: Theatricalia; WWT/17. A Guide Alan Dudley; A Nun Rita Giovanni; A Patient Leonardo Pieroni; Doctor Benjamini Trevor Baxter; Lewis Luby Denholm Elliott; Tommy Fletcher Peter Woodthorpe; Sophie Hana-Maria Pravda. Dir John Tydeman; Dgn Peter Rice; Light Nick Chelton. Comment: Performed under the collective title Heaven and Hell. "They're plays of jokes as much as ideas; but yet they theatrically work" (Guardian 29/5). Spectator noted the plays were performed as farce. Times said the double bill presented very "persuasive arguments for moral hypocrisy" and was well-casted.

76.255b The Prince of Darkness (C, 1a) John Mortimer. GREENWICH 28/5/76.* Cast: Theatricalia; WWT/17. Rev. Gavin Faber Peter Woodthorpe; *Rev. A. K. Reviews: Guardian 2/6/76, 10; Stage 10/6/76, 11; Times 2/6/76, 12. Comment: The production was scheduled to open on 26/5/76 but was postponed to 1/6/76. "Lovelace and Leavis (whence the title) are a double act who flourish in an ambiguous zone between petty crime and the fringe of show business" (Times). Not a typical Terson play (Stage).

76.267 We Do It for Love (P) Patrick Galvin. YOUNG VIC 1/6/76. 1st perfd Lyric, Belfast, 14/5/75. "A collage of mainly classless song revivals" from the 1950s (Variety). "Naive and unpretentious ... energetic choreography ... highly infectious" (Gay News). Guardian noted the numbers were arranged thematically to show that "death, sex and religion ... were the overriding obsessions of fifties pop." While Times had enjoyed the original Lincoln performance, the piece now seemed to be "a slightly arch, poorly focused satire" on fifties pop songs.

76.269 Romeo and Juliet (T) William Shakespeare. ST. Comment: The production failed "to demonstrate the intrinsic advantages of [the] theatre's house style" because it lacked "the dramatic immediacy that is supposed to derive from the open stage" (Times). Illustrated London News commended the performances of Peter McEnery, Sarah Badel, and Rosemary Leach.

Comment: MPS 621. Variety observed the excellent cast could not quite overcome the shortcomings of this play about "middle-class family warfare." "A civilized and surely judged picture of a family in the toils" (Illustrated London News). Guardian noted echoes of Uncle Vanya, did not think the play as good as Giles Cooper's Happy Family, and the saving grace was the excellent cast. Observer also commented on Alec McCowen's "bravura performance. Spectator found the play agreeable and enjoyed the "civilised, grammatically structured sentences." Times called the piece "a Dear Octopus for the 1970s" with echoes of Chekhov.

76.274 Equus (D, 2a) Peter Shaffer. Comment: “Misses by a mile ... a mixture of comic strip, melodrama and morality tale—a ponderous bore without style” (Variety). “A coarse and unengaging musical” (Spectator). Guardian averred the piece was virtually dead on arrival, and suggested that, because seven of the thirty-three proposed numbers were not performed, there had been “some frantic last-minute bloodletting.” Times observed Maugham’s bleak story had been turned into a “rosy fantasy.”

76.279 Stone (P, 1a) Edward Bond and Robert Campbell (mus). Comment: Gay Sweatshop. Tribune and Gay News (1/7) found the play to be an effective parable about homosexual repression. However, Times commented “Bond has burdened himself with a grandly purposeful morality play which is meant to symbolize all society and all oppression.”

76.280 The International Nose Show (Revue) Tim Webster (deviser). LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/6/76. 1st London perf. Cast: Stage 3/6/76, 21. Tim Webster, R. J. Bell, Kathy Arnold. Dir Tim Webster. Review: Stage 12/8/76, 20. Comment: A somewhat ragbag revue with a surreal tinge (Stage).

Comment: Variety discussed variations between American and British productions, noted the addition of a new number, and predicted an uncertain future after the summer tourist trade had faded. Noting there was only a slight plot, Guardian said the piece was “a fashion parade with music, a costume show with choreography.” Daily Mirror pointed to the five hit tunes in the piece. A “workman-like” production (Times). The original New York production ran for 675 performances.

Comment: Basically “a sad tale about an egotistical man on the make” (Variety). Guardian wondered how Lee Langley could write such a play and said there was an air of desperation in the acting. Times found the tone of the play varied and ultimately its value declined “in direct proportion to its serious content.” Illustrated London News described the piece as “merely glib,” a description applied by Daily Mirror.

Comment: National Theatre. The production lacked “any point of view” (Guardian). Observer dubbed it a partial success and added it was “usually engrossing.” Spectator said the production was boring and failed to come to grips “with the fascinations of the material.” Elijah Moshinsky failed to provide the emphasis the tragedy required (Times). The acting was variable (Illustrated London News).

Comment: National Theatre. The first new production at the Lyttelton. Spectator wondered why the National had chosen to revive the play especially when previous productions of the play still lingered in people's minds (such as Margaret Rutherford as Mme Arcati). Variety declared it "a stunning production," and lavished praise on the set, lighting, props, and cast. While Coward was being "over-revived" Illustrated London News still much preferred this play to Brenton's Weapons of Happiness (76.336). The production remained in repertory until 28/5/77.

Comment: Guardian said the production fell flat because it made the mistake of deliberately trying to be funny when in farce the characters need to be played straight. Thus, as Variety noted, Kenneth Williams giving "his standard campy and nasal performance ... [being] funny as usual" was "inappropriate for Feydeau." Times approved the cast and production, dubbing it "thoroughly escapist" entertainment.

Comment: Guardian remarked Jonathan Miller's production "allows the atmosphere to arise from the interaction of characters and ideas." Observer averred this was "by far ... the best performance" of the play it had seen; Janet Suzman's Masha was "magnificent." Spectator thought the production lost "the poignancy that is [the play's] essence." Miller "has been too astringent, squeezing lemon all over the script" (Illustrated London News). Times declared it was a great production because Miller "fully acknowledges the objective nature of the piece," and does not present "the action from the sisters' own viewpoint."

The play was set in the 1870s and involved an industrialist and his wife, the latter finding connubial bliss and complications elsewhere. Stage detected numerous nineteenth-century influences, adding, "The dialogue kept on jerking me out of a feeling of credulity by sudden anachronisms and stilted, wooden passages." Spectator found the reasons for staging the play "inscrutable." Times was appalled that the play had won the George Devine award.

The piece was suggested "by the events of the A6 murder [at Deadman's Hill]. It is part fantasy, part charade, part straight documentary" (Stage). Propagandistic, and an "unsavory business" (Spectator). Times noted the assumption behind this "surreal polemic" was that Hanratty was innocent and had been framed by the police. Guardian failed to see the purpose of the production.

76.325 Emigrés (D, 2a) Sławomir Mro ek (trans Maciej Wrona and Teresa Wrona and Robert Holman of Emigranci, 1975 [written 1974]). YOUNG VIC 5/7/76. 1st perf British perf. "A compact and absorbing piece of the nature of freedom" (Variety). The play developed into an original, thoughtful study (Tribune). Times commended Mro ek for his ability to transform abstract ideas into "flesh and blood"; the acting could have been stronger. The production remained in repertory until 17/9/76.

Comment: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s return to the London stage after a 42-year absence. Illustrated London News said the piece “returns only as an amiable contrivance in wax.” Guardian found “its charm dubious, its wit precarious and its attitudes snobbish,” and wondered why it had been reset in 1938. Variety noted the marquee attraction of Fairbanks, and commended the performance of Wilfrid Hyde-White. Times thought the production would appeal to people “who enjoy this kind of mendacious fable, and seeing the art of acting reduced to nice behaviour in elegant surroundings.”

Comment: Illustrated London News hoped “there have been acoustic adjustments. Douglas Campbell's revival is so true in outline, with Alan Badel's bravura as Richard.” Times also complained about Badel's audibility, the theatre's acoustics in general, and the lack of a style that complemented “this handsome and pleasant theatre.”

Comment: MPS 645. National Theatre. Press night was 14/7/76. The performance on 16/7/76 was cancelled because of an unofficial strike by stage staff (Guardian 17/8/76, 1). Guardian said the play was very passionate and alive, full of ideas, though not all of them were developed. Variety found the piece somewhat hazy and confusing, but relieved by Brenton's sense of humour; Frank Finlay was guilty of “a mannered almost monotone delivery.” Tribune faulted the second-half of the play for a vein of sentimentality. Times thought the play was inoffensive except to those “put off by its sentimentality and faded internationalism.” The production remained in repertory until 23/10/76.

Reviews: Birmingham Post 6/8/76, 2; Illustrated London News 1/10/76, 99; Observer 8/8/76, 21; Spectator 14/8/76, 19; Stage 12/8/76, 11; Times 5/8/76, 18. Comment: The piece was about Lewis Carroll. "Inoffensive enough, even has its mild pleasures" (Spectator). Times said Rothwell's performance was "illuminating and adventurous." Rothwell "gave one of the most quietly absorbing single-handed performances in recollection" (Illustrated London News).

Comment: MPS 638. Comment: "It is a gaudy, earsplitting rock show studded, according to the programme, with twenty-one wonderful songs. Mercifully it is short and the heaven versus hell story is told in panto-rhyme fashion" (Daily Mirror). Guardian opined the show lacked all the qualities of O'Brien's The Rocky Horror Show (73.279). "All inoffensive, confused fun ... [that] pokes fun at numerous comic-strip genres" (Variety). Spectator was left "aghast" by the piece, and noted "the spoken dialogue is in rhyming couplets that seem to compound its witlessness." "Inconclusively constructed" (Observer). Times opined the piece "may acquire a cult following. But the joke is wearing thin."

76.397 The Sea Gull (P) Anton Chekhov (trans Mark Woolgar of Chaika, 1896). Guardian praised the play for successfully working on several different levels. Observer found Frayn's satire particularly accurate. Times singled out the performances of Nigel Hawthorne, Barbara Ferris, and James Berwick. Illustrated London News said the play, pleasant and civilized, deserved to have a wider public.

76.406 Come Laughing Home (C, 3a) Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall. WIMBLEDON 16/8/76. Cast: Stage 1/7/76, 16. The play, involving British tourists on the Costa Brava, was "a celebration of baseness, male domination, cruelty, and apathy" (Times). The hotel in the play "resembles nothing less than a mixed borstal with the warders gone" (Observer). "English working class youngsters on holiday are, it seems, either nasty bovver boys bent on dago bashing or promiscuous office girls who have come along to vie with each other as merchandise in the meat market" (Times Educational Supplement).

76.408 Just Libby (One-woman mus revue) Libby Morris. MAYFAIR 16/8/76. Cast: WWT/17. Libby Morris. Mus dir William Blezard. Review: Stage 26/8/76, 9. Comment: The show was partly autobiographical, partly nostalgia, and partly commentary on women in society.

76.409 An Evening with Quentin Crisp (One-man show). NEW END 17/8/76. Cast: WWT/17. Quentin Crisp. Review: Gay News 9/9/76, 27. Comment: Gay News found this iteration had more form and discipline, and was indeed a work of art.

76.410 The Bread and Butter Trade (P) Peter Terson. SHAW 18/8/76.* Patrick Field, Kilian McKenna, Ian Lynch, Simon Treves, Janet Titterington. Dir Michael Croft, Graham Chinn; Dgn Humphrey Jaeger. Reviews: Birmingham Post 20/8/76, 2; Guardian 19/8/76, 6; Illustrated London News 1/10/76, 99; Observer 22/8/76, 20; Stage 26/8/76, 9; Times 19/8/76, 5. Comment: National Youth Theatre. Something of a companion piece to Here Comes the Sun (76.407) but set in a London hotel instead of the Costa Brava (Times). Guardian described the play as “an amiable farcical romp” not unlike the Grand Hotel. “An unpretentiously enjoyable romp” (Observer).

76.411 Let's Get to Bed (F) Caryl Brahms and Ned Sherrin (adpt of Georges Feydeau, Feu la mère de madame, 1908). NAG'S HEAD (2) 18/8/76 (Ln). 1st perf this adpt? Comment: Drum Workshop. “A play within a play about a black writer degraded for a trifling debt, is interesting if didactic and heavily left piece of theatre” (Observer). Despite some weaknesses, Times said the script was witty and the theme “far from simplistic.”

76.414 Double Talk! (F) Nigel Williams. English Stage Company. Spectator commended Baldwin's “sharp humour” and “compelling irony.” Tribune and Spectator thought the reason for a character's handicap (a leg lost in a pub bombing) was irrelevant to the play overall. Times felt Baldwin had packed his play with too many ingredients and did not really care about them. The first New York production was at the Manhattan Theatre Club 20/5/79.

76.417 Open to Question (P) Neil Hornick. BUSH 25/8/76.* Comment: Phantom Captain. Performed later as Loaded Questions (76.577).

Comment: The presence of Brian Rix always renders a play predictable, as here with numerous stale jokes; “but some of the sight gags are effectively comic thanks to the timing of Rix himself” (Variety). “Though mysteriously billed as a comedy, [the piece] is in precisely the tradition of the farces that scampered across this stage” when Rix first occupied it in the 50s and 60s (Spectator).

Reviews: Gay News 23/9/76, 25; Guardian 1/9/76, 8; Observer 5/9/76, 22; Times 1/9/76, 8. Comment: Paines Plough. The piece examined artists and their motivation: here Gesualdo (a murderer) and Warlock (a diabolist). Times described the play as "intriguing," with finely played music. "The play suggests music is an all-devouring force that consumes both the creators and their dependants ... the writing is elegant, spare and sharp" (Guardian).

Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. Previews 2/9–6/9/76. Guardian said the production was notable for "John Wood's sulphurous, risky and unabashed performance," but faulted the production's "odd blend of stylisation and realism in the group scenes." Daily Mirror said the production was "too broadly slapstick at times." Observer thought Wood's portrayal was contrary to Chekhov's intention, while Tribune's opinion was exactly the opposite. "Farce is the dominant note, which may upset some audiences" (Variety). Spectator said despite all Wood's skills, Ivanov still appeared as "a tiresome sorehead." Times noted David Jones's direction ensured the changes in mood were effective.

Reviews: Illustrated London News 1/11/76, 84; Stage 16/9/76, 11; Times 9/9/76, 13. Comment: National Youth Theatre. There were over 100 actors in the production. Times said the young actors performed "with respectable skill," adding a production of Coriolanus "may be overreaching on a grand scale, but it is challenging as nothing has been in its commissioned plays this season."

If "not a masterpiece, then the word has no meaning" (Guardian 30/8). "What makes Kantor's theatre remarkable is its combination of what [Peter]

Brook would call the rough and holy" (Guardian 13/9). "You don't have to understand Polish, European politics of the beginning of this century or even life itself to be overwhelmed by such a theatrical coup de theatre, simply a receptive human being. The Dead Class is not for applauding, but for receiving" (Stage).

Reviews: Guardian 20/9/76, 8; Stage 7/10/76, 18; Tribune 1/10/76, 8-9. Comment: Scarab Theatre. Also known as The Tragedy of Mao in the Lin Piao Period. Guardian reported the cast had received death threats if the production went ahead. "The play is didactic in the extreme; long speeches pass from one character to another with very little concession either to the requirements of dramatic movement or to the ignorance of most audience members (other than the downright committed) of the events in question" (Stage).

Comment: Guardian commended Parker's ability "to write a play about Belfast that has an almost freewheeling lightness and gaiety." Irish Times reported the early previews and performances had been sold out. "It's Niall Buggy as Frank the lone bicycle fan, a rubber-faced Pierrot who incarnates rather than plays Parker's witty lines, whose show this is" (Observer). "A constant tempering of whims with Northern Irish realities keeps an edge on the action (Times 16/9). There were 37 performances at the Vaudeville. The first New York production (Circle in the Square 15/3/79) ran for 77 performances.

Comment: Times declared "Weller is the American theatre's most articulate spokesman for a generation that has turned against words." The first New York production (Joseph Papp/Newman 1/2/75) ran for 46 performances.

76.445 A Good Lie Not a Great Lie (MP) John Gartland and Charlie Dore (mus) and Julian Littman (mus). SQUARE ONE 16/9/76.* Cast: Stage 16/9/76, 12. Keith Varnier, Lloyd McGuire, James Duggan, Peter Maycock, Carol Leader. Dir Stuart Orme; Dgn John Markham, Mary Markham. Review: Stage 7/10/76, 18. Comment: "The story concerns a competition in lying who can fool who for the longest bit of time. Everyone has at least two identities, but both remain cardboard," the music was not really an integral element, although the cast did what it could (Stage).

76.446 The Interview (P) Alan Sillitoe. ST. MARTIN-IN-THE-FIELDS 16/9/76 (Ln).* 1 perf. Cast: Stage 16/9/76, 12. Ida Nudel Janet Suzman; Colin Blakely, Gerry Sundquist. Review: Stage 23/9/76, 11. Comment: The 35s Groups (Women's Campaign for Soviet Jewry). This short piece was about the plight of Soviet Jews trying to leave Russia for Israel.

Comment: National Theatre. Guardian (22/9) thought the revival possessed "greater force and clarity" than the original production (72.23); Times and Illustrated London News agreed. "Peter Wood's production has expanded, literally and metaphorically" (Observer). Spectator said Julie Covington and Julian Glover were miscast replacements for Diana Rigg and Graham Crowden.

76.453 The Passing Day (P [3a]) George Shiels. Comment: "A rambling monolog interspersed with a few old music hall ditties" by "Britain's best known bigot," Alf Garnet (Variety). "The plan here is to be as offensive as possible—not simply verbal custard-pies—in a style of street-corer virulence. If it angers the audience, so much the better. Audiences unfortunately can seem pathetically glad to be offended” (Illustrated London News). Times listed numerous examples of Garnet’s bigotry, and concluded “a great national character has returned.”

Comment: MPS 639. English Stage Company. “In this tedious and grubby exhibit, as apparently aimless as it is witless, Storey has mistaken content for style” (Spectator). “The piece after a promising first five minutes reaches us as a night of tedious assault and battery” (Illustrated London News). Tribune described the play as a “Gothic farce” about the current amoral status of England. “Wholly deficient in farcical talent ... rather a glum evening” (Times).

Comment: Guardian thought this “brittle” New York comedy was the wrong choice as a star vehicle for Michael Crawford, and Daily Mirror wondered why Crawford accepted his role. Variety said the piece had transplanted well and made for “an engagingly acted and nostalgically amusing evening.” “There is no lower form of theatrical life than the commercial two-character play” (Times). The first New York production (Brooks Atkinson 14/3/75) ran for 1,453 performances.

Comment: Performed previously as Hamp (66.352). Poorly directed by Bernard Miles and Ron Pember, the play nevertheless brought out the class divisions in the British armed forces (Guardian). “A downbeat drama about the court-martial and execution of a World War I British army deserter" (Variety). Times said the "complex moral questions" were handled better by Joseph Losey's 1964 film. "Desperately honest ... uncompromising and inevitable ... It should have reached London far earlier ... truthful performances, especially Paul Copley's" (Illustrated London News).

Also performed for an additional three weeks in 11/76. "Digger and Leveller pamphlets, transcripts of sessions and political meetings and original material make up the words of the play, which has music by Colin Sell" (Stage). Guardian praised the piece for its even-handed presentation of the evidence of how the "revolutionary idealism" underlying the Civil War was betrayed. Spectator said it was "rivetingly instructive."

76.463 Once More with Music (Mus) Ronald Millar. Comment: National Theatre. The opening of a new theatre. The performance began at 5:00pm and lasted "close on five hours, played virtually uncut" (Times). "Tamburlaine in the theatre is an astonishing experience, and it is fortified by Peter Hall's production, by the speed with which he thrusts along the double play on the circular stage of the Olivier, and by the comparably urgent speaking of all concerned. Marlowe's verse needs an unremitting drive" (Illustrated London News). "If ever there were a case for editing, it is in a play like this," despite Peter Hall's fine production (Guardian 5/10). "A spectacle ... impressively played as such," although also a "stunt to show off the new theatre" (Variety). The production remained in repertory until 13/1/77.

76.479 Whoops a-Daisy (C) Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall. WIMBLEDON 4/10/76. 1st perfd Playhouse, Comment: Dolphin Theatre Company. An unconventional interpretation of the play that removes the impetuosity of the young lovers (Guardian). "Unusually bad" (Observer). "A production to be respected for the imaginative zest of its director, James Roose-Evans, rather than the merits of its cast" (Illustrated London News). Times noted this was the Shaw's third venture of "casting a television star [Angela Pleasance] in an economical production of a popular text"; stalls seats cost 80 pence each.

76.482 Soon (P) Colin Bennett. "An array of 20 or so scenes prophesying triumph or apocalypse, depending which side you are on" (Observer). "None of the ideas develop, many are belaboured ... It still seemed to please most of the audience" (Times).

76.483 Indiscreet: the Revenge of Mr. X. (P) Drew

Griffiths and Roger Baker. OVALHOUSE 6/10/76. Cast: Alan Pope, Phillip Howells, Gordon McDonald. Review: Stage 21/10/76, 17. Comment: Gay Sweatshop. A revised version of the play. Stage found the autobiographical/documentary nature of the play lacked a true sense of reality.

Comment: “A tasteful, two-hour biography [of Swift] enlivened by the magnetic present of Guinness himself” (Guardian). Rather than a biography, “all that is on show are a few lightning sketches with faintly dramatised Who’s Who footnotes” (Daily Mirror). Variety predicted the piece might be successful because of Guinness in the cast. “A portrait so greatly at odds with the common view of Swift” (Spectator). Times said it was difficult to determine exactly what the piece tried to accomplish.

76.486a No Time for Jokes (P) Edgar Bates. LAMB AND FLAG 7/10/76. Given a rehearsal reading at the Lamb and Flag 1/10/70. Cast: Stage 7/10/76, 11. Comment: LAMP. Comment: Good on a woman’s view of the Arthurian myth, bad on attempting to make contemporary political connections (Guardian). “Gems slips in a few sly comments about our nation of shopkeepers, showing slight parallels with its present plight, but her main point is the way in which women are misunderstood by men”

(Stage). Produced at the 78th Street Theatre Lab, New York, 19/5/2000.

Comment: Performed under the collective title The Frontiers of Farce. Guardian reported Barnes said he combined the two plays because "they both push farce to extremes of pain and cruelty. Variety said The Purging was "second-rate Feydeau," and The Singer was "more substantial and satisfying." Spectator (23/10) described both pieces as "in the backwoods of farce" and the evening as "woeful." Times could not remember "having seen a funnier play" than The Purging.

Times thought this piece was on the frontier of farce.

76.494 Old World (C, 2a) Aleksei Arbuzov (trans Ariadne Nikolaeff of Staromodnaya komediya [written 1975]). ALDWYCH 12/10/76. 1st British perf. Cast: RSCA; Theatricalia; Variety 20/10/76, 196; WWT/17. Lidya Vasilyevna Peggy Ashcroft; Rodion Nikolayevich Anthony Quayle. Dir Terry Hands; Dgn Ralph Koltai; Light Stewart Leviton; Mus Ian Kellam. Plot: Hischak, Hischak/2, 126, Loney. Reviews: Birmingham Post 23/10/76, magazine, 1; Daily Mirror 15/10/76, 18; Guardian 13/10/76, 10; Illustrated London News 1/12/76, 105; Observer 17/10/76, 32; Spectator 23/10/76, 32; Stage 21/10/76, 11; Times 13/10/76, 13; Variety 20/10/76, 196. Comment: Royal Shakespeare Company. The piece is also known as Old-fashioned Comedy. Previews 7/10–11/10/76. "One of the nicest plays ... Anthony Quayle and Peggy Ashcroft are superb as opposite and lonely personalities who find romance together in middle age" (Variety). Terry Hands did "his best to disguise its banality" (Spectator), a view shared by Observer. Times faulted the translation "which runs to a vein of banal understatements." The first New York performance, with the same cast, as Do You Turn Somersaults (46th Street 9/1/78), ran for 16 performances Comment: The play "is like a cheerful, old-fashioned print. It's no work of art, but I'll wager that it will give the majority of the theatregoers a great deal of pleasure" (Daily Mirror). "A superior example of the art of concealing artfulness ... the players are admirable" (Spectator); Times agreed on both counts, and added "a most welcome revival." "The acting is among the best in the West End" (Observer). Variety rated the production's nostalgic appeal.

76.496 And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little (P, 2a) Paul Zindel. TOWER, CANONBURY, 15/10/76. 1st perfd Mark Taper Forum, Los Angeles, 1967; 1st British perf. Cast: Stage 14/10/76, 10; TTC. Plot: Bronner, Hirschak/2, 29–30, MacNicholas, Salem, Vinson, Wilmeth. Review: Stage 4/11/76, 19. Comment: "Tower gave it a briskly realistic production by Ron Brooker, well designed by David Cannell and greatly helped by having two Americans—Maxine Howe and Ninette Mordaunt—to cast as Catherine and Anna" (Stage). The first New York production (Morosco 25/2/71) ran for 108 performances.

76.497 Antony and Cleopatra (T) William Shakespeare. Comment: Guardian commended Frank Dunlop's production for its "pace and clarity," found the set vague and unsuitable, while Delphine Seyrig was good only visually. Spectator was equally disappointed with Seyrig, and also Michael Graham Cox. Times noted the speedy production lasted well under three hours and was "a robustly efficient piece of story-telling ... The bare sense of the words is clear enough, but only in the most functional sense." Illustrated London News criticized the cast for "under-speaking Shakespeare—with, it follows, an inevitable flattening of the pictorial and rhetorical passages."

76.498 A Little Night Exposure (Revue) John Vine and Tony Smee and Martin Read. ROUND HOUSE DOWNSTAIRS 17/10/76. 2 perf. 1st perfd Queen's, Hornchurch, 4/6/76. Cast: Stage 7/10/76, 11. John Vine, Tony Smee, Martin Read. Review: Stage 4/11/76, 19. Comment: Stage praised the revue for its wide range of subject matter and for its subtlety.

76.499 Albert's Bridge (P, 1a) Tom Stoppard. KING'S HEAD 18/10/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 14/10/76, 10. Albert Martin Chamberlain; Julian Somers, Adam Kurakin, Alan

76.501 Henry's Daughter (One-woman show) Cavada Humphrey. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 18/10/76.  Cast: Stage 14/10/76, 10. Cavada Humphrey. Comment: Also performed as Elizabeth the First (76.80).

76.502 Rumpelstiltskin (Mus) Barrie Stacey. WIMBLEDON 18/10/76. 1st perfd Playhouse, Buxton, 5/76. Wizard Russell Grant; Millermaid Kay Barwick; King Crispian J. J. King.

76.503 Son of a Gun (P, 23sc) John Burrows. ICA 19/10/76. Brenda Stanton Natacha Fairbanks. Review: Times 20/10/76, 11. Comment: Sidewalk Theatre. The piece "charts the adventures of an East End girl from a mutinous nine-year-old girl to her emergence as a liberated lesbian squatter" (Times).

76.504 The Trials of Brother Jero (P, 1a) Wole Soyinka. AFRICA CENTRE 19/10/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 14/10/76, 10. Brother Jero Keith Hodiak; Christine Fox, Christopher Lethbridge-Baker, Geronimo Sehmi, Jeilolo Edwards, Lesley Hayward. Dir Mark Heath; Sc dgn, Cost dgn Penny Saunders. Plot: Bordman/4, 420, Hochman, Matlaw. Review: Times 20/10/76, 11. Comment: Centre Stage. The play had been rearranged in such a way that it had "precious little to do with Africa or Wole Soyinka" (Times).

76.505 An' Me Wi' a Bad Leg, Tae (P) Billy Connolly. THEATRE UPSTAIRS 20/10/76. 1st perfd Harbour Arts Centre, Irving, Ayrshire, 9/3/76. "Performed in broad Glaswegian. It is a family comedy with serious undertones, emphasised by Stuart Mungall's production, and takes place in a ramshackle flat during one afternoon, when the younger son of the family comes home on his first Army leave" (Stage). Times said the piece possessed "honesty and wit," with "exemplary performances" by David Sands, Alex Norton and Margot Gillies.

76.506 Il campiello (C, 2a) Carlo Goldoni (adpt Susanna Graham-Jones and Bill Bryden of Goldoni's play, 1756) and Michael Nyman (mus). OLIVIER 20/10/76. 1st this adpt. Comment: National Theatre. Press night was 25/10/76. "Over 130 excellent £1 seats on sale day of perf from 8:30am" (advt). "A moderately amusing antique piece" (Variety). "Opens promisingly enough with musicians, clowns and cast cluttering onto the stage via the aisles: but this air of genial gallimaufry quickly evaporates" (Irish Times). Gay News praised the production and noted the audience was "having a good time." A quiet absorbing piece, acted simply (Illustrated London News). Times described the production as a "lethal" tribute to Italian comedy.

Comment: Guardian described the play as "a lament for the passing of a bookish neo-Edwardian English liberalism and ... an exposure of [its] personal cruelty." Variety saw it as yet another example of "the decline and fall of the family as an institution." Observer noted affinities with John Osborne and said "the middle-class literati ... are the target aimed for." Spectator criticized the play's "rather casual construction" but found it thought provoking. Times thought the "pathetic moments" were better than the jokes, and thought this "menopausal romp offers few insights."

76.508 Folks Bawdy (C) Eric Paice (adpt of three comedies by Hans Sachs). KING'S COLLEGE 20/10/76, 22/10/76. 1st London perf. Comment: Guild Company.

Reviews: Guardian 23/10/76, 8 Tribune 12/11/76, 6-7. Comment: Joint Stock. Tribune praised the revival and said Conway Hall was "the perfect open-space for simulating open space. Audience mixed with actors just as they would at Marble Arch."

76.511 A Man for All Seasons (Hist D, 2a) Robert Bolt. YOUNG VIC 21/10/76. Cast: WWT/17. The Common Man Michael Graham Cox; Sir Thomas More Alfred Lych; Richard Rich Ian Oliver; Duke of Norfolk Tony Osoba; Lady Alice More Judy Wilson; Lady Margaret More Natasha Pyne; Cardinal Wolsey Alan Foss; Thomas Cromwell Richard Howard; Signor Chapuys Ian Taylor; William Roper Simon Chandler; King Henry VIII Chris Tranchell; Woman Sally Anne Newton; Thomas Cranmer Melville Jones. Dir Stewart Trotter; Dgn Alix Stone. Plot: Best/61, 124, Fletcher, French/2, Griffiths, Hischak, Hochman, Law, Loney, Matlaw, Patterson, Salem, Shipley, Vinson, Weintraub. Review: Stage 4/11/76, 13. Comment: A "sound revival" with good performances from Alfred Lynch, Michael Graham Cox, Anthony May, and Ian Gelder (Stage).

Reviews: Observer 31/10/76, 28; Stage 4/11/76, 13; Times 26/10/76, 12. Comment: This clumsily written “opaque play” was “about people genuinely in search of tranquility and indifferent to material possessions” (Times).

76.514 Grandma Faust (P, 1a) Edward Bond. ALMOST FREE 25/10/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 21/10/76, 17. Uncle Sam Chris Malcolm; Grandma Faust Henry Woolf; Paul Don Warrington; Geraldine James, Glen Walford. Dir Jack Emery; Dgn Norman Coates. Plot: Walford. Reviews: Guardian 28/10/76, 10; Stage 4/11/76, 13; Times 28/10/76, 11. Comment: Ambiance Theatre. Performed under the collective title A-A-America! (see also The Swing 76.548). “Suffers from classic, white liberal naivety” (Guardian). Times said Bond’s play was heavy-handed and the serious intent was emphasized too much.

A “short, witty and unusually well-written” play about “American attitudes to violence as exemplified by characters from Western myth” (Guardian).

76.519 Coming of Age (P, 2a) Wilfred Harrison. ST. JAMES’S c. 26/10/76. Auctioneer, John Livesey Antony Carrick. Dir John Fernald. Review: Times 28/10/76, 11. Comment: Bolton Octagon Company. The play was a mixture of the life and thought of Dietrich Bonhoeffer and ideas about using churches for drama therapy, among other issues (Times). Possibly also performed at St. Michael’s, Chester Square, SW1 (see Stage 21/10/76, 18).

76.520 My Fat Friend (C, 2a) Charles Laurence. TOWER, CANONBURY, 29/10/76. Cast: Stage 28/10/76, 29; TTC. Plot: Hischak, Hischak/2, 72.

Comment: MPS 649. English Stage Company. This "parochial two-character play about a has-been calypso star seems too sketchy and abrupt to satisfy general audiences" (Variety). The piece lacked a plot (Illustrated London News). Tribune thought the writing was sufficiently good enough to convey Matura's symbolic intentions. Spectator enjoyed the first act but did not find the play's climax credible; Times shared the same experience. The first New York production was at the Brooklyn Academy of Music 18/10/77.

76.532 The Artful Widow (C, 3a) Carlo Goldoni (adpt Richard Sparks; trans Frederick H. Davies of La vedova scaltra, 1748). GREENWICH 4/11/76. Cast: Stage 21/10/76, 1; *WWT/17. Comment: Spectator was unimpressed by this updated, modern-dress version of the play about a widow choosing one of four suitors; "tired parodies abound." "Theatrical gagland," mostly dross, with a few good bits (Guardian). "There is not much left of Goldoni's original, and little of Mr. Sparks's rewrite is original on its own" (Times); Illustrated London News concurred. The main virtue of the production was John Kane's performance (Observer).

76.533 Force of Habit (CD, 3sc) Thomas Bernhard (trans Neville Plaice and Stephen Plaice of Die Macht der Gewohnheit, 1974). LYTTTELTON 4/11/76. 12 perf. 1st Comment: MPS 652. National Theatre. Press night was 9/11/74. Variety declared Bernhard was "scarcely less obscure and bleak" than Samuel Beckett. Observer said "surface entertainment" was missing, and philosophical content was meagre. "This lamentable production" was "a waste of talent, and everybody's time, and at what expense?" (Times). "Two hours of refined, calculated boredom. People who did not bother to return after the interval were wise" (Daily Mirror). The production remained in repertory until 12/1/77.

76.534 Moths Among the Ermine (C) Glyn Partos and James Anderson. LAMB AND FLAG 4/11/76. 1st perf? Cast: Stage 4/11/76, 14. Stephen Parkins, Brigid Mackay, Keith Norrish, Iris Rougier, Peter Churchill, Irving Lycett. Dir Winifred Robi. Comment: LAMP.

76.535 The Many Loves of Madame Desiree (P) Paddy Fletcher. JACKSONS LANE 5/11/76. Comment: The first performance by the new Incubus Theatre Company.

76.536 Murder in Memoriam (P) Allan Berrie. THREE HORSESHOES 6/11/76.* Evie Evie Garratt; Wally Malcolm Hayes. Dir Nigel Bellairs. Review: Stage 18/11/76, 9. Comment: Pentameters. Stage praised this two-hander involving a dominant dead mother who "has left a spinster son and daughter to bicker, fantasise and commemorate her in ritual dinners and leaving untouched the drab room in which she spent most of her wheel-chaired life."

76.537 Ripped Dreams (P) Timothy Webster. SQUARE ONE 7/11/76. 1st perf? 1 perf. Cast: Stage 4/11/76, 14. Kathy Arnold, R. J. Bell. Comment: International Nose Troop.

"About migrant workers who, in search of gold at the foot of the rainbow, found only a dehumanizing factory routine. Economical, well-intentioned but glum" (Illustrated London News). Guardian commended the play for presenting a truthful picture of a migrant worker in a non-preachy manner. Observer offered a diametrically opposed viewpoint. "A remarkable adaptation of a remarkable book" (Times).

76.540 Turtle Island (Black C, 1a) Richard Huggett. NAG'S HEAD (2) 8/11/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 4/11/76, 14. Mr. Trumpington Richard Huggett; Barry McGinn, Mollie Guilfoyle. Dir Royce Mills. Review: Stage 18/11/76, 9. Comment: A publisher receives an interesting offer of how to get rid of his wife without murdering her by sending her to Turtle Island; however, eventually all is not as it seems.

76.541 The Window Game (C of sexual manners) John Halkin. KING'S HEAD 8/11/76 (Ln). Cast: Stage 4/11/76, 14. Mary Clare, Sean Barrett, Louisa Martin. Dir John Link. Review: Times 15/11/76, 12. "A triangular sex comedy with a neat solution" (Times).

76.542 A Bit in Between (P, 1a) Ian Taylor. SOHO POLY 9/11/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 4/11/76, 14. Cindy Annie Hayes; Alan Richard Albrecht; Larry Ken Robertson. Dir Sue Dunderdale. Reviews: Stage 18/11/76, 9; Times 10/11/76, 12. Comment: Times thought this triangle piece was meant to be satiric but the production dragged it down.

76.543a Calling for Help (P) Peter Handke. LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/11/76 (Ln); trfd to ICA c. 22/11/76 (Ln). Review: Stage 25/11/76, 17. Comment: Birmingham Arts Lab and Sour Grapes. "A purely verbal piece, with four female characters taking it in turn to utter phrases, after which one of three males responds with a differently inflected 'No.'" (Stage).

76.543b Self-Accusation (P) Peter Handke (anon trans of Selbstbeichtigung, 1966). LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/11/76 (Ln); trfd to ICA c. 22/11/76 (Ln). Plot: Hochman. Review: Stage 25/11/76, 17. Comment: Birmingham Arts Lab and Sour Grapes. "Christine Peacock and Nick Jeune stood at microphones, using them like public confessionals as they took turns to voice words and phrases that, virtually meaningless at first, gradually acquired importance as a kind of declaration of life and the complications of living" (Stage).

76.544 Kaspar (D, 1a) Peter Handke (anon trans of Handke's play, 1968). LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 9/11/76. Plot: Hischak/2, 56, Hochman, Patterson. Comment: Birmingham Arts Lab and Sour Grapes.

Comment: A sketchy, "bluntly affectionate," and "corny" salute to the two comics (Variety). Times viewed the production much more positively. Despite several virtues, the show fell flat, and the audience was "distinctly frosty" (Spectator). Illustrated London News noted the impossibility of recreating comic genius.

76.547 The Student Prince (Mus, 2a) Dorothy Donnelly (bk, lyr) and Sigmund Romberg (mus). WIMBLEDON 15/11/76. John Hanson, Pamela Field, Brian Kemp, Olwen Hughes, Virginia Courtney, Nicola Kimber, Patrick MacCarthy, David Eynon, Eddie Molloy, John Howard, Jonathan Courage, Bruce Green, Eric Leroy, Paul Farla. Dir John Hanson. 76.548 The Swing (P, 1a) Edward Bond. ALMOST FREE 15/11/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 21/10/76, 17. Kevin Elyot, Illona Linthwaite, Kenneth Ryan, Liz Smith, Roddie

Smith, William Stuart, Harry Towb, Ron Travis, Garry Whelan, Henry Woolf, Don Warrington. Dir Jack Emery; Dgn Norman Coates. Plot: Walford. Reviews: Guardian 26/11/76, 12; Times 25/11/76, 15; Tribune 10/12/76, 6-7. Comment: Ambiance Theatre. Performed under the collective title A-A-America! (see also Grandma Faust 76.514). The play was concerned with "racial intolerance, bigotry and economical thuggery" in the American Deep South (Guardian). This and some other recent work "suggest that more than taking himself seriously [Bond] is taking himself oracularly" (Times).

76.549 Tartuffe (C, 5a) Molière. Critic Catherine Itzin questioned why her newspaper had not received tickets to review this piece (Tribune 10/12/76, 7). Roger Planchon's "breathtaking" production treated the play "as a cosmic tragi-comedy" (Guardian). Observer reported the production ran for three-and-a-half hours, was "riddled with pauses," and possessed "almost an infinity." Times felt the performances were overpowered by the monumental setting.

76.550 D. H. L. (P) Ronald Draper and Richard Hoggart. THREE HORSESHOES 18/11/76. 1st perf? Comment: A charity preview in aid of the National Playing Fields Association was given on 16/11/76. Daily Mirror noted the play "has been running non-stop in some country or other for the past fifty-one years. The old vehicle certainly creaks a bit in the first act. But once it gets up a head of steam it carries its audience along on a journey of thrills and much laughter." "This twenties thriller is pitilessly, not to say, cravenly, gayed ... [the audience is] dared not to laugh" (Observer). Guardian thought Bill Hays lacked the courage "to guy the piece fully until its Monty Pythonesque climax." Treated as a "camp comedy ... and played to the hilt" (Variety). The audience applauded the set and "Ridley's melodrama is high hokum played at full tilt" (Times).

76.552 Stringgames (One-woman P) Martin Duncan. ROCK GARDEN 18/11/76 (Ln). 1st perf? Cast: Stage 18/11/76, 7. Darlene Johnson.

Reviews: Spectator 4/12/76, 32–33; Stage 2/12/76, 13; Times 23/11/76, 11. Comment: Triple Action. Also known as Kamp. Spectator said this eighty-minute, non-verbal "piece had created an unforgettable impression of the brutality and inhumanity of [prison] camp life." For Times the production lacked "the vital aspect of communication which language provides."

76.554 Crumbs between the Sheets (P) John Wicksteed. KING'S HEAD 22/11/76 (Ln).* Cast: Stage 18/11/76, 7. Vivienne McKee, Archie Tew. Dir Jerry Boyd.

Reviews: Irish Times 12/11/76, 8; Stage 6/1/77, 15.

Comment: The author, Jeremiah Michael O'Neill, was the landlord of the Duke of Wellington and creator of Sugawm Theatre. "An extremely interesting piece of observation" concerning several events in a pub during twenty-four hours (Stage).

76.556 The Human Voice (Monol) Jean Cocteau (anon trans of La voix humaine, 1930). LITTLE THEATRE CLUB 22/11/76 (Ln). Jennifer Lipman Plot: Hochman, Patterson. Review: Stage 9/12/76, 19. Comment: Stage said Jennifer Lipman was not up to the task of creating both sides of the telephone conversation.

Comment: American Repertory Company. The play ran over three hours. Banal material, naive characters (Spectator). Gay News found the piece repetitious. Guardian (1/12) was charitable in its assessment of the first half of the play. The New York production ran for 37 performances.
